HUNT TWO FOR FARO DEATH

ALL RAILROADS CUT RATES FOR CHICAGO JUBILEE

Sponsors Swamped by Offers of Aid.

CHICAGO JUBILEE.

The Chicago Jubilee committee of the Chicago Association of Commerce, No. One La Salle street, telephone Franklin 7700, will supply all information to those planning to participate in the Chicago Jubilee, May 11.

Reduced fares to Chicago from all points within a radius of 200 miles will be effective on all the railroads entering Chicago during the celebration of the Chicago Jubilee, which will open on May 11.

The reduced rates, designed to attract thousands of visitors from all the territory around Chicago, were assured yesterday when the eastern and southern railroads affiliated with the central passenger association followed the action of the western lines in authorizing excursion schedules during the Jubilee celebration.

Fare and a Half Rate.

The eastern and southern lines, including all the principal trunk roads, announced that beginning May 9 they would inaugurate fare and a half round trip rates from all points within the 200 miles radius, continuing up to and including May 16, with a return limit good until May 18.

The western lines previously had announced similar provisions for the Chicago Jubilee, except that the western lines established a fare and one-third rate. Different operating conditions accounted for the slight inequality in rates, it was explained.

By subsequent action the western association, through its secretary, George J. Maguire, announced extension of its excursion return limit to May 23. This was ordered to conform to the expansion of the Jubilee which is to be prolonged to May 20 so as to include the military air show on the lake front. Extension of the return limit on the eastern and and southern roads will be considered in a few days, according to Clarence A. Fox, chairman of the central association.

Offers Swamp Committees.

Meanwhile preparations for the Jubilee moved forward so rapidly that the various committees were swamped with offers of aid and appeals for a part in the varied program of Jubilee activities.

A committee consisting of Leslie J. Sorenson, city traffic engineer; John R. O'Donnell, representing the surface lines; Benjamin Weintraub of the Chicago Motor Coach company; Thomas Hogan of the Yellow Cab company, and Lieut. Michael Hayes, representing Acting Police Commissioner John H. Alcock, met yesterday to undertake the routing of the Jubilee parade which is to inaugurate the celebration Monday night, May 11.

Mayor Cermak make known that he is planning an official proclamation for the Chicago Jubilee, which he will announce early next week.

County Board to Aid.

The board of Cook county commissioners announced yesterday that at its meeting on Tuesday it would adopt a resolution extending the board's full coöperation in the Chicago Jubilee and urging all the country towns to participate in the celebration. Emmett Whealan, president of the board, is expected to name a committee to join with the committee to be chosen by Mayor Cermak to work with the association of commerce in supporting the Jubilee.

Fred J. Ashley, chairman of the coördinating committee of the Jubilee, announced yesterday that it has become necessary to start a process of elimination of floats in the parade, so numerous have been the entries. He said that all floats that are merely advertising stunts will not be allowed in the parade, which will be confined to floats depicting some phase of Chicago's historical, cultural, economical, or civic development. No float will be permitted in the parade unless it has been approved by the parade committee.

Bring Communities Together.

The coördinating committee has made much progress in uniting the various communities for participation in the celebration and expects that every section of Chicago will be represented in the festivities.

Col. Robert Isham Randolph, president of the Association of Commerce, reported yesterday that, although plans for the Jubilee have been under way for only a week, he was amazed at the response that had been given and at the great progress that had been made toward making the Jubilee

Wife of Victim of Gunman Talks.

South Bend, Ind., April 25.—[Special.]—The Blacklidge-Litsinger faro game swindle, which until today was just another unsolved confidence game nearing oblivion as a police case, seemed tonight to be on a fair way towards solution, with a local murder providing the impetus.

South Bend police determined this afternoon that George L. Perry, a mysteriously affluent individual slain here last night, was in fact the card sharp known in Chicago as "Big George" Parker, who arranged the fake faro game which cost Mrs. Myrtle Tanner Blacklidge her post as federal collector of internal revenue and depleted by $50,000 the bank roll of her political ally, Edward R. Litsinger, millionaire member of the Cook county board of review.

Widow Confirms Identity.

Local police established the slain man's connection with the faro swindle by rigorous questioning of his comely wife, Mrs. Ruth Canniff Perry who saw him shot, and the young woman's father, John Canniff, former Chicago carnival promoter, in whose back yard he was ambushed and killed. Ill at her home in Chicago, Mrs. Blacklidge clinched the conclusion of the police when she identified Perry's photograph as that of the man she knew as Parker.

Following a five hour interrogation of Canniff and Mrs. Perry, Capt. Horace M. Hamilton, head of the South Bend detective bureau, started a search for two Chicago confidence men, Roscoe Reynolds and Roy Burgess. In Capt. Hamilton's opinion, incidents in Perry's recent life, as related by his wife and father-in-law, strongly indicate that Reynolds and Burgess who were Perry's reputed accomplices in the swindle were double crossed by Perry in dividing the $50,000 loot and that they killed him because of his cupidity.

Hope for Chicago Police Aid.

In the hunt for the suspected killers, Capt. Hamilton indicated, the South Bend police are depending strongly on the facilities of the Chicago detective bureau. The captain said that, although informed that the Chicago bureau of identification possessed neither photographs nor finger prints of Reynolds and Burgess, he hoped that descriptions of the pair given by Mrs. Blacklidge would provide him sufficient material for a "wanted for murder" bulletin, to be mailed to police and sheriffs throughout the United States.

Advised this noon that Pat Roche, ace of Chicago detectives, was coming here by plane to take a hand in the case, Capt. Hamilton did not conceal his disappointment when informed that Roche was unable to make the trip, nor was any representative of the Chicago police department coming in his stead.

Most Promising Witness.

The captain had heard reports, he said, that the Chicago police, while instigating a vigorous investigation of the faro swindle at the outset, had later relaxed their efforts, due to the inability of State's Attorney Swanson and the Springfield prosecutor to decide under whose jurisdiction the case should come. He was confident, however, that with Reynolds and Burgess now suspected of murder the chase would be resumed with new vigor.

With Mrs. Perry insisting that darkness concealed the features of the marksman who killed her husband, the most promising witness in the murder appeared to be Dr. C. C. Bon Durant, next door neighbor of Canniff, on the arbored lawn of whose home the murder was staged.

Dr. Bon Durant presented himself at police headquarters this morning with the story that last Thursday evening, about 26 hours before the killing, a gruff spoken man of uncertain age had called at his office and opened negotiations for renting the physician's garage, adjoining the Canniff garage, on the threshold of which Perry was shot. Learning the doctor's garage was a two story converted stable with windows on the upper floor only, the stranger quibbled a few minutes about the rent, promising to return the next day.

A Tough Looking Customer.

The stranger did not fulfill his promise and the police conjecture that, deciding the windowless first floor was not adapted to his purpose, he and his accomplices if any, decided to take

ROBBER FAINTS DURING HOLDUP; TAKEN BY POLICE

Joseph Sapiro was alone yesterday in his clothing store at 118 Washington street, Waukegan, when a poorly dressed youth entered and asked to be shown a pair of socks. When Sapiro turned to go behind a counter, the youth leaped on him, threw him to the floor, announced that he was a robber and demanded money.

Sapiro gave him $12. But when the bandit started away he dropped the currency on the floor. As he was striving to open the door and escape he fainted.

He was still unconscious when Lieut. Edward Mihic arrived to arrest him. At the police station he said that he was Tex Walters, 19 years old, 412 South State street, and that he fainted because he had not had a meal since Wednesday.

PAUL SHOUP, RAIL PRESIDENT, RESTS IN HOSPITAL HERE

Paul Shoup, president of the Southern Pacific railroad, is in the Passavant hospital here under treatment. According to his secretary, Mr. Shoup recently suffered an attack of influenza, but was recovering when he started a journey earlier in the week from his home in San Francisco to New York. The trip exhausted him, it was said, and he decided to stop in the hospital a few days. He was taken there on Friday. The present plan is for the Southern Pacific head to continue to the Atlantic seaboard in a few days.

Police Jurors Ask Alcock's Bank Account

The bank account of Acting Commissioner Alcock is asked for along with those of 40 other police officials in a subpoena duces tecum being prepared yesterday by Assistant State's Attorneys Charles J. Mueller and Charles E. Lounsbury, who are acting on the orders of the special grand jury investigating alleged corruption in the police department.

The subpoena, which will contain the names of all the immediate subordinates of the acting commissioner and those of the captains not mentioned in the first subpoena, is to be presented to Chief Justice McGoorty of the Criminal court tomorrow morning.

Other Officials Named.

Acting First Deputy James A. Scanlan, Chief of Detectives John Norton, and his assistant, Lawrence Rafferty, all appointees of Alcock, are others whose bank accounts the jurors will scrutinize.

The subpoena is directed against all the banks in the city and commands them to search their records for bank accounts of the police officials and to submit the records to the grand jury.

"We are playing no favorites in this investigation of bank accounts," said Prosecutor Mueller. "No police official nor any member in the department whom we have reason to believe has a bank account larger than is warranted by his salary will escape investigation."

Continue Canvass Tomorrow.

It was indicated by the prosecutors that the jury will spend tomorrow continuing the canvass of the accounts of seventeen captains, which were obtained last week. The jury issued a statement on Friday saying that the accounts of Capts. Daniel A. Lynch, James J. Fleming, Thomas Kilroy, and Thomas C. Wolfe have been found to be consistent with their salaries. If other accounts are so found they, too, will be announced, it was said.

The officials whose accounts seem abnormal, as the jurors call it, will be called in to tell under oath how they accumulated their wealth. If they fail to convince the jury, then the names and figures of the accounts will be made public, it was said.

The captains will not be called in, however, until after every account is in the hands of the jurors.

Ben Turpin Operated On; Condition Satisfactory

Hollywood, Calif., April 25.—[Special.]—Ben Turpin, screen comedian, underwent a major abdominal operation for an intestinal ailment at Hollywood hospital today and his condition tonight was reported as satisfactory by Dr. Carl E. Conn. About three years ago Turpin was operated upon for a similar condition.

DAYLIGHT TIME IN EFFECT; CITY LOSES ONE HOUR

Two a. m. officially became 3 a. m. in Chicago today with the adoption of daylight saving time. Compilations show that 482 other cities and towns in the United States and Canada also ordered a similar change in time keeping methods for the summer months.

The net effect of the change in clock time is to take one hour of daylight from the morning and to add one hour in the evening. Church services in the city and most of the suburbs are scheduled on the new time, which may result in churchgoers losing sixty minutes of sleep. The loss will not be made up until Sept. 27, when central standard time is again adopted locally.

Strictly local transportation agencies, including the surface and elevated lines, yesterday notified their employés to come to work an hour earlier today. Several of the suburban lines also have adopted the new time, and the others, while keeping central standard time, have advanced time of train departures and arrivals one hour.

FOUR MARRIAGES END IN DIVORCE; HE WANTS FIFTH

St. Louis, Mo., April 25.—(AP)—The divorce court again is called upon to terminate a marriage, the fifth, of Christian Peper Bell, 38 year old grandson and heir of the late Christian Peper, tobacco magnate.

Bell today filed suit for divorce from Mrs. Mabel Boyer Bell, 24, to whom he was married Aug. 8, 1929, in Anniston, Ala., charging desertion. Both he and his wife were captains in the Volunteers of America, an evangelical organization, at the time of their marriage.

Bell was married the first time in 1912. His wife divorced him in 1918, and five days later he married again. He obtained a divorce from his second wife in 1920 and six months later entered his third marriage. Again there was a divorce, with Bell being married for the fourth time in 1924. A decree issued Aug. 9, 1928, at Reno, Nev., ended this marriage.

LOSES TO TRAIN, BUT IS FASTER THAN MR. STORK

West Cumberland, W. Va., April 25.—[Special.]—Virgil Waters, 25, ran two races here today. He lost to a freight train, but proved a better sprinter than the stork.

Walters was speeding to New Cumberland for a doctor. He tried to make a crossing ahead of a freight train, but failed. His automobile was demolished, but he was hurled clear of the wreckage and continued on foot.

He was scratched and bruised and his clothing torn, but he ran on half a mile to the office of Dr. T. E. Cato and together they speeded to the Walters home.

A baby girl was born to Mrs. Walters two hours later.

Pittsburgh, Pa., April 25.—(AP)—The only daughter of the late Lillian Russell, noted comic opera beauty, today obtained in Orphans court an order for a reaccounting in the estate of her mother and a second order withholding distribution of the estate of her step-father, Alexander P. Moore, former ambassador to Spain and Peru.

Judge Thomas P. Trimble ruled that it appeared from testimony that Moore, co-executor with the Union Trust company in the estate of Miss Russell, whom he married in 1912, "fraudulently acquired assets of his wife's estate while acting as executor thereof, and has failed to account therefor or to make restitution thereof by his will or otherwise."

Asks Half of Moore's Estate.

Miss Russell's daughter, Mrs. Dorothy Russell Calvit, went into court with a claim for half of Moore's $600,000 estate after he left her only $1,000 in his will. She alleged that in a prenuptial agreement with her mother he promised to leave half of his estate to her, the daughter.

Judge Trimble did not rule on the validity of the alleged agreement, but ordered distribution of the Moore estate suspended until there has been a final accounting in the estate of Miss Russell, or until further order of the court, "whereupon the court will consider the claim of Dorothy Russell Calvit for the one-half of this estate should be allowed."

Moore's will was filed for probate here last year. In it he bequeathed $100,000 to Queen Victoria of Spain to be used for charitable purposes and $25,000 to the widow of Enrico Caruso.

At the hearing of Mrs. Calvit's claim, it was brought out that Miss Russell had specified in her will that sufficient of the principal of her estate be invested profitably so that the income "shall amount without fail to $50 per week" to be paid to her daughter during her lifetime. Moore filed a first and final accounting whereby $38,726.39 was provided for Mrs. Calvit.

"Said sum is not only insufficient to comply with the terms of said will, but has since been reduced in value to $34,925," Judge Trimble said, "and there is nothing on record to show that the fund so distributed has ever been increased or that the said Dorothy Russell Calvit will have any assurance in the future that she will receive more than the income of said trust fund."

Makes Fraud Charges.

Mrs. Calvit charged Moore did not account for many personal possessions of her mother after Miss Russell died in 1922, and that he defrauded the estate in disposing of others. Among jewels the actress owned was a pearl necklace. Evidence was introduced to show a jeweler had appraised its value for Moore at $8,500.

Judge Trimble said that, according to the testimony, it appeared Moore "surreptitiously acquired the said necklace from the said Union Trust company and himself as executors by paying therefor to his co-executor the sum of $1,000 indirectly through his agent, appointed by him to effect his fraudulent purpose."

Cats Must Wear Bells to Protect Park Birds

Orange, N. J., April 25.—[Special.]—Beginning Monday, all the cats in Llewellyn Park, fashionable residential section of West Orange, will be compelled to wear bells around their necks for the protection of birds. The women of the community met and decided that something must be done about the dwindling bird population. The bell ordinance was adopted and unless the cats work out some method of silencing them while hunting birds the prey will be forewarned by the tinkling of the bells.

CERMAK FINDS CABINET PICKING IS A SLOW TASK

Business Men Turn Down Job Offers.

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

Mayor Cermak is having difficulties in getting a cabinet which he deems worthy of his 190,000 majority at the April 7 election. The civic leaders and the reputable business men worked diligently for Mr. Cermak in the campaign, but those approached since then are reticent about assuming the responsibilities and worries of an appointive position in the mayor's cabinet, it was learned yesterday.

It is reported that one prominent man whom the mayor expected to accept a city hall job promptly has refused it. Two others approached indirectly are said to have sent back word that the depression and the necessity of attention to their own business made it impossible for them to consider taking on more cares.

Important Jobs Still Vacant.

The result is that Mayor Cermak has not been able to fill important posts, the occupants of which he desires to select before picking out appointees for the minor positions. He said yesterday that he may not have any appointments to submit to the city council when it meets for his inauguration tomorrow evening.

A possible exception is the recommendation that M. S. Szymczak, clerk of the Superior court, be made city controller. If this appointment is made, the mayor at the same time probably will announce the appointment of an advisory committee of three bankers to aid the city controller.

Wants an Advisory Board.

Mr. Szymczak is said to have requested such an advisory board if he is made the fiscal agent of the city. Several Polish organizations apparently expect this announcement will be made at the inaugural ceremonies, because they have requested 55 seats at the inauguration, according to the clerk in charge of the admission tickets.

Some reports named Edward N. Hurley, former chairman of the United States shipping board, as a possible selection for head of the city civil service commission, but Mayor Cermak said he had no announcement to make as to this.

Faces Tax Problem.

Despite the early failure to get several prominent citizens into the municipal service, Mayor Cermak's greatest concern is about the city's expenditures and the part these play in the community's tax bill.

He conferred at length yesterday with Commissioner of Public Works A. A. Sprague, Corporation Counsel Francis X. Busch, Prof. Charles E. Merriam, Prof. Ernest Freund, and others in regard to the financial commission which the mayor deems advisable.

It was the consensus of the conferees that the original plan be modified. The new plan is as follows:

Mayor Cermak will appoint for city work the commission on public expenditures which he selected three years ago for the county government. Col. Sprague was head of that commission, but retired when he was appointed commissioner of public works. Sewell Avery has been acting as chairman since, and will be asked to head the city commission.

To Name Advisory Group.

From this general commission the mayor will appoint his own advisory committee. All of the men he had in mind to serve on his original commission are members of the county's advisory group.

For the county this commission has recommended consolidation of the local governments, the abolition of many jobs, the curtailment of waste and the adoption of other plans to promote economy. Some of these recommendations involve changes in the state constitution, still others amendments to state laws, but Mr. Cermak said yesterday, "there are others which can be inaugurated by action of the city itself."

"In my message to the city council," he went on, "I shall suggest some of these. Without relating the trend of my recommendations in advance, I think there are some consolidations of departments which can be made at once. Some of the overlapping services can be discontinued."

Seeks to Cut Expenses.

It necessarily follows that if some of the city departments are consolidated, it will be unnecessary to appoint heads for the departments abolished. In preëlection and in his post election statements Mayor Cermak has indicated a serious desire to cut city expenses and later reduce taxes.

This desire is not highly pleasing to some Democratic committeemen. One of them, after asking several questions to ascertain what the mayor's intentions were concerning appointments, commented: "I'm keeping my spectacles clean so that I can see through the dust raised by the new broom."

It can be said with certainty that Mayor Cermak's inaugural message will discuss city expenses and resultant taxes. He will call attention to the funds available from this year's appropriations with which to supply the municipal services. He will mention specific instances where the salaries paid are unfair.

Wage Discrimination Charged.

One adviser has told him that one city hall stenographer gets more pay than the head of a certain bureau. If that is verified and details obtained, the mayor probably will refer to it in his speech. Considerable data have already been prepared to indicate that the city and county school board pay different wages for virtually the same work.

Nearly all of the mayor's advisers have urged him to devote a sizeable part of his message to the World's Fair of 1933 and to invite the millions who are expected to hear the radio broadcast of his message to visit that exposition. Several pages on this subject have been written, but they probably will be condensed. The mayor is also expected to commend the Chicago Jubilee.

Pay Roll Paring Promised.

One of the personal pledges of Mr. Cermak is that he will be "a working mayor," as the text is now written. It says that he intends to devote as much energy and effort to city affairs as he expects of all of the city employés. He will promise to weed out the incompetent and idle city employés.

In view of his experience to date in getting the help of outsiders, the mayor was inclined yesterday, according to his advisers, to make a strong plea for coöperation on the part of all citizens and especially those with ability and with sufficient time to give a helping hand to the municipality.

Mayor Cermak believes that much of the taxpayers' money could be saved if real competitive bidding could be obtained on all city contracts. He wants the advice of business leaders on how to get such competition on public work, and may refer to this in his message. Two paragraphs on that subject have been dictated and are ready to be put into the text.

If the message is of the character which his friends represent it to be it will be an unusual inaugural statement for a Chicago mayor in recent years. The advisers assert that it must be in substance what has been written if the mayor is to make the right start in curbing expenses.

ANNOUNCES PROGRAM FOR INAUGURATION OF CERMAK TOMORROW

Complete plans for the inauguration of Mayor Cermak to be held in the city council chambers tomorrow evening were announced yesterday by Ald. Jacob M. Arvey [24th], chairman of the committee on arrangements. The main events of the program will be:

8 to 9:30 p. m.—Invocation; submission of report of the committee on committees on council reorganization; ward business.

9:30 to 10:15 p. m.—Selection of a member of the council to act as chairman pro tem; presentation of gavel to Mayor Cermak by County Clerk Robert Sweitzer; entrance of former Mayors Edward F. Dunne and Carter H. Harrison.

10:15 to 10:45 p. m.—Fifteen minute address by United States Senator J. Hamilton Lewis; inaugural message by Mayor Cermak. This part of the program will be broadcast on a nationwide hookup.

Admission to the council chambers will be by ticket only. Provision will be made, however, to accommodate hundreds of persons in the first floor corridors of the city hall where they can hear the ceremony through amplifiers. The Senn High school band will entertain before the ceremonies in the council chambers begin.

SCHOOL BOARD FIGHTS BILL TO ALLOCATE FUNDS

Attacks His Power, Is View of Myers.

In a hearing yesterday before members of the state senate committee on education on a senate bill which would guarantee a minimum of 75 per cent of the educational fund for the payment of teachers' salaries President Lewis E. Myers and other members of the board of education insisted that their discretionary powers are being attacked.

Only two members of the senate committee, Guy Smith of Pana and Charles Thompson of Harrisburg, were present. In addressing them Mr. Myers said, "I object vigorously to a discussion or arrangement between any two persons concerning the manner in which this administration makes use of the funds under its control."

Hemingway Voices Objections.

James A. Hemingway, chairman of the board's finance committee, also protested against the enactment of any bill which would more definitely allocate the school funds. "Are we such soft heads?" he asked. "Do we need guardians? I resent, and I think every member of this board should resent, any efforts on the part of teachers to curb its powers."

In support of the bill Mrs. W. S. Hefferan, lone Democratic trustee who has been notified by Mayor Cermak of her reappointment to the board when her present term expires, called the bill "a just protective measure for the teachers." "This bill would only stipulate that the present proportion of the educational fund be maintained instead of decreased," she said. "This fund has been used more and more as a soft spot for political friends of those in power.

Wants Powers Curbed.

"Such a bill would guarantee to the taxpayers what they chiefly desire, enough competent teachers, properly paid, to instruct the children. Perhaps it would not be such a bad thing for some of the powers of this board to be curtailed. My experience on this board has not shown me that it is consistently and genuinely devoted to the cause of frugality."

James J. Spain, president of the school engineers' union, spoke against the bill, asserting that the bill gives a guarantee of a minimum expenditure only in behalf of the teachers and so discriminates unfairly in their favor. He contended that many educational expenses, other than those of a strictly instructional nature, must be paid out of the 25 per cent that remains. William McFetridge, representative of the school janitors, called the bill an example of "class legislation." Before adjournment, Senator Thompson announced that the hearing, which is to include consideration of other bills, will be continued next Friday.

HELD TO JURY AS MURDERER.

Pictures Lincoln Park as It Will Appear for 1933 Fair

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.

Lincoln park's contribution to the Chicago of 1933—the World's Fair year—will be an unbroken chain of forest land, lagoons, harbors, golf links, and bathing beaches, extending as far north as Foster avenue, with the new outer drive winding over its eastern crest.

WARREN WRIGHT.

The lake reclamation project on the north side, which has already added 324 acres to the park area, will be pushed still further in future years, and will reach Evanston much sooner than has been anticipated. That the drive and parkway from Montrose avenue to Foster avenue will be completed by the World's Fair year is the promise of the Lincoln park commissioners. The lake front has been filled in already and riparian rights around Wilson avenue have been settled.

To Be Completed in 2 Years.

The $4,000,000 construction program of the north side park system will be completed within two years. The outer drive, the farthest east street, will provide a quick access to the loop. It will be connected with the south side system by a magnificent link bridge, built to permit the development of a mezzanine level for commercial traffic. This will be for use when the district east of Michigan avenue is developed north and south of the river.

It was only a few months ago that motorists, approaching the northern extremity of the park, saw acres of rubbish and dirt rolling back the inland sea. With this spring has come a transformation, a line of forest to the east, a jungle and bird sanctuary, a new yacht harbor, a new field house, miles of green golf links, trees and flowers and children playing there.

At the eastern edge, as a protection against storms, a line of great jagged rocks shows through the trees. Fifteen hundred carloads of these rocks have been strung along the new waterfront. The work has gone on despite many difficulties, such as storm and quicksand.

Adopts Business Methods.

Warren Wright is president of the Lincoln park board. He is one of Chicago's wealthiest men, who made his way from office boy to the presidency of the Calumet Baking Powder company. Although he is still a director in several corporations and banks, he is giving a great deal of time to the affairs of the Lincoln park board, to which he was appointed in 1930. It is his aim, he says, to run the park as he would his own business.

Associated with him in this work, which is a public service without pay, are Sheldon Clark, vice president, Edwin L. Read, George W. Blomgren, George W. Dixon, Thomas W. Gilmore, Oscar A. Reum, and H. Otto Weege, general superintendent and manager.

The extension program which this board controls is in keeping with the major developments in Chicago. It consists of the maintenance and improvement of the boulevard system, from the river north, the extension of the outer drive, and the building of the northern half of the link bridge.

Mr. Wright gives the following picture of an automobile trip which will be taken by hundreds of thousands of visitors in 1933:

"We will start from Monroe street in the loop. We reach the outer drive in Grant park, and proceed north until we reach the south bank of the Chicago river. Here is a wide thoroughfare from the loop, on our left. It is the extension of Wacker drive.

"We turn right and follow the south bank of the river for some 900 feet. Then we reach the link bridge. On a 140 foot wide roadway, which permits sidewalks, safety island, and four lanes of cars each way all the time, we cross over and coast down the ramp toward Ohio street.

"On the ramp we cut right through the North Pier Terminal building, which has been divided to permit the passage of the drive. From there we keep on north on Lake Shore drive, which will be widened, and the present north boulevards. At any point after crossing the bridge it is possible to turn west off the drive.

To Protect Outer Drive.

"In Lincoln park we find the outer drive, between North avenue and Fullerton, reopened and permanently protected by the construction of a mile long beach directly to the east. The drive has been extended from its present termination at Montrose avenue to Foster avenue, with grade separations and safety turnoffs at Wilson, Lawrence and Foster avenues.

"In the park we have passed the new $100,000 athletic fieldhouse and carillon tower at the foot of Waveland avenue. This serves as a clubhouse in connection with baseball fields, tennis courts, and the new golf course. At the north end of the first floor of this building is an office and shop for the park 'pro,' and at both the east and west sides of the building are large covered loggias, where the public may sit and watch baseball and other games.

Bell Tower with Carillon.

"The exterior of the building is of Gothic architecture in red brick trimmed with Bedford stone. It has a slate roof. Its principal feature is a bell tower 75 feet high, which contains a carillon of twenty bells. This is a memorial gift to the park from the late Anna Wolford, who left $50,000 for the purpose."

Plans are being worked out to make the new boat harbors the finest in the country. These will be at Buena avenue, Edgewater Beach, and at Foster avenue. There will be fine beaches at Montrose, Lawrence, Edgewater, and Bryn Mawr avenues.

"The taxpayers of the Lincoln park district," says Mr. Wright, "are like the stockholders in a going corporation, except that instead of receiving cash dividends, the returns on their money are computed in the use of the park system and participation in the recreation and pleasure that park activities afford."

Sergt. Calkins Takes Job as Sprague's Bodyguard

Police Sergeant Robert E. Calkins yesterday began his duties as personal bodyguard to Col. A. A. Sprague, commissioner of public works in Mayor Cermak's cabinet. Sergt. Calkins, who was assigned by Acting Police Commissioner Alcock, was Col. Sprague's bodyguard when the latter was commissioner of public works under Mayor Dever.

MYERS ACTS TO MEET CERMAK'S SCHOOL DEMANDS

Upon the initiative of President Myers, negotiations were opened yesterday with a view to preventing the threatened conflict between the board of education and the Cermak administration.

It is understood that the first definite step to be taken will be the appointment of a special committee of three trustees to supervise all future appointments, this committee to be acceptable to the administration.

The negotiations, it is said, probably will continue this week for the purpose of determining whether a control of the school system satisfactory to Mayor Cermak can be arranged without his seeking from the legislature the right to appoint additional trustees as he has said he will do if that step becomes necessary.

The establishment of the new control may involve the resignations of some trustees, it was said. If it is established, extensive pay roll trimming such as Cermak ordered in the city hall is expected.

Don't submit to avoidable operations or the use of antiquated trusses, as they all set where the lump is and not where the opening is. The Spermatic Shield-Complex in combination with the Retainer-Simplex (Patent No. 747247, No. 1237709 and other patents pending)—a scientific achievement in a highly specialized art. The Coming Generation

The mothers know the quality of A & P foods. They know the prices are rock bottom. So they can let even the toddlers go for supplies, sure that at A & P stores the kiddies will do just as good a shopping job as they would themselves.

All of which is very gratifying to us, not just because we're happy to be helping busy mothers, but also because we like to think of those multitudes of little A & P enthusiasts growing up all around us. It is promising for the future of our business. And the country too, for that matter. For A & P is an education in good food, good health, and good management.

HAITIAN MAKES HASTE TO DENY SLUR ON BUTLER

Blames Translating Error for Mixup.

Cut Off the Air

Philadelphia, Pa., April 25.—[U. P.]—Maj. Gen. Smedley D. Butler was cut off the air tonight when he said "hell" describing his campaign in Haiti.

Station WELK, local and privately owned, broke the broadcast of the speech.

The broadcast was halted, then resumed after a short interval.

It later was explained to the radio audience when they protested the interruption to newspapers that Gen. Butler was quoting a top sergeant.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 25.—[Special.]—Maj. Gen. Smedley D. Butler loomed tonight as the victor in another international diplomatic incident.

Less than twenty-four hours after the fiery marine officer had written to the navy department protesting against alleged slurs cast on his military record by Dantes Bellegarde, the new minister from Haiti, the Haitian diplomat advised newspapermen that he had been misquoted, adding that he had not intended to reflect in any way upon Gen. Butler's achievements.

The dispute is the outgrowth of a copyrighted article published in a local newspaper on April 12 in which Minister Bellegarde was quoted as saying that a fort, for the capture of which Gen. Butler was awarded the congressional medal of honor, did not exist. This fort was known as Fort Riviere, and it is mentioned prominently in the report on which Gen. Butler was given his second medal of honor.

Envoy Explains to Press.

It was all a matter of "parlez vous," according to the explanation made by Minister Bellegarde today. The reporter that interviewed him, the minister said, could not talk French. And, the diplomat added, the reporter probably could not understand "my English."

Notwithstanding the Bellegarde unofficial explanation that he had been misunderstood, the Butler letter has been referred to the state department and Secretary Stimson has promised to investigate the facts to see if any diplomatic action is necessary.

Maj. Gen. Butler, who was investigated by Mr. Stimson for his alleged attack on Premier Mussolini of Italy as a hit and run driver, is now demanding that the administration show equal zealousness in protecting his reputation from attack. Minister Bellegarde said today that, if questioned by the state department, he would state that he had been misquoted, and that he had no intention of reflecting on Gen. Butler's bravery. He has found, he added, that such a fort actually existed.

Expect Early Adjustment.

The possibility of a diplomatic incident affecting relations with Haiti arising out of the Butler-Bellegarde incident has been considerably lessened by the explanation given by the Haitian diplomat. Indications are that the matter will be smoothed over without anything like the publicity attending the Butler-Mussolini incident, which held the front page for several days before it was ended by the administration's withdrawal of court martial charges against the marine officer and his emergence from the incident with a reprimand.

Minister Bellegarde explained today to a reporter who spoke some French that he was led to discuss Gen. Butler's activities in Haiti by publication of an account of the capture of Fort Riviere during the time Butler was awaiting court martial for his remarks about Mussolini.

"It was not my intention to cast doubt upon the merit of the award of the congressional medal of honor award to Gen. Butler. Neither was it my intention to say that no such battle as that at Fort Riviere had ever occurred. What I did say to the reporter was that I had no personal knowledge that there ever had been a Fort Riviere. And neither had any one else in Haiti so far as I can learn. There may have been such a fort and there probably was but as far as I am personally concerned, I do not know of it nor of its location. My understanding is that after it was captured it was blown up by Gen. Butler.

Learns About Haiti Here.

"As a matter of fact, my first definite knowledge that the fort existed came to me within the past few days when I received a copy of a hearing before the senate subcommittee on foreign relations held in 1926. In these hearings a witness referred to the capture of Fort Riviere by a force led by Gen. Butler. The papers and people of Haiti never spoke of the battle. Censorship was too strict. There never was any mention of it there and I knew nothing of it, until I learned of Gen. Butler's decoration for his victory in it. If such a fort existed the Haitians knew nothing of it. Under the strict censorship, they had no way of learning anything about it except through Haitians who participated in it and they were all killed."

Gone But Not Forgotten.

San Diego, Cal., April 25.—"Fort Riviere is not in Haiti any more, because I blew it up after we took it, but it was certainly there in 1915," Lieut. Col. Chandler Campbell, marine corps executive officer of base troops here, declared today.

Tells of Butler Exploit.

Philadelphia, Pa., April 25.—(AP)—The Philadelphia Evening Bulletin today published a report of a speech Gen. Smedley D. Butler made at a luncheon in Philadelphia on March 26, in which the general is said to have related in an offhand, humorous fashion an incident in entering a Haitian fort, the name of which was not given, through a drainage pipe.

"It became necessary to get information about the enemy," the Bulletin quotes Butler as saying, "and the only way was to enter this fort," he explained. "I asked for volunteers and selected two men to go with me. One of these was Samuel Gross, a gallant lad whom I saw not long ago in a veterans' hospital.

Decide on First to Go.

"We were to enter this pipe, crawl the length of it, with the possibility the defenders would begin to shoot at us as soon as we were seen. Naturally, the first man to enter the pipe had the toughest assignment."

Gen. Butler joked about how the three decided who would go first, saying he really felt it was his right, as ranking officer, but waived it when Gross insisted on going first.

"The other man insisted he also share in the danger, and I consented to let him. So he went next and I brought up the rear.

"Well, we all got in and out again, and naturally, being all good loyal marines, we decided something ought to be done about it. So I recommended the men and they recommended me and we all got the congressional medal of honor."

LONGER TERM FOR ALDERMEN TO BE URGED MONDAY

All organizations interested in the bill pending at Springfield for a four year term for Chicago aldermen were urged in a bulletin of the Municipal Voters' league yesterday to attend the final hearing of the legislative subcommittee tomorrow. The hearing will be in the council chambers at 11 a. m.

One of the major points under consideration is the legality of an amendment to the bill providing for the extension of the terms of the present aldermen from two to four years. Another question is whether elections under the four year term should be coincident with the mayoralty primary and election, or two years later. quality of the council.

The Municipal Voters' league has urged the four year term.

Arrest Woman Accused of Defrauding 35 Banks

Miss Martha Lutz, 35 years old, bespectacled and plainly dressed, and described in bulletins as looking like a "home girl," was held in a cell at the North Racine avenue station last night. According to Sergt. Gus Bellack of the Town Hall station who arrested her, and the American Bankers association, she is wanted for passing bogus checks on thirty-five banks in recent years. In her purse was froud a fraudulent check for $25, police said. Miss Lutz's home address is given as 1446 Melrose street.

SPAIN REBUKES PRIMATE; FIRES ARMY OFFICERS

Republic Protests Words Against Republic.

BY JAY ALLEN.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MADRID, April 25.—Disregarding ancient taboos, the Spanish republic today spoke up to the Roman Catholic church and took steps that marked the beginning of the end for the swollen bureaucratic army.

It protested sharply to the papal nuncio against the behavior of the cardinal archbishop of Toledo, primate of Spain, who was alleged to have said from the pulpit, "May the republic be cursed."

And it punctured the army balloon with two decrees. One forbids the entry of enlisted men into the military academy and the other grants officers of all ranks handsome terms to get out of the army within 30 days before a reorganization takes place under the constituent parliament.

Protests to Papal Nuncio.

Fernando de los Rios, minister of justice, called the attention of the papal nuncio in no uncertain terms to alleged utterances of the cardinal, which the government considered harmful to the republic. He said he was sure that Rome would abide by the often reiterated attitude of submission to constituted authorities, and that he was certain the Spanish government would see to it that no member of the clergy, trusted thus far, would violate it.

Then Manuel Azana, minister of war, issued a long document telling what was wrong with the Spanish army. He declared that, as a result of a century of civil and colonial wars, the army was over staffed with 258 generals and 21,996 other officers. As a result of what he termed ministerial despotism in defiance of parliament, when there was any, Minister Azena declared the army was cluttered with meaningless jobs, was full of suspicion, and is without discipline.

"This situation must end," he said. "Soldiers must be like any other servants of the Spanish state with privileges neither more nor less. Parliamentary debility is a thing of the past. The revolution will take care that the old evils do not reappear."

Slash Corps of Cadets.

There are 523 students, all prospective officers, in the military academy of Saragossa, and 339 enrolled in special academies. This is far too many for the needs of an army "that will keep the resources and requirements of a free and pacific people," the minister said. Therefore 100 cadets, scheduled to enter in June, will be asked to find careers elsewhere.

The army officers, Minister Azana holds, are not to blame for all of it. If they so desire they can transfer to the second reserve list on full pay with "extras" awarded for decorations, an important part of a Spanish officer's income, Provisional President Zamora left for Barcelona tonight, ostensibly to attend a meeting of the Olympic games committee, but in reality to seal a pact by which Catalonia will drop its separatist claims and postpone other ambitions until parliament meets. Col. Francisco Macia, Catalan chieftain, will pay a formal visit to Madrid next week.

Infanta's Burial Simple Affair.

PARIS, April 25.—(AP)—Clothed in the somber corded robe of a Sister of the Order of St. Francis of Assise, the body of the 79 year old Infanta Isabella of Spain, who died in exile here Thursday, was borne to its tomb today.

Three masses were said in the mortuary apartment of the ladies' home where she died. The body was taken to the Père la Chaise cemetery, where the family vault of Quinones de Leon, monarchist ambassador in Paris, was opened for it. Those attending the simple services included the Infanta Eulalia, Isabella's sister; the Infanta Beatriz, sister of Queen Marie of Rumania; Beatriz's husband, Prince Alfonso de Bourbon, representing the dethroned king; Quinones de Leon, and nuns of the Spanish mission.

THERE'S A NEW MAN AFTER PEGGY JOYCE; HE'S A U. S. MARSHAL

New York, N. Y., April 25.—[Special.]—There's no disputing the fact that Deputy United States Marshal Edward Menger got the run around last midnight; but then, in all justice, he's probably not the only man that's been left waiting at a stage door for Peggy Hopkins Joyce.

PEGGY JOYCE.

Menges, strictly in his official capacity, spent several hours just inside the stage entrance of the Palace theater last night waiting for Peggy, who is named defendant in a suit to confiscate jewelry and clothing and to recover approximately $51,000 damages. His efforts, however, were unsuccessful and today, having a touch of the Northwest Mounted spirit in his makeup, he doggedly resumed the chase.

The suit dates back to May 12, 1922, when the blond Peggy returned from Europe on the Mauretania without bothering about the formality of declaring some $9,000 worth of jewelry and $1,800 worth of Parisian finery. They were confiscated at the time and the incident was almost forgotten until some one happened to dust off the files in the federal building the other day and ran across the case.

DOG CHEWS UP METER RECORDS; TO FACE COURT

Palo Alto, Cal., April 25.—(AP)—A dog that chewed up 1,100 kilowatt hours of recorded electricity and 1,906 cubic feet of gas besides numerous gallons of consumed water was charged with altering public records today.

The dog, owned by Mrs. A. J. Wakeman, was ordered to trial before the board of public safety after J. W. Watson, meter reader for this city's utility, accused the dog of attacking him. Watson parried with his record book and the dog made swift inroads on the electricity, gas, and water entries.

BUSINESS WOMEN VIEW STYLES AT BENEFIT AFFAIR

Brown Ensemble Popular at Fashion Show.

Five thousand women gathered yesterday in the Palmer house for what is believed to be the largest benefit card party ever held in Chicago. A style show was one of the features of the event, which was staged by the Federated Council of Professional and Business Women for their unemployment fund.

The fashions shown were a forecast of what will be found in Chicago stores and shops by women who are expected to visit the city during the Chicago Jubilee.

A brown ensemble appeared to be the most popular costume shown by any of the twelve models who displayed morning, street, afternoon, sport, and evening clothes. A snug brown hat completed the outfit. Most of the costumes shown were of the moderate priced type, but they had all the style generally accredited to importations.

Show Dove Gray Outfit.

Next in popularity came a street costume of dove gray. A straight line dress of silk marocain was worn under the snugly fitted tailored coat of the same material. The coat had deep flaring cuffs of gray fur. Slippers and hose and the small brimless hat which was made of the suit material were in the identical shade of gray, the only touch of color being a lavender orchid worn pertly on the left cuff of the coat.

At a finale for the fashion show, Miss Charlotte Collins appeared as a bride, with two bridesmaids, a flower girl and a number of wedding guests, formally attired. The bridal gown was a domestic model of ivory satin with a deep V neck and princess lines and a flared skirt ending in a long train. A long tulle veil was caught to her head with orange blossoms and she carried an arm bouquet of white sweet peas and lavender orchids.

Fresh Flowers Popular.

The bridesmaids were in similar costumes of peach colored organdy with flounced skirts and short capes. They wore large garden hats of peach horsehair and carried peach colored taffeta muffs with yellow orchids.

Orchids donated by Mrs. B. Schiller McDonald and Miss Rosamond Price of New York demonstrated the popularity of fresh flowers for the spring season.

WITNESS ABSENT; CASE DELAYED.

Disorderly conduct charges against Robert Boak Jr., 165 Lake street, Glencoe, yesterday were continued to April 30 by Judge Francis Borrelli when Attorney Robert E. Ward, the complainant, did not appear in court. Ward charged that Boak entered his offices Friday and beat him severely in a quarrel over a debt owed by Boak.

a unique occasion in the city's history.

Will Act on Dirigible.

The request of Chicago leaders for the flight here during the Jubilee of the dirigible Los Angeles will be acted on tomorrow at Washington by Secretary of the Navy Charles Francis Adams. The Los Angeles will be engaged in fleet scouting maneuvers just prior to the Jubilee.

Efforts are being made to join the observance of National Hospital day, May 12, with the Jubilee. The day is celebrated in memory of Florence Nightingale, war nurse. The new North Chicago hospital, valued at $1,200,000, and built on the site of the old institution at 2551 North Clark street, will be formally opened on May 12. Originally it was to be opened this week, but the ceremony was deferred to be made a part of the Jubilee. The hospital has 300 beds. Its president is Dr. Frank Deacon.

Offers of participation in the festival came yesterday from the S. B. Lavick company, jewelers and importers in the Merchandise Mart, and others. Mr. Lavick, the president of the Lavick company, announced he was mailing 10,000 special letters to clients all over the country inviting their attendance in Chicago during the Jubilee. The Eastgate and St. Clair hotels also offered special service, and two bands, the Elmhurst Municipal and the Chicago Boys' Accordion, directed respectively by Adolph Prochaska and Murray Wilcox, offered their services.

Rock River Folk Enthusiastic.

At Dixon, Ill., George C. Dixon, newly elected mayor, and grandson of the founder of the city, asserted his community would join Chicago in the Jubilee. The people of the Rock River valley feel they are part of the metropolitan area, he pointed out, and desire to participate in the celebration of the revival of civic pride and business optimism. He congratulated THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE for supporting the Jubilee.

Other expressions of support came from Harry Hill, executive vice president of the Chicago Stock exchange; Dr. W. Clyde Howard, president of the Chicago Rotary club; R. A. Gerstenberg, commander of Board of Trade post, American Legion, who offered the post's drum and bugle corps of 60 pieces; A. W. Percival, manager, the Rudolph Wurlitzer company, who will enter the company band and a float; Arthur H. Westin, president, the Roxement company; John Fett Jr., secretary-treasurer, the Fett Bed Spring company, and Bernard Benjamin, sales manager of the Big Ben Beverage corporation.

Mr. Benjamin said his company would be glad to use its refueling plane, Big Ben, which helped to make the then record breaking endurance flight of the City of Chicago last summer.

GOV. BILBO REFUSES TO ATTEND SESSIONS OF RUMP ASSEMBLY

Jackson, Miss., April 25.—(AP)—Gov. Theodore G. Bilbo today declined an invitation to attend the "informal" special session of the legislature which will convene here on Tuesday on the initiative of members to deal with the state's financial problems.

He refused to call the assembly himself because a majority of the members would not sign a pledge not to bring impeachment proceedings against him.

The governor sent his "regrets at inability to attend, owing to absence from the city" to the speaker of the house, Thomas L. Bailey, who has summoned the house members to the capital and who urged the governor to attend. The senate has been called together by W. B. Roberts, chairman of the senate finance committee.

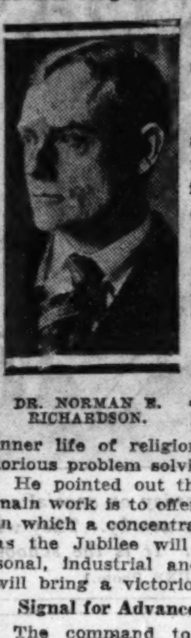
Columbus, O., April 25.—(AP)—Brought to Columbus today by airplane for an operation to remove a tooth from her lung, Mrs. Helen Williams, wife of Elmer Williams, 8816 Aberdeen street, Chicago electrical engineer, was reported at the hospital tonight as recovering. She made the trip from Chicago, 275 miles, in two hours and 40 minutes.

PASTORS STRESS RELIGIOUS SIDE OF CITY JUBILEE

Is a Signal for Spiritual Advance, They Say.

BY THE REV. JOHN EVANS.

The Chicago Jubilee not only has a definite religious aspect, but also, in itself, the Jubilee is fundamentally a religious movement.



DR. NORMAN E. RICHARDSON.

The statement summarizes many replies to inquiries put to Chicago church leaders in regard to the spiritual values of the celebration. For instance, the Rev. Dr. Norman E. Richardson, professor of religious education at the Presbyterian Theological seminary, defined the inner life of religion as being "victorious problem solving."

He pointed out that the churches' main work is to offer an environment in which a concentrated attack—such as the Jubilee will launch—on personal, industrial and civic problems will bring a victorious solution.

Signal for Advance, Says Bishop.

The command to advance must supplant the order to retrench, said Bishop George Craig Stewart of the Episcopal diocese of Chicago as he spoke of the religious implications of the Jubilee. The church, Bishop Stewart declared, is always the first institution to stage a Jubilee in face of difficulties.

"In spite of the depression, we will go forward," said Bishop Stewart. "In my own church the Jubilee spirit is represented by facing hard times with a $70,000 advance. I met a group of 125 laymen last week who represent the entire city so far as the Episcopal church is concerned, and together, we are undertaking advance work which will reach the entire world.

"Chicago will go forward with its religious life. Many people have inadequate ideas of what religion is. Some people think it is hymn singing, massmeetings, and sermons. It is much more than that. Religion is the motive power propelling people and communities to advance in the face of heavy odds."

Religious Plans Discussed.

Various plans have been proposed to the Association of Commerce concerning the means of recognizing religious factors in the coming Jubilee. One plan proposes a huge religious service at Soldiers' field on Sunday afternoon, May 10. The plan received widespread support, but was regarded by church leaders as involving technical details too difficult to solve in the short period.

On the other hand, pastors throughout the city assert that special sermons bearing on the Jubilee will be preached on that Sunday. The Rev. Howard Brinker, pastor of St. Bartholomew's Episcopal church, pointed out that May 10 is "Mothers' day" in the calendars of many denominations. He declared that the Jubilee theme of a better Chicago—economically, morally and socially—would lend itself to the "Mothers' day" observance.

The Rev. Charles L. Draper, secretary of the Methodist preachers' meeting, declared that the Sunday preceding the opening of the Jubilee will prove the vitality of Chicago's religious life. He cited the city's reputation for crime, and its past reputation for political corruption and declared that the country at large is not aware of Chicago's religious side.

WOMEN EXPLAIN ACTIONS ON JURY; TWO DISCHARGED

Rockford, Ill., April 25.—(AP)—Two of four women cited Monday for contempt in connection with a jury verdict in a damage suit were freed today and the fate of the other two was taken under advisement by Circuit Judge Edward D. Shurtleff.

Those absolved of guilt were Mrs. Mary Helt, court bailiff, and Mrs. Gertrude McDonald, a juror. The cases of Mrs. Mary Culbertson and Mrs. Gladys Garrett are pending until Friday.

Mrs. Mary Helt had been charged with influencing the three women jurors in their verdict in the damage suit which was the outgrowth of an automobile accident. The jury returned a verdict for the plaintiff of $500, which was characterized by Judge Shurtleff as "monstrous" in view of the fact that there were "damages of $1,750 in the suit undisputed." Judge Shurtleff allowed the plaintiff a new trial and remarked that he "intended to get at the truth in the matter if it took all of 1931."

TRIBUNE NAMES SIGN OF ZODIAC PRIZE WINNERS

First Three Lucky Ones Announced.

THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE today announces the three grand prize winners of "The Sign of the Zodiac," who will share in the $5,000 cash awards. The total prize list amounted to $25,000, $20,000 being distributed to weekly winners.

The grand prize winners are:

Mrs. Arthur Du Puis, 1530 North avenue, Waukegan, Ill., third prize of $1,000.

"The Sign of the Zodiac" proved one of the most popular and interesting events of its kind. It was not a contest as the word is generally understood. There was no puzzle to be solved or no essay to write.

Cash Prizes Each Week.

Each Sunday for ten weeks, beginning Feb. 1, there appeared in THE CHICAGO SUNDAY TRIBUNE a coupon on which entrants were asked to inscribe their name and address, their occupation, their ambition, and the date of their birth. This coupon was to be sent to Doris Blake, personal advice editor of THE TRIBUNE.

From the information given on the coupon Miss Blake made individual readings concerning the indications of the signs of the Zodiac as determined by the date of birth. One hundred of the most interesting readings were published each Sunday, and to these one hundred persons each week a total of $2,000 was distributed.

Many Names Sent In.

In the course of the "Sign of the Zodiac" coupons were received by Miss Blake from readers everywhere anxious to discover their lucky star and to share in the $25,000.

One thousand readers won prizes during the ten weeks from Feb. 1 to April 12.

Mrs. Link, who won the first prize of $2,500, was born on Sept. 9, rather a good many years ago. She is a sprightly grandmother, living with her daughter and the latter's five children. She is employed in a loop department store. Her ambition, as expressed on the coupon she sent to Miss Blake, is typical of her. It is: "To keep my health and my position and to help educate my grandchildren that they may have careers, be good providers and loyal citizens."

In her reading for Mrs. Link Doris Blake says: "You come under the dominion of the sixth Sign of the Zodiac, Virgo. Perhaps your outstanding qualities are practicality and good sense, patience, and foresight. Your mind is an active one; you will always keep pace with the world. You are generous and kind and invariably pleasant, with a great love for orderly and happy surroundings and relations."

Mr. Schwartz, who won the second grand award of $1,500, is a double prize winner. On March 1 Mr. Schwartz was awarded first prize in the weekly distribution. His birthday falls on Nov. 19. Miss Blake's reading states:

"Your sign is Scorpio. You have will power of such strength that it can develop into unreasonable obstinacy. The undeveloped Scorpio native is often a slave to his own will. You should guard against this, although this will power, in your case, seems to be well controlled and directed. You have a critical, almost skeptical mind; you seek truth with dauntless energy. Concentration and willingness to work are two marked characteristics in your composition."

The Third Prize.

Mrs. Du Puis, recipient of the third major award of $1,000, is a mother and housewife whose expressed ambition is "To win the confidence, respect, and friendship of young people by the example of my own living."

Of Mrs. Du Puis, who was born on May 31, Doris Blake says: "Gemini, symbolized by the 'Heavenly Twins,' is your sign. Yours is an alert mind and your tolerance is admirable. You have great love of beauty, of travel and the better pleasures of life. You are imaginative, but not at all impractical. You understand yourself better than most individuals do."

SIGN OF ZODIAC WINNERS

CALUMET HARBOR RETURNS TO LIFE AS SPRAGUE ACTS

Lake Calumet harbor, a project which has been at a standstill during the last four years, will be one of the first improvements on the new city administration's building program, Commissioner of Public Works Sprague announced yesterday.

ALD. ROWAN. [Tribune Photo.]

Commissioner Sprague said that he has assembled all of the documents pertaining to the harbor plans, including the "lost" Nickel Plate railroad contract ordinance, which he dug out of the files of the former commissioner of public works, Richard W. Wolfe. Sprague is of the opinion that the ordinance can be made the basis of negotiations for a revised plan which will hasten construction.

"I am communicating with W. A. Colston, vice president and general counsel for the railroad and expect to hear from him within a few days," Sprague said. "I see no reason why we cannot iron out all the obstacles and make the ordinance satisfactory to all interests."

Under the Nickel Plate ordinance the railroad agreed to dredge a deep channel in the basin of the lake in exchange for the right to construct a switch track around it. The ordinance was signed by Mayor Dever, but when his successor took office it was abandoned. A half dozen other plans were talked about and discarded by high salaried experts. Meanwhile the railroad company sought to obtain the ordinance, but were told that it was "lost."

One of the objections to the ordinance had been a demand by the state waterways department for modifications. Commissioner Sprague yesterday described the state's objections as "ridiculous" and predicted that they would easily be overcome.

Becomes Part of U. S. Plan.

Coincident with the Sprague announcement that the Nickel Plate ordinance is to be revived it was learned that the tentative plans of the federal government for the development of waterways in the Calumet region include the Lake Calumet project. War department engineers for several months have been engaged in a survey of the Calumet area with a view to mapping out terminal facilities for the lakes-to-gulf waterway when it is completed two years hence.

The army engineers propose that the government assist in the development of a ship basin covering 700 acres at the south end of the lake and in the dredging and widening of the Sag canal and Calumet river as entrance ways. This would make the Lake Calumet harbor a meeting place for deep water lake freighters and river barges using the inland waterway.

Rowan Urges Early Action.

Ald. William A. Rowan [10th], who has tentatively been named the new chairman of the city council rivers and harbors committee, has conferred several times with Commissioner Sprague on the Lake Calumet harbor project which would be in his ward. Rowan also has been in close touch with the federal survey.

"The time is ripe for action on the harbor now," Rowan declared yesterday. "I am convinced that Commissioner Sprague means business and it appears that the federal government is ready to do its share. We have been sitting around squabbling among ourselves while the waterway is being brought to the city's gates. We must get ready for it. If I am not greatly mistaken we are going to get somewhere in the very near future."

Auto with 4 Persons in It Falls Into 30 Ft. of Water

Carthage, N. Y., April 25.—(AP)—An automobile carrying an undetermined number of persons plunged into thirty feet of water at Deferiet, northwest of here, early tonight. Canal gates were opened and the water was lowered until the car was reported visible. A motorist who was driving behind the machine which plunged into the water said there were four or five persons in it. Troopers were trying to grapple the machine, which was barely visible.

BANDIT, POLICE CHIEF SHOOT IT OUT; BOTH DEAD

Winchester, Ind., April 25.—(AP)—Tony Clevenger, 29, Winchester chief of police, and an unidentified bandit shot each other to death in a gun battle on the public square here tonight. The bandit's body was pushed from an automobile by an accomplice, who sped away.

Later the bandit automobile was found wrecked a mile north of Winchester. Officers believe the second bandit was wounded.

Receiving a request from Richmond police to look out for two bandits who robbed a store there and headed toward Winchester, Chief Clevenger stationed himself near a stop light at the corner of the public square, the only traffic signal in town.

When the bandit car approached, its lights turned out, the chief questioned the men. The bandit beside the driver fired one shot and Chief Clevenger fell, but as he did so he fired.

The bandit car lurched forward through the street intersection. A few hundred feet away the bandit's body was tossed from the car.

Police of four cities and Randolph county authorities started a search for the escaped robber.

MURDER, ARSON, ROBBERY—LIFE OF LEO V. BROTHERS

More Facts Are Revealed About Lingle Slayer.

Twenty-second installment of "The Solution of the Lingle Murder."

BY JOHN BOETTIGER.

CHAPTER XXII.

Murder, robbery, arson, bombing—these are some of the crimes which the city of St. Louis has chalked up against Leo V. Brothers, convicted murderer of Alfred Lingle.

Investigators were sent by Pat Roche and Charles Rathbun to St. Louis and they gathered up a full grist of evidence showing the criminal activities of Brothers. This evidence was ready for presentation at the trial of Brothers, but the law would not permit any of it to be shown unless Brothers took the witness stand to defend himself.

And Brothers never took the witness stand.

Brothers is a handsome young man, and unless one gets the steel glint in his smoky eyes he little looks the part of a desperate criminal. But his record is not so handsome.

Flees St. Louis Charge.

The murder charge caused Brothers to flee from St. Louis, and for a year and a half he hid in Chicago, never asserting his innocence of the charge, never attempting to face it, always hiding in fear that he would be brought to book for it.

There was reason for his fear. In the murder of Lingle, no one who knew him had seen him in the act. But in the St. Louis crime he had been seen, in the very act of his cowardly assault, by a witness who had known him for months, a witness who had the courage to swear to Brothers' guilt before the police and before a coroner's jury.

As has been related, the victim of the St. Louis murder was John Di Blase, a lad of 18, who was striving to earn a living by driving a "service" car in a sort of jitney service in St. Louis.

Di Blase Defies Gangster.

The "service" car driver followed certain routes, carrying passengers anywhere over the route for a quarter. Brothers and another man, now dead, saw an opportunity for easy money in organizing these drivers into a union, and Brothers became the "heavy" man, who by violence and intimidation sought to force the drivers to join.

Di Blase refused to join. He refused to pay Brothers the 25 cents daily that the gangster was obtaining from most of the other drivers. And on the morning of Aug. 2, 1929, Di Blase went to get his car and found it fuming with the odors of a stench bomb.

The smell was so bad that no passengers would have entered the car, so Di Blase borrowed another car and went out on his route, defying Brothers.

The Killing of Di Blase.

At the close of the day he and another lad, John Prosperito, also a service driver, drove the borrowed car into the alley behind Di Blase's home. Another car, in which three men rode, lurched up the alley behind Di Blase's car.

This car was pulled up alongside Di Blase's automobile, and a young, well dressed man stood on the running board and fired several shots at Di Blase. The latter, wounded, staggered out of the borrowed car and he called pitifully: "Mother, O, mother."

The young gunman stepped off the running board of his car, followed Di Blase into the latter's own yard, and shot him again. Di Blase fell. The victim's sister, Minnie Di Blase, came running up, and seeing her brother's body on the ground, looked at the murderer.

Sister Identifies Brothers.

"O, why did you shoot my brother?" she cried. The gunman turned, ran to the car in which he had come, and was driven swiftly away.

When the investigators of Roche and Rathbun showed the sister a picture of Brothers, 18 months after the murder of her brother, she gasped and burst into tears and said:

"Yes, he's the man who killed John."

But her testimony was not needed in this case. The young companion of Di Blase, who had witnessed the killing, braved the violence of the St. Louis gangs and came forward with his story. Young Prosperito went before the coroner's jury and under oath repeated his testimony.

Testimony of Prosperito.

The official record of the coroner's office, as certified by Coroner William V. Dever, gives Prosperito's testimony in part as follows:

Q.—You were with Di Blase when he was shot? A.—Yes.

Q.—Tell us just what happened. Who shot him? A.—Leo Brothers.

Q.—What did he shoot him for? A.—I guess for that argument they had when he took his sign away from him at the loop at 4th and Washington.

Q.—What kind of a sign? A.—A service car sign.

Q.—And why did he take that sign away? A.—Because he was going to file the insurance case. Brothers also wanted two bits a day and he would not give him that.

Three Men in Death Car.

Q.—Who was with Leo Brothers? A.—I did not recognize them.

Q.—How many men were there in the car? A.—Three men.

Q.—You are sure Leo shot him? A.—Yes.

Q.—What did he say before he shot at him? A.—He cussed at him.

Q.—What does Leo Brothers do, do you know? A.—He's supposed to be a "red hot" [gangster].

Q.—Was Leo Brothers following Di Blase all that day? A.—I saw him more times yesterday than I ever did.

Q.—Did he seem to be following Di Blase? A.—I guess that was it.

Q.—Did he jump out of his automobile and come over and shoot him? A.—Yes.

Q.—Leo has been in on the racket down there squeezing these service car drivers? A.—That's it.

Q.—What did he do—threaten these drivers' lives and then shake them down for money? A.—Yes, I guess that's how he made a living.

Q.—He was starting a new union? A.—Yes.

Q.—At the time of the murder, did Brothers get out of the car and call Di Blase a dago ——— and shoot him? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did he say anything to you? A.—He did not see me.

Q.—Where were you? A.—I lay down in the machine when I seen him.

Q.—Where was Di Blase? A.—He was in his yard.

Q.—And where was Leo at that time? A.—He was in the alley with his machine, and got off and called him that name and shot him.

Q.—Did Di Blase have any chance for his life at all? A.—No, sir. It is a big open yard.

Di Blase Not Armed.

Q.—Did Di Blase have a gun on him? A.—No, sir.

Q.—How long did you know Leo? A.—I know him for three months.

Q.—Got a chance to look at him every day? A.—Every day and every night.

Q.—You are positive, now, you cannot be mistaken about him being the man? A.—No, sir. I am not mistaken.

This was the kind of murder that sent Leo Brothers skulking out of St. Louis to hide in Chicago.

Other crimes came before, but the cleverness of Brothers and the power of the gang that backed him in St. Louis saved him from convictions.

MORE THAN SIXTY ARRESTS

A formal report of the St. Louis police department, prepared by the secret service division, was forwarded to the Chicago prosecutors, and it shows Brothers to have been arrested in St. Louis more than 60 times.

The first crime at which Brothers was caught was the robbery of the Arco cafeteria, 409 North Broadway, on Jan. 5, 1928. Shortly after the crime, in which Brothers and another man obtained $475, Brothers was arrested, and he was positively identified by the manager and other employés of the restaurant as one of the robbers.

But the case was dragged along for two months, and in March, 1928, Brothers was discharged. The witnesses failed to identify him.

Brothers, when questioned by Prosecutor Rathbun about this crime, admitted he was guilty.

"The witnesses didn't want to prosecute me," he said.

On June 11, 1928, during a labor strike involving garages, Brothers was arrested by the police and charged with holding up James S. McDaniels at the point of a pistol and taking McDaniels' automobile and $20. Later, according to the official police report, "Brothers and a companion drove into the garage of the Chase hotel, fired several shots and threw stench bombs in the garage, and then threw stench bombs in the garage of the Coronado hotel."

When he was arrested he was standing beside McDaniels' automobile, removing the license plates. The keys to McDaniels' car were found in Brothers' pocket. He was identified by the robbery victim as the robber. But this case was dismissed for lack of prosecution.

Victim Tells of Threats.

McDaniels, interviewed by the investigators, gave an affidavit stating that while the case against Brothers was pending he received numerous anonymous telephone calls and letters advising him that if he wanted to live any longer he had better stay away from Brothers' trial. He stayed away.

"I was afraid of my life," McDaniels said. "Brothers was the man."

"Brothers was again arrested on March 16, 1929," the police report states. "He was charged with throwing a stench bomb in a truck of the Paris Dye and Cleaning company, and with arson, setting the truck on fire. He escaped prosecution in this case."

While they were in St. Louis the Chicago investigators investigated Brothers' statement that he had received $25 weekly from the officials of his union. The officials, when interviewed, gave affidavits that they had never sent him a penny. Then, through the Western Union, the original money order blanks were found.

Some of them indicated that the money had been sent by "E. Harris, Rep Top Cab company," and the investigators went out to interview Harris.

"Yeh, I know Leo," said Harris, "but I never sent him any money." A sample of his handwriting, and of his signature, was taken, and it was found that the writing on the blanks was not that of Harris. In other blanks the sender's name was filled out as "Bader," the alias used by Brothers in Chicago.

All the blanks were filled out in the same handwriting, it was then discovered, and when a comparison was made with Brothers' own handwriting they were declared to be the same. This led to the conclusion that Brothers had filled out the orders himself, and had sent them with the money to St. Louis, to be returned to him in Chicago, all in the hope of establishing, in case Brothers was arrested in Chicago, that he had a regular source of income from St. Louis.

As a matter of fact, according to the investigators, Brothers must have obtained the money in Chicago, unlawfully.

FRIEDLANDER TAKEN

Immediately after the capture of Brothers was announced, Rathbun and Roche, with a number of their men, descended one night upon the Riviera hotel, and they questioned the employés there, and residents who were said to be friendly with Brothers. This was the hotel in which Brothers lived at the time of the Lingle murder.

The first object of the investigators' search was for records concerning George Friedlander. It should be recalled that a letter, signed with the name of Friedlander, with a postscript stating "No more Buster," had led the investigators to believe that Friendlander was an alias of Buster's.

But it was learned that George Friedlander actually was a resident of the hotel, still living there. He was not in when the investigators arrived, but at 2 a. m. he walked in and was taken into custody for questioning.

Brothers and Friedlander.

Friedlander stated that he knew Brothers under the name of Bader, but he denied they were intimate friends. The investigators considered the possibility that Brothers gave Friedlander's name to his hoodlum friends, and received his mail through Friedlander, but the latter denied this.

Friedlander admitted that when Brothers was evicted from the hotel by the manager, he had paid Brothers' bill for him, getting the money from Brothers, and he admitted that he got Brothers' clothes from the Riviera hotel, and gave them to Brothers.

Asked about the reason for Brothers being ousted from the hotel, Friedlander described a violent quarrel that Brothers had with a man in the room of Brothers' sweetheart, Betty Cook.

Questioned by Rathbun.

Questioned by Mr. Rathbun in the presence of a court reporter, Friedlander testified as follows:

Q.—What occurred there that caused them to put him out? A.—He went up there and tried to slug a fellow up there in one of the rooms.

Q.—Who was the fellow? A.—I don't know.

Q.—Whose room was he in? A.—In a lady friend of Bader's.

Q.—What lady friend? A.—I believe the name was Cook.

Q.—Betty Cook? A.—Yes, that is right.

Q.—There was a man in the room, wasn't there? A.—There were several men there.

Q.—How did you happen to go there? A.—I went up there with him.

Q.—You went up with Bader? A.—Here is the way the quarrel came about. He called up the room and wanted to talk to Miss Cook. A fellow got on the wire up in the room and told him to quit calling that room, if he didn't he would come down after him. He says, "You don't have to come down after me. I will come after you." He was on the first floor and he went upstairs. He said, "Come on, George, upstairs with me." I went upstairs with him and there was a little quarrel up there, that is all.

Q.—What was the little quarrel? What happened? A.—Well, the quarrel was what these fellows were doing up there with his girl.

Q.—What do you mean, that he tried to slug one of the fellows? A.—Yes, he had a pistol with him.

Q.—Tell us about it. A.—He had a pistol on him and he tried to slug one of the fellows with the pistol and when I seen that I run out.

Q.—Didn't he snap the trigger at them and the cartridge did not explode? A.—No.

Q.—You did not see him slug him with it? A.—I seen him wave it.

Q.—He may have pointed it at him and he may have snapped the trigger after you left? A.—I don't know.

Q.—Where did he get that gun? A.—He had it there in his room.

Q.—What kind of a gun was it? A.—It was a big blue steel gun.

Q.—Where did he take it from? A.—From the dresser drawer, probably.

Weapon in His Pocket.

Q.—How did you know he had a gun? A.—He had it sticking out of his pocket when he went upstairs.

Q.—Was he drunk that night? A.—Quite drunk.

Q.—He is a pretty ugly fellow, isn't he? A.—O, yes, ugly at times.

Q.—You think now he was a pretty tough guy, don't you? A.—Yes.

The hotel manager, John S. Couillard, verified that he had evicted Brothers after the quarrel, and that Brothers had drawn a gun on one of the men in the Cook woman's room.

BETTY COOK QUESTIONED

It was learned that Betty Cook had left the Riviera hotel shortly after Brothers was evicted, and had taken an apartment in the Lake Crest Drive apartments, in which Brothers lived, and where he was captured. She was taken to the state's attorney's office for questioning.

She stated that she had been married twice, and that she had adopted the name of her first husband, Lawrence J. Cook, from whom she had been divorced. They had one son, she said. Then she married Albert Smith, from whom she separated in July, 1930, but was not divorced. She was a manicurist, Mrs. Cook said.

Discusses Brothers' Money.

Questioned concerning Brothers' activities, Mrs. Cook testified in part as follows:

Q.—What has Buster done ever since you knew him? A.—Nothing.

Q.—Not a single thing at any time since you have known him? A.—Well, for a while, when I wasn't seeing him he was supposed to be working out in some café, the Green Mill.

Q.—Working at what? A.—He didn't say.

Q.—Did you ever ask Buster what he did, what he lived on? A.—Once in a while I would say, "Where do you get your money?"

Q.—"What did he tell you? A.—He would say, "I get it every month."

Q.—Did he tell you where? A.—He said it was sort of a trust fund or something.

Q.—You were sweethearts, weren't you? A.—We were friends.

Q.—Is that all? A.—Yes.

Mrs. Cook, Friedlander, Mr. Couillard, and all other residents of the Riviera hotel who might have known Brothers on the 9th of June, the day of the Lingle murder, were asked by the prosecutors whether they had any knowledge of his whereabouts on that day. All of them said they could not remember whether they had seen him at all.

Investigators who questioned the former operators of the Green Mill cabaret reported that Harry Voiler, the manager, had hired Brothers as a "heavy man," or bouncer, and that Ted Newberry, the north side gangster, had recommended Brothers.

A Wild Auto Ride.

On one occasion, it was learned Brothers left the cabaret in an automobile owned by a patron, without bothering to ask the patron's consent, and took two other men and a showgirl on a wild ride. Policeman Francis Montague of the Lincoln park force told investigators that he observed the car at 5 o'clock in the morning careening through Lincoln park and took up the chase.

After a chase of several miles, the car crashed up on the sidewalk at Madison and Clark streets, in front of the Morrison hotel, and the occupants were arrested. One of them gave the name of Louis Bader, and this man was identified by Policeman Montague as Brothers.

A revolver was found on the running board of the car, and all the occupants denied owning it. They were placed under arrest and were released on bond, and when the trial was called "Bader" did not show up, and his bond was declared forfeit.

Robbery Plot Revealed.

The investigator also learned that during the time Brothers was employed as a bouncer at the Green Mill, the managers of the cabaret were informed that St. Louis gangsters were planning to stage a holdup of the place, to rob the management and all the guests.

Machine guns, manned by hoodlums of the north side gang, were brought into the place on the night of the expected robbery, the investigators were told, and all was in readiness for the St. Louis hoodlums. On this night Brothers, observing the preparations, suddenly told the manager that he was ill, and he left the place.

The investigators were inclined to the theory that Brothers, himself a St. Louis gangster, had notified his pals there of the rich haul they might make in the cabaret, and then when he learned that the plot had been exposed, he slipped away to warn his friends.

A nice boy, Leo Brothers. Looks are deceiving.

YSAYE HONORED BY QUEEN AT OPERA PREMIERE

BRUSSELS, April 25.—(AP)—The Walloon opera, "Peter the Miner," written by Eugene Ysaye, noted violinist of the Cincinnati Symphony orchestra, was presented at the Royal Opera house this afternoon amid great enthusiasm.

Ysaye, although ill, attended the presentation, sitting in a box which was screened from the public. Queen Elizabeth went to his box to congratulate him.

When the curtain fell tremendous applause greeted the composer, the spectators so frantically clapping their hands for Ysaye that the orchestra almost forgot to play the national anthem which, according to etiquette, must sound when royalty leaves a theater.

TOMMY ABBOTT TAKEN FOR RIDE, BONDSMEN SAY

Rockford, Ill., April 25.—[Special.]—Efforts will be made by bondsmen of Tommy Abbott, Chicago gangster, who put up a $5,000 bond for him to secure his release from the Winnebago county jail where he was held on a gun toting charge, to escape forfeiture of the bond on a plea that Abbott has been taken for a ride and killed.

Circuit Judge A. E. Fisher today gave Attorney David D. Madden two weeks in which to file pleadings. Madden, attorney for Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Barbagello and Leo Palmeri of Rockford, who put up the bonds, plans to show that a search has been made for Abbott and that no trace of him has been found.

Abbott was arrested on a charge of carrying concealed weapons after he had been fired upon by gangsters in a Rockford street last September. The bullets killed Joe Givingo, one of Abbott's henchmen, but missed Abbott.

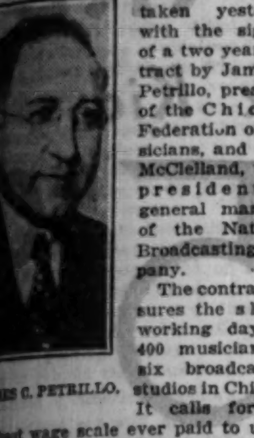
RADIO MUSICIANS GET 6 DAY WEEK AND 5 HOUR DAY

New Contract Affects 400 in Chicago.

The first step toward a six day week and a five hour day for musicians throughout the United States was taken yesterday with the signing of a two year contract by James C. Petrillo, president of the Chicago Federation of Musicians, and G. F. McClelland, vice president and general manager of the National Broadcasting company.



JAMES C. PETRILLO.

The contract assures the short working day for 400 musicians in six broadcasting studios in Chicago. It calls for the highest wage scale ever paid to union labor, according to Mr. Petrillo.

Two Types of Orchestras.

Two types of orchestras are considered in the contract. Playing members of a commercial orchestra, working in conjunction with an advertising program, are to receive a minimum scale of $150 a week for 30 hours work. The leader will get $300 a week. An overtime scale of $10 an hour is provided.

The other type of organization considered in the contract is the sustaining orchestra which is provided by the broadcasting company to fill in between advertising programs. The contract calls for a scale of $120 a week for the men and $240 a week for the leader of a sustaining orchestra. An hourly scale of $8 is provided for overtime. The new scale and hour system will go into effect tomorrow.

Other Details of Contract.

The new agreement governs both local and network programs and prescribes that at no time shall a sustaining or commercial orchestra be used to dispense with the services of orchestras regularly employed on local stations in the Chicago jurisdiction.

Another innovation in the contract is the provision that an orchestra member's weekly day off need not be Sunday or a holiday, but is at the discretion of the studio manager. Another clause prohibits the reduction in pay of any orchestra if the full number of hours are not played. It is also provided that the five playing hours may be extended over any period of eight hours in the day.

A three year contract continuing the prevailing agreement was signed with the Chicago Symphony orchestra yesterday by Mr. Petrillo. The contract calls for the services of 98 men, each to be paid $90 a week.

Miss Priscilla Higinbotham, Evanston society girl whose grandfather, the late Harlow N. Higinbotham, was head of the World's Fair in 1893, is the sole woman student in Northwestern university's school of scientific crime detection. She explained yesterday that her intention is to do her part in eliminating crime in Chicago before the next World's Fair begins in 1933.

The thirty-five men in the class, several of them veterans of many years on the Chicago police force, have accepted her as a classmate and some of them believe that she will make a good detective. She is already a good rifle and pistol shot.

Miss Higinbotham enrolled in the school as "Isabel Hall," in an effort to conceal her identity.

ACCUSE ICE MAN OF SHORT WEIGHT; SCALES SEIZED

A pair of ice scales with all the figures eliminated from its face fell into the hands of City Sealer Joe Grein yesterday as his inspectors proceeded with their drive against short weights and measures.

The scales were taken from Jerry Norrise, 5414 Prairie avenue, who has charged with selling 50 pounds of ice and weighing out only 33 pounds.

Norrise was one of five ice dealers against whom suits were started by Grein yesterday. The others were Carl Wickstrom, 8229 Rhodes avenue; Sam Ross, 3730 West Division street; Harry L. Cooper, 1844 North Marshfield avenue, and Allen Poole, 4336 State street.

In the last two weeks the city sealer's office has started fifty suits against shopkeepers and ice and coal dealers. Municipal Court Bailiff A. J. Horan has assigned a deputy bailiff to the sealer's office to serve summonses and warrants.

REPORT BARKER FEARS REPRISAL IF HE QUITS JAIL

George ["Red"] Barker, public enemy, labor racketeer and gunman, who was released from the penitentiary by the Supreme court, might be afraid to walk the streets of Chicago at this time for fear of vengeance, it was rumored around the county jail yesterday when no one appeared to make bonds for him. Indications were that the gangster would have to spend Sunday in the jail unless some judge held court outside of hours to accept a bond.

The jail authorities said that they had heard the rumor that Barker felt safer as their prisoner, but they refused to divulge the source of the information. They pointed to the failure of any of the public enemy friends to even inquire about him as substantiating the report that he is in no hurry to get out on the street just as long as he is not in the penitentiary, where he was compelled to work in the shops.

In the county jail a prisoner cannot be compelled to labor until after he is convicted.

When Barker left the penitentiary Friday morning after the Supreme court release order was sent to the warden, his wife was on hand with Attorneys Milton Smith and Everett Jennings to assure him that they would have "bond for him within one hour."

It was reported that they found that Barker, an ex-convict from both Michigan and Illinois penitentiaries, where he served for robbery, has lost his grip on the various union rackets which he seized some years ago by "muscle tactics" and frequent gunplay. He has been ousted from the various teamster unions, and many of the teamsters who have since found out that they had been forced to pay for Barker's high priced lawyers when he was caught in his criminal activities, including a charge of murder, do not feel kindly to him.

Assistant State's Attorney Donald Thompson said that the prosecutor's office was ready to back up the labor unions in any fight against Barker's attempts to return to his old jobs.

TAX RICH, URGES COUZENS, ONE OF THE RICHEST

Wants High Surtax and Gift Levy Restored.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 25.—[Special.]—Senator James Couzens, the senate's richest member, wants the taxes on the rich increased. He favors a restoration of the 1924 surtax rates, he said today, and the reëstablishment of the federal gift tax. On top of that he would institute a federal inheritance tax. But he would not increase the normal income tax rates.

He is sure that there must be a tax increase of some sort.

"Congress," he said, "cannot avoid consideration of a tax increase plan if the federal government is to be conducted in a businesslike way. I think the revision ought to come at the next congress."

Congress appropriated some 750 million dollars for federal building projects during the coming five years, he pointed out. These projects were urged, he said, by business concerns, and particularly by those industries interested in building.

Says They Should Pay.

"Where," the Michigan senator inquired, "did they expect the money to come from? It is inconsistent to applaud huge appropriations for public buildings and then cry out against increasing taxes."

The gift tax, the repeal of which Secretary of the Treasury Mellon fostered in 1924 on the ground that it was unsound and conducive to tax evasions, Senator Couzens would like to see restored, but on a more scientific basis and patterned on a sliding rate scale after the manner of the surtax.

"Under a gift tax," he said, "the individual can estimate what he will have to pay. In other words, it is fairer to tax a man when he is alive than when he is dead.

Points Out Inequalities.

"Why," he inquired, "should a man worth five hundred millions be permitted to transfer his property to his son and pay no taxes, while a man worth 100 millions faces a tax of 30 millions on property not transferred until after his death?"

He advised an inheritance tax, remarking that this country now taxes estates before they are divided, whereas under an inheritance tax the beneficiaries would have to pay the levy in proportion to their individual benefit.

Federal taxes are not onerous upon the wealthy, Senator Couzens contended, and produced figures showing that the number of persons with incomes of more than $100,000 increased from 9,560 in 1925 to 14,701 in 1929; that during the last ten years the aggregate wealth of those with incomes of more then $10,000 had increased 100 per cent.

The hospital, which will be open for patients in a few weeks, will provide beds for 157 obstetric cases. The institution was founded 36 years ago by Dr. Joseph B. De Lee, who has led it to its present achievements. It occupies the north part of the block bounded by 59th street, Ingleside and Maryland avenues and the Midway. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

BRIDE'S UNCLE, WEDDING GUEST, KILLED BY AUTO

Rich Moline Man Is 'Hit and Run' Victim.

George W. Johnson, 73 years old, president of the Moline Furniture works and one of Moline's wealthiest citizens, was killed in Chicago late last night when he was struck by the automobile of a hit and run driver and hurled into the path of a second car, which also struck him.

The accident occured in front of the Edgewater Beach hotel, where Mr. Johnson and his wife were attending a wedding dinner of their niece, Miss Lucille Hanson of Chicago, and E. M. Arndt of Indianapolis.

Victim of Hit and Run Auto.

Mr. Johnson left the wedding festivities for a few minutes for a brief walk when the accident occurred. As he crossed Sheridan road a yellow colored machine speeding south in the drive struck him. He was hurled to the north lane and was hit a second time by the car of Liston Lange, 35 years old, of 156 Fuller lane, Winnetka, son of the president of the Ferguson & Lange Foundry company. The first machine, which killed Mr. Johnson, sped on. Mr. Lange was exonerated of blame by Summerdale police.

Advertising Man Killed.

James L. Barclay, 32 years old, 1065 Hollywood avenue, president of the Bolyn company, an advertising concern with offices at 185 North Wabash avenue, died yesterday in the Edgewater hospital of injuries received on Friday when he was struck by an automobile while crossing Kenmore avenue at Hollywood avenue. Charles McCormick, 6378 North Hermitage avenue, was the driver.

The deaths of Johnson and Barclay and three others increased the Cook county motor toll for 1931 to 372. The victims:

Joseph Parchairi, 18 years old, 5247 South Tripp avenue. Fatally injured when the auto in which he was riding struck a truck parked in Kildare avenue near Archer avenue. Bonina Angelo, 19 years old, 5310 South Kildare avenue, the driver, escaped injury.

Mrs. Antoinette Matuska, 61 years old, 1334 Fisk street. Killed when struck by a truck while crossing the street in front of her home. John W. Masa, 28 years old, 1027 West 20th place, was the driver.

Dave Whittaker, colored, 63 years old, 4320 South State street. Died in the Provident hospital of injuries incurred on March 31 when struck by an auto while crossing the street near his home.

Ralph Moore, 6 years old, 7031 Harper avenue, was taken to the Jackson Park hospital last night suffering from internal injuries as the result of two accidents. The auto of a hit and run driver collided with a milk wagon. A wheel was torn from the wagon, but the vehicle remained upright near the curb at 71st street and Stony Island avenue. The boy climbed on the wagon as another automobile, driven by David Hansen, 1527 East 74th street, struck it, turning it over. The boy was pinned in the wreckage.

D. F. KELLY TO GIVE RADIO ADDRESS ON LOSSES BY STORES

That portion of the consumer's dollar set aside by the merchants of the country to cover the losses they sustain in the great volume of merchandise purchased and then returned will be made the subject of a radio address by D. F. Kelly, president of The Fair, at 8 p. m. on April 29 over a nation-wide hookup. Mr. Kelly will make the talk as president of the National Retail Dry Goods association.

The purpose of the address will be to instruct the buying public in one method of keeping retail prices at their present low level. Experiences of retail stores in all parts of the country will be represented in Mr. Kelly's exposition of the process of goods being stocked, sold, returned for credit or refund, placed back in stock and then sold again.

ROB FOUR SOUTH SIDE GAS STATIONS.

Four gasoline filling stations were robbed by three gunmen who toured south side neighborhoods early yesterday. The four stations are located at 10001 Torrence avenue, 2000 West Garfield boulevard, 4659 South Western avenue and at Archer and Western avenues.

GUARD OIL FIRMS AGAINST ATTACK BY COMMUNISTS

Producers Warned of Plot by Reds.

Austin, Tex., April 25.—(AP)—Warned of an alleged communist plot to blow up refineries, pipe lines, and storage tanks, several oil companies operating in the midcontinent field disclosed tonight that extra precautions had been taken to guard their properties.

Frank Hamer, Texas Ranger captain, issued the warning recently in a confidential letter sent to executives of 38 companies operating in Texas. His letter was passed on to officials and oil companies in Oklahoma and Kansas, becoming public today.

Refuses to Tell Source.

The Ranger captain refused to divulge the source of his information concerning the alleged plot and expressed indignation that his confidential letter had been given out. In the letter he said a large quantity of nitroglycerin had been stolen from store houses in the oil fields and apparently was in the hands of the asserted plotters.

E. E. Plumley, superintendent of refineries for the Magnolia Petroleum company and head of the Beaumont refinery, said he had increased guards on the companies' properties. Advices from Houston said at least one ship channel refinery had strengthened the night guard around its plant.

Two Explosions in Kansas.

Jake Sims, chief of police at Seminole, Okla., notified 40 oil companies in that state of Capt. Hamer's warning. A nitroglycerin magazine near Seminole blew up last Tuesday night, and subsequently 90 quarts of the explosive was found buried near Oklahoma City. Sims attributed the blast to "common thieves" attempting to rob the magazine and expressed the belief that communists were not involved.

Capt. Hamer said that two explosions had occurred in Kansas since he issued his letter. He said he was unable to give any details about the Kansas blasts.

IT'S HARD LIFE IN NICARAGUA, U. S. MARINE TELLS US

Natives Fear Yanks Seek to Steal Possessions.

BY THOMAS SWIFT.
[Private, U. S. Marines.]
[Received via wireless by Fred H. Schnell, 4915 N. Sawyer-av.]

MANAGUA, Nicaragua, April 25.—This city of Managua is quieting down after the recent earthquake, which affected the weak and the brave alike. The natives are still thinking that God brought wrath upon them because the American marines are in their country, and to make it more convincing to them the quake happened in their most holy week.

It seems strange to them that only a few of the marines were killed or hurt while more than 3,000 of their own people were killed and many more injured. Dark glances are directed toward the marines from all eyes. Some are gaining courage and are trying to rebuild their business.

Afraid of American Doctors.

The natives are still afraid of the "men with the needles," as they call our doctors who injected serums into their arms. They do not even seek food at the marine base any more, but are looking for new haunts.

People in the United States may think that the marines had a snap during the quake, but such was not the case. Just imagine yourself with one companion trying to prevent a crowd of half crazed people from passing a certain place. Many a prodding with the bayonet was necessary to convince them they should not pass, but what mattered that to them?

They think the marines are trying to rob them of their possesions. The people in the United States also may wonder why these people always fight and kill. One chief reason is that they never have enough to eat.

Pay Is 30 Cents a Day.

How can you expect to live on 30 or 40 cents per day, and raise a family besides. That is the rate for labor in this conutry. Another reason is that all persons want to become presidents, lawyers, high officials without expending any effort. Another reason is unemployment. They look after their families first; hence the plundering.

The dry season is still on, which is lucky for all, otherwise a great epidemic of disease would have spread because of the dampness.

The injured people, with broken legs or arms which they tried to set themselves, can now be seen with their limbs turned in any direction but the right way. They cannot afford good medical treatment, so they now will have to go through life in misery. Many would have been better off had they died.

Position Not Secure.

The marines' position is not altogether secure. The town of Managua and vicinity seems to be just the shell of the earth. Holes have been drilled into the ground but after 9 feet down —a blank! Nothing was discovered beyond that.

The aviation ground is a little thicker, being 22 feet before reaching the big hole. The lake of Managua has dropped 7 feet, so the hole must be filling up now.

The marines are still guarding the dead in the middle of the town. Many bodies have not been brought up yet, but they may be taken out as the ruins are cleared away. The bodies are not recognizable because many of them are badly mangled and covered with dust.

GIRL CASHIERS, HELD UP, YIELD $2,500 IN STORE

Two armed men, unnoticed by 15 customers and 10 clerks in the L. Fish Furniture company store at 1906 South Wabash avenue, slipped into the store office at the west end of the building last evening and compelled two girl cashiers to surrender $2,500 to them. They fled through a rear door into State street and escaped in an automobile before the girls, Caroline Goldstein of 5551 West Harrison street and Ethel Jackler of 1647 South Ridgeway avenue, could give the alarm.

YOUTH HELD TO GRAND JURY.

Ed Frazier, 17 years old, colored, 1540 North Larrabee street, was held to the grand jury yesterday on two charges of robbery and assault with a deadly weapon, by Judge Francis Allegretti in Boys' court.

REBELS MASS IN HONDURAS FOR DECISIVE BATTLE

One Insurgent Wing Flees to Hills.

[Copyright: 1931: By the Associated Press.]

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras, April 25.—A decisive battle, which the government hopes will break the back of the Honduran revolution, is expected soon, the war office announced tonight.

The revolution, the official announcement stated, cannot be considered ended as long as the main rebel army under Gen. Ferrera remains unbeaten. It is with this army the government expects the Loyalists troops soon to clash, and it is hoped a decisive defeat will bring the revolt to an end.

Gen. Ferrera's army, believed to consist of 500 men, was reported earlier today to have reached Rodeo, a hill settlement not far from San Pedro.

Rebels Still in Retreat.

The rebel army which fled into the mountains after having been repulsed at Chamelecon was still in retreat today with the federal troops pressing it hard. It was reported the rebel, Gen. Mariano Gonbalez, covering the rebel's rear guard, had been killed.

Federal troops which arrived to reinforce the small detachment at San Pedro today found that the rebels had looted all the stores and that the merchants were preparing to file vigorous protests with the government. Reinforcements were also sent to La Ceiba and Trujillo.

A government decree published today placed all national funds at the disposal of an executive committee for the purpose of waging war against the rebels.

Responsibility for the rebellion, it was charged today by Honduran Congressman Plutarco Lunoz, should be placed upon the shoulders of "communists coming in from Cuba." He charged these were in league with Gen. Sandino, the Nicaraguan insurgent leader.

Find Bodies of Americans.

PUERTO CABEZAS, Nicaragua, April 25.—(AP)—The bodies of J. L. Pennington and J. N. Phelps, slain in the outlaw raid on the post at Logtown, were located yesterday and are being shipped homeward on the steamer Amapala tomorrow.

Bodies of the other Americans who were killed in the raid were buried near the spot. It was announced that it would be impossible to ship them to the United States now because of a Nicaraguan law which forbids disinterring and shipping bodies once they have been buried.

A landing party from the U. S. S. Asheville at Cape Gracias a Dios reported today that the rumor that Gen. Sandino had captured the place was without foundation.

BRITISH PRINCES REACH PORTUGAL ON WAY HOME

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LISBON, Portugal, April 25.—The prince of Wales and his brother, Prince George, homeward bound from South America, arrived at Lisbon today aboard the liner Arlanza, which was escorted into port by the British cruiser Kent and Portuguese destroyers. Airplanes soared overhead. The heir to the British throne received British Ambassador Sir Claud Russell and representatives of President Antonio Carmona aboard ship.

Later the prince of Wales visited President Carmona, decorating him with the Order of the British empire.

After a round of official receptions, concluding with a banquet, the princes will embark tonight on the Kent for Bordeaux, whence they will fly to Paris and home.

OFFICERS HUNT TWO CARD MEN FOR FARO DEATH

"I didn't see his face clearly," Dr. Bon Durant said, "but I'd know him if I met him again in the dark. He had a hard voice and was a tough looking customer."

Satisfied that Canniff and his daughter would or could not tell more, Sheriff Walter L. Fegan authorized their release. The 62 year old father, sprucely dressed in a gray fedora, gray tweed coat, and white spats, left for his home with the young widow on his arm, intending tomorrow, he said, to visit the Main street mortuary where Perry's body lies to arrange for his funeral. Perry was 40 years old and a native of Hutchinson, Kas.

Widow Grows Reticent.

For the most part, Mrs. Perry told a straightforward story, police said, but when the questioning veered to her knowledge of the slayers she grew stubbornly reticent.

Living for forty minutes after being shot, Perry had cursed the officers who asked him to name his slayers. He did say of his assailant, "He was a friend of mine."

"George wouldn't tell you anything about who the man was and I won't either," was the widow's stubborn reflection of Perry's dying attitude.

"I knew George Perry since I was a 12 year old kid in grammar school in Chicago," she began. "Since our marriage, he always gave me everything I wanted and I won't betray his secrets now."

The couple met, it developed, when Perry, already a card sharp with a reputation, called at her father's home in the Woodlawn district where Ruth was then a girl in pigtails. Perry and her father had business interests together, Ruth said, adding that she was ignorant of the nature of the business. As a girl of 18 years, Ruth married Charley Harris, a mechanic, by whom she had a son, John, now 8 years old.

Perry Paid for Her Divorce.

"In a way, I guess George broke up my married life with Charley," she admitted. "He and I were friendly before I left Charley and he paid for my divorce in Chicago. Then, a year ago in March, two days after I got my divorce in Chicago, George brought me to South Bend and we were married in the First Methodist church."

Life thereafter was an idle and easy affair for Ruth, she said. George indulged her every extravagance without complaint and, when she asked for pocket money, carelessly peeled bank notes of $100 and $1,000 denomination off his large roll and told her to spend as she liked.

"For a long time I had no idea where he got his money," Ruth averred. "When he ran short he would take a trip to New York, go to a safety deposit vault in some bank there and come back with another supply."

She Grows Suspicious.

It was on last Jan. 23, two days after the faro swindle in Springfield hotel, that the wife first became suspicious of her husband's occupation, according to her story. Perry had sent her from Chicago to her father's home in South Bend, explaining he had business in Springfield.

On Jan. 23, he telephoned her with instructions to meet him in Michigan City and, when they were reunited there, told her he was off to Europe, taking her along. They went to New York and on Feb. 19, after several visits to the mysterious safety deposit box, boarded a cabin liner for Cherbourg.

"The papers were full of the faro game story at that time," Ruth explained. "One day before we sailed I ventured to ask George if he knew anything about the Springfield swindle. He cut me off short, saying, "You've got everything you want; now act your age, and quit asking foolish questions."

Until they boarded the boat, Perry seemed nervous, irritable and extremely anxious for his personal safety, Ruth continued. Once in Europe he became carefree and took her the rounds of the pleasure resorts, visiting Cannes, Mentone and Monte Carlo on the Riviera and financing an expensive shopping expedition for her along the Rue de la Paix in Paris.

Return to South Bend.

They had been abroad about six weeks when Ruth's mother became ill and at her father's cable from Canniff died two weeks ago. From South Bend they returned home. Mrs. then until last night, Perry remained secluded for the most part in his father-in-law's home, passing his time in puttering with painting and carpentry. The one exception to this routine occurred a week ago when, at her expression of desire for a car, he took her to Detroit by plane, purchased and presented her with an expensive brougham, and drove her home in it.

"George was busy all day yesterday painting kitchen cupboards," the widow said, in narrating events leading up to the murder. "That evening he seemed tired and suggested a drive downtown in the fresh air to get rid of the turpentine fumes in his lungs."

They drove downtown, stopping at a cobbler's for a pair of his shoes. Returning about 7:45 p. m., soon after nightfall, Perry drove into the garage and remained at the wheel to shut off the ignition and lock the gear shift, while she got out to lock the folding doors of the garage, facing on the alley.

Gun Flash, and Perry Falls.

"I locked the doors from the outside and was walking around the garage towards the house when George came out of the single door ahead," she said. "He turned half way, as if to beckon me, when I saw a flash from the corner of the brick garage next door. With the flash there was a report and George fell."

The wife ran screaming to a neighbor's house, she said. Meanwhile her father, half undressed in an upstairs bedroom, heard the shot, ran outside and stood over Perry until the police arrived. The dying man answered questions of his father-in-law and the officers with curses.

The bullet had entered his skull below the right ear, emerging from his mouth without striking his teeth or lips. He died in the Epworth hospital.

Canniff Knew Blacklidge.

Under police examination Canniff added little to what his daughter said. The father declared he had known Perry for eight or ten years and also knew the late John Blacklidge, husband of the former revenue collector, about the same length of time.

"I knew Perry was a con man," Canniff admitted. "He used to play cards in John Blacklidge's drug store, a block and a half from the house I owned that time on 63d street. A lot of Perry's crowd used to hang out there. We all got our boo——, I mean our toilet water there."

When Canniff heard of the faro swindle and saw Perry linked with it under the name of Parker, he was "the most astonished man in the world," he averred. "I knew John Blacklidge died without a nickel and I couldn't understand where his widow raised the $50,000. I didn't fully understand then about the Litsingers' connection with the case."

MRS. BLACKLIDGE ILL.

Mrs. Myrtle Tanner Blacklidge yesterday identified a picture of George L. Perry in the home of Mrs. Gladys Block, 8111 Evans avenue, where she is ill with influenza. Because of her illness she said she will not go to South Bend to identify Perry's body.

"That's the man I knew as Parker," said Mrs. Blacklidge when she was shown Perry's picture. "He was the brains of the gang. I feel he deserved what he got. To me his death is a vindication. People must now be certain I had nothing to do with the swindle—that I was not in on the plot. I feel better now and intend to fight my way back.

"Perry's death clears up something which has baffled me; that was his knowledge of my life and career. I could never understand where he got his information until I saw the name of his father-in-law, John Canniff, in the story of Perry's death. I recognized the name as that of a man who lived near my late husband's drug store and who talked with him by the hour. Perry, or Parker, as I knew him, undoubtedly got the information from his father-in-law."

Litsingers Are Reticent.

Edward Litsinger, member of the board of review, who advanced the $50,000 lost in the game, did not see Perry, as he remained in the lobby of the St. Nicholas hotel during the game. He could not be reached yesterday, but was not expected to go to South Bend, as he could not identify the slain man.

Fred Litsinger, nephew of the reviewer, who also accompanied Mrs. Blacklidge to Springfield and carried the money, saw all three men. He said he was not interested in the matter and that he would not go to South Bend.

A safety deposit box belonging to Canniff in Washington Park National bank was found not to have been opened since August, 1929.

GUNPLAY PUTS POLICE ON TRAIL OF GANG; NAB 5

The accidental firing of a gun by a young hoodlum showing off before his girl friends yesterday put the police on the trail of a gang which they believe is responsible for a number of west side holdups.

The youth sought by the police is Jack Stanze, 19 years old, who accidentally fired his gun while riding in an automobile with Ruth Gertzken, 15 years old, 3147 West 15th street, and Muriel Blumenthal, 15 years old, 3315 West 19th street, and three young men. The bullet struck the Blumenthal girl in the foot.

The girls and the three youths were captured and after questioning them the Lawndale police went to an apartment at 2335 West 21st place where they found jewelry valued at $2,000. The three youths held are Edwin Ptaj, 16 years old, 2607 West 23d place, who dropped a revolver in his attempted flight; Stanley Wynakowski, 20 years old, 2421 South Albany avenue, and Sazier Richman, 15 years old, 1442 South Spaulding avenue.

EXTINGUISH LOOP FIRE TWICE.

Fire broke out twice yesterday in a ventilation shaft at the Heyworth building, 29 East Madison street. While smoke spread through the building, firemen quickly extinguished the fire.

WOMAN CASHIER LOSES PAY ROLL TO TWO BANDITS

Two Chicago women were victimized by gunmen in two daylight robberies yesterday. One was Miss Anna Wolff, 2029 Lawler avenue, cashier for the George H. Wolff Motor Transport company, 4515 Armitage avenue, who was robbed of $1,175 by two bandits who took the money she had just withdrawn from a bank to meet the company pay roll.

Miss Wolff was stepping into her automobile in front of the Pioneer Trust and Savings bank, 4000 West North avenue, when the two men approached and seized her purse containing the pay roll money. As she started to scream one of the bandits slapped her face, frightening her into silence. The gunmen escaped with two companions who sat in an automobile parked nearby.

A robber, posing as a delivery man for a loop department store, forced his way into the home of Mrs. Joseph Kominsky, 200 North Mayfield avenue, and escaped with cash and jewelry valued at $2,000. Entering the front door, he pushed Mrs. Kominsky and a colored maid aside and went to the bedroom, where he took a diamond ring and two wrist watches.

CHARGE HOLDUP, SHOOTING TO GET DIVORCE MONEY

Ex-Convict, Victim's Wife Are Held.

New York, N. Y., April 25.—[Special.]—A faded woman of 37 and a 22 year old ex-convict were held without bail when arraigned in Long Island City court today on charges of wounding the woman's husband, probably fatally, in a holdup staged to finance a Reno divorce.

The woman, Mrs. Amy Conlin of Astoria, described by police as a former cabaret entertainer, wept as she stood before Magistrate Peter M. Daly. But her "boy friend," sleek Jimmy De Pew, has carried himself with an air of braggadocio throughout the arraignment.

When Magistrate Daly asked the detectives in the case about the condition of John T. Conlin, 41, the husband, who is in St. John's hospital, he was told that he was "expected to die at any moment." The magistrate then adjourned the case until Friday.

Earlier in the day the woman admitted that last Sunday night De Pew, who in a number of ardent love letters found in his possession she called her "Sonny Boy," had called her up and said: "I'm coming over to rob your husband."

Although, she said, they had discussed a plan to stage a holdup, she got "cold feet," and begged him to desist. But he told her that he would carry out the plan, she declared. He promised, however, to use a toy pistol, she added.

De Pew, a tall blond youth with a few wisps of hair on his upper lip, was asked whether the proceeds of the holdup were to have been used to get a divorce in Reno for Mrs. Conlin.

ARRESTED IN $14,000 SHORTAGE; ASSERTS PONIES GOT MONEY

Sigmund O. Schmidt, 27 years old, was arrested and taken to the detective bureau yesterday on a charge of larceny by bailee brought against him by H. J. Lukas, president of the Northwestern Terra Cotta company, 2525 Clybourn avenue. Schmidt, according to the charge, disappeared last December after his accounts with the terra cotta concern were found to be short $14,000. Schmidt admitted his guilt, stating that "the ponies got most of the money."

S. O. SCHMIDT. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

"I guess that was about it," he replied indifferently.

Mr. Conlin, the husband, was held up as he entered the hallway of his home at 2 a. m. Monday. The holdup man took $63 and an Elks ring from him and, according to a short affidavit, demanded more. When the victim, who had $200 more, refused to hand it over, the robber shot him in the spine.

De Pew, who, police say, admitted the shooting, declared it was accidental, claiming his pistol went off accidentally when Mr. Coulin struggled with him.

Police Raid Stag Party; Seize 2 Men and 4 Girls

A police squad led by Sergt. Thomas Harrison of the Irving Park station broke up a stag gathering last night in a hall at 3354 North 74th avenue and sent 450 spectators home disappointed. An allegedly lewd film was being exhibited. Police seized Jack Broad of 3852 North Sayre avenue, Elmer C. Anderson of 3135 Natoma avenue, and four girls.

ARRAIGN HEIRESS ON CHARGES SHE SLEW HER LOVER

Flint, Mich., April 25.—[Special.]—Miss Helen Joy Morgan, 27 years old, former Chicagoan and heiress to the $500,000 estate of her mother, Mrs. Carrie Morgan, was arraigned in police court today on a charge of murdering her sweetheart, Leslie Casteel.

On the advice of her attorneys Miss Morgan stood mute, declining either to plead guilty or not guilty, and the court set her examination for May 1. She was ordered held meanwhile in the Genesee jail.

After the arraignment the Flint police found two witnesses who contradicted some of the more important points in her story of the killing of Casteel, whose body was found, bullet riddled, near the Glenwood cemetery.

She asserted that she had never seen or fired the pistol before. This was controverted by the new witnesses, Amos Farrell and Basil Rowen, clerks in the Charles H. Miller Hardware company store. They said that she entered the store early in January with the pistol, an automatic, bought shells for it, had it cleaned, and then asked for instructions on how to shoot it. The clerks added that they had demonstrated to her exactly how it worked and that she had fired it for practice.

Miss Morgan said that she formerly attended the Englewood High school in Chicago and had relatives in that city. She refused, however, to tell who they were, as she "did not want their names dragged into this."

CIVIL SERVICE IS AMENDED TO AID VETERANS

Washington, D. C., April 25.—(AP)—President Hoover issued an executive order today amending civil service rules relating to veterans' preference.

Under the amendments, honorably discharged soldiers, sailors, and marines will have five points added to their earned ratings in examinations for entrance to classified government service.

In the cases of applicants for entrance examinations who are honorably discharged and who establish by official records a service connected disability, and who on account of this disability are not qualified but whose wives are qualified, the wives will have ten points added to their ratings in examinations.

REFUSES CHARITY; TRIES SUICIDE.

Too proud to accept charity, although unemployed, Linus Larson, 57 years old, yesterday attempted to end his life in his home at 10547 Avenue N by inhaling gas from a stove. He was taken to the county hospital, where it was said he will recover.

MYSTERY MAN AT THE HELM OF HOOVER FORCES

Californian Appears on Political Scene.

Washington, D. C., April 25.—(AP)—Organization of the Hoover forces looking to the renomination of the President by the Republicans next year is under way with Raymond Benjamin of San Francisco, a personal friend of Mr. Hoover, taking a prominent rôle.

RAYMOND BENJAMIN.

Benjamin came to Washington last winter and has established a law office here. He has no direct relation with the Republican national committee. However, his recent activity and conversations with Republican leaders close to the administration have given these party chieftains the understanding that Benjamin is looking after the political fences of the President.

Refuses to Discuss Subject.

Benjamin, a veteran in politics, declined to discuss the subject other than to say he was interested in politics as a pastime.

As for his relations with the President, Benjamin concedes he is certainly friendly to Mr. Hoover but he insists his coming to Washington to establish a law office in a building near Republican national committee headquarters was of his own volition.

Benjamin came to the capital during the 1928 campaign to assist in the Hoover election campaign. Because of his close relationship with the President his present activity is regarded by Republicans as indication of an intention on the part of Mr. Hoover to follow the age old custom of standing for a second term. However, Benjamin says he has received no indication whatever from Mr. Hoover of an avowed intention to run for reëlection.

Since the close of congress Benjamin has been in frequent consultation with the Republicans known to be friendly to Mr. Hoover's administration.

Doubt Wisdom of Move.

While his activity is regarded by most party workers as indicative of Mr. Hoover's intentions, others are somewhat skeptical of the wisdom of such an open move. Nevertheless, the Republican regulars concede it would be unusual if Mr. Hoover did not stand for renomination and almost as unusual if he were not renominated.

Benjamin's arrival here during the winter created considerable speculation after his visit at the White House. He was spoken of as a possible secretary to the President and as an adviser. He merely smiles at all inquiries.

"Just smoke it in your pipe," says Benjamin, "that you will never see me in public life. I have wanted to establish a law office here for many years. What is unusual about that? I expect to be here long after this administration has ended."

SWALLOWS POISON AND DIES.

Mrs. Elizabeth Theithart, 42 years old, died yesterday in the Grant hospital two hours after she had gone to the basement of her home at 2142 Lewis street and swallowed a quantity of poison.

Winners in County Spelling Bee

[TRIBUNE Photo.]

GIRL OF 14 WINS IN FINAL COUNTY SPELLING MATCH

Victor Is Sister of Former Champion.

Katherine Cray, 14 years old, brought more spelling honors to the Cray family yesterday by missing only two words in the finals of the spelling contest for the Cook county schools, thus winning the first prize. Her brother, William Jr., 15 years old, was the champion last year. Eighty-four children took part in this year's final contest, held in the county building.

A member of the family who received as many congratulations as Katherine, was her father, who taught Katherine and William how to spell. He is the principal of a two room school, the Sunset Ridge school, district 29, at Sunset Ridge road and Northfield avenue, where Katherine is a pupil in the eighth grade. Last year he taught the one room school, Brown's school, which was the alma mater of William Jr., and which has been superseded by the Sunset Ridge school.

A Teacher of Champions.

Not only has Mr. Cray made his own children champions. For the last four years he has produced first prize winners in Cook county's spelling bee, the previous two being products of Northbrook school. He himself can also claim some distinction as a speller, for he won an oral spelling bee in the sixth grade back in Vermont. Two younger Crays already are showing talent as spellers, he says.

The second prize winner was Emily Gatzke, 11 years old of the seventh grade, who won a silver instead of gold medal, and earned a banner for the Fairview school, District 72, Niles Center, another two room school. Emily is the daughter of Edward Gatzke, a farm laborer. She won fourth place in last year's contest. Her teacher, Mrs. Eleanor Sonne, who has been at the Fairview school as pupil or teacher since she was 6 years old, said that Emily and her little brother, Edward, in the second grade, are "natural spellers."

Falls to Third Place.

Edna Weinberger, 13, in the eighth grade of Midlothian school, District 143, won second place last year, but six words caused her downfall this year, and she ended in third place.

The six words which Edna misspelled were "salacious," which she spelled "solaceous"; "pulchritude," "dermatitis," "colossal," "archaic," and "permissible."

Although there were 37 perfect papers in the first test in the final contest out of 84 papers, the largest percentage of perfect papers on record in the county, there were none in the last test. Even Katherine, the winner fell down on "phraseology" and "archaic."

EXONERATE YOUTH AT INQUEST.

A coroner's jury yesterday exonerated Robert Lense, 14 years old, 7430 Ingleside avenue, in the death of Norval Pierce Jr., 16 years old, 6913 Harvard avenue. The youths engaged in a fist fight on Thursday. Pierce died on Friday of a rupture of the spleen. Witnesses testified that Lense had struck his opponent only on the face and chest.

HOOVER LEAVES FOR CEREMONY AT CAPE HENRY

Will Honor First White Colonists to Reach U. S.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 25.—[Special.]—President and Mrs. Hoover, accompanied by a small party of friends, left Washington this afternoon aboard the department of commerce inspection boat Sequoia for Cape Henry, Va., to participate in the ceremonies tomorrow commemorating the 324th anniversary of the landing at that place of the first white colonists in America.

The ceremonies probably will be over within an hour. The presidential party then will start on the return cruise to Washington, where they are scheduled to arrive at the White House in time for breakfast Monday.

Only Few Friends in Party.

Because the Sequoia is small, President and Mrs. Hoover took only a few friends. In the party were Dr. and Mrs. Vernon Kellogg of this city, Dr. Robert A. Millikan of Pasadena, Cal., internationally famous physicist and Nobel prize winner in 1923; Col. Campbell Hodges and Capt. Russell Train, military and naval aids, respectively, and Capt. Joel T. Boone, White House physician.

The navy's seagoing tugboat Keyadian will convoy the President's boat on its journey. Several secret service men will be aboard.

Backs "Better Homes" Movement.

Prior to his departure President Hoover issued a statement urging the warmest support of the American people for the better homes week beginning tomorrow.

"The better homes movement," said the President, "has for several years played a highly important part in encouraging a more beautiful home architecture, improved decoration of house interiors, more practical kitchen arrangement, better planning of gardens, and in every way an enhancement of the comfort and attractiveness of home life."

FINED FOR INDECENT PICTURES.

Russell Combs, 20 years old, 7839 South Union avenue, was fined $100 by Municipal Judge Allegretti yesterday for displaying indecent pictures. Six men who were with him when he was arrested at 58 West Washington street were released.

THE STATE AND THE INDIVIDUAL.

From the first of June the new penal code formulated by the Fascist government of Italy will go into effect. It will take the place of the so-called Napoleonic code in force for over a hundred years. The general significance of the change and the character of the new code may be best understood by reference to the following statement made by the Fascist minister of justice, who fathers the new law.

He asserts that the individual is not the end of life and of all social activity, but, on the contrary, that society, considered as an organism composed of indefinite series of generations, and the state, which is the juridical organization of society, have their own ends for which they exist. The individual, in this theory, is an infinitesimal and transitory element of the social organization, to which he must subordinate his action and existence. The individual is only a means toward social ends which far outlast his own life.

We could state the idea more briefly: The state does not exist for the man, but the man for the state.

That in one phraseology or another is the principle of all autocracies, of all tyrannies. Louis XIV. put it most succinctly, "L'état, c'est moi" (I am the state). Il duce might make the same assertion, but times have changed. A more elaborate formula has to be found in our age in spite of the recrudescence of autocracy in some countries since the great war. After all, the fall of Alfonso is not without meaning and the realities of such despotisms as fascism and sovietism have to array themselves with a less stark candor than did the Grand Monarch.

But autocracy is autocracy in any costume. It has always justified itself by some metaphysical or religious dogma of the state. Sovietism is theoretically the dictatorship of the proletariat, but in fact it is the dictatorship of a few men who control the machinery of a very small minority of the Russian people and are supported by armed force. The proletariat is a myth, Stalin and his political bosses, with their secret police, their Red army, and their army of privileged officials and propagandists are the state. Mussolini is the Italian state, as fully as Louis XIV. was the French state of the 18th century.

This theory of a transcendental existence, labeled the state, is a useful alibi for tyranny. It is used to induce the individual to submit his conscience and his independence of thought, his liberty, in short, to the dictates of other men like himself. Socialism is the great modern exponent of the mystical virtues of the state. All the errors and shortcomings, the failures and excesses of humanity the socialist would cure by reposing power in this mysterious entity. That the state is nothing more nor less than a number of fallible human beings of precisely the same nature as the people they rule is not a truth a socialist likes to face. But fascism and sovietism could not survive without this hocus pocus.

Fascism says the individual exists only for and in the state and for his highest good must merge his being in it. In actuality this means that the individual must accept the ideas of another individual named Mussolini. The same system is worked out under different phraseology in soviet Russia. Stalin and his little group of political supporters are this mysterious thing called the state in Russia. Mussolini and his group are the state in Italy.

The game is an old game. In favorable circumstances it works for a time. But the whole force of man's enlightenment and progress is against it and it cannot survive. The American faith in the individual, in the freeman, belongs to the age of science and spreading knowledge. Sovietism and fascism represent a reaction which cannot persist. The state is nothing but men who control the forces of government. There is nothing sacred about it. The state is human force and human fallibility. The state is job holders and politicians, seeking to hide their own interests and their own frailties behind a grandiose illusion. The state is government, and government is by and for individuals. Individuals need government. Therefore they create government and it exists for them and by their will. But when a group of individuals wish to impose their will on others a theory that the ruled exist for the state is sometimes a useful fiction. In Russia and in Italy conditions have made this fiction available, but it is an untimely fallacy and will not endure the light of modern intelligence.

NOW THE COURTS.

Under Gov. Emmerson the abuses of our parole system are being corrected. Under State's Attorney Swanson the prosecution of crime is being strengthened. Legislation is in prospect to correct the flagrant abuse of bail and to make other improvements in criminal procedure. These together represent a substantial advance in the campaign against crime. The advance will not be halted. The next movement should be upon the judiciary.

Criticism of the judiciary is neither agreeable nor in every respect convenient. It should at all times be considerate of the respect due the judicial function, which is the foundation of public order. But knowledge of actualities in Chicago and in Illinois discloses a deterioration of judicial competence and integrity. That some cases of notorious unfitness exist not merely in the lower but in the higher courts the responsible membership of the bar do not deny, in spite of the presence of judges of the highest character. The influence of unscrupulous politics extends widely through the judiciary, and is alarmingly revealed not only in the ordinary administration of the law but in the much more important and far reaching field of judicial construction. Specific instances could easily be cited and will be upon appropriate occasion, but in the meanwhile the general condition should have the serious consideration of the bar, of the organizations concerned with the administration of the law or civic conditions, and of all citizens intelligently aware of their own and the community's interest in the independence and integrity of the courts and the due protection of private and public rights.

Maladministration or corruption in the executive branch of government or by the legislative branch is more conspicuous but less serious than in the judicial. It is easier to disclose and to rebuke and correct. Deterioration in the judiciary is as insidious as it is dangerous to the common welfare, and to combat it effectually calls for unusual courage and public spirit. But the need for the unflinching weeding out of the unfit and of a general raising of the level of the judiciary has become increasingly plain. It is a duty the good citizenship of Illinois owes itself and one which cannot safely be postponed. For its competent accomplishment the chief responsibility falls upon the legal profession. Its leadership is necessary.

We need better safeguards from political influence and for the secure independence of the conscientious judge. But in the foreground is the duty of removing demonstrated unfitness, an irksome duty but unescapable if our administration and development of legal justice in Illinois is to be put where it ought to be.

AMERICA IN ENGLAND.

The house of commons has passed the second reading of a bill to legalize Sunday movies and other amusements by permitting local authorities to grant licenses for them. The vote was close and the protest of the Sabbatarians emotional and vivid. English liberalism and toleration is shot full of ancient tabus and repressions hanging over from the times when liberty meant that the heel of the dominant sect was on the neck of nonconformity. The same is true of America, but the English are apt to think themselves emancipated.

One plea for continued deliverance from the pagan amusement of the movies on Sunday came from the Rev. Gordon Lang, Labor member from Oldham, and his voice was raised to spare English youth at least one day in the week from the influence of America. If the English young people are subjected to it six days out of seven they'll not be saved by one day clear of it, nor is there good reason why a Labor member should desire this protection. The American staccato must have some value for youth or it would not be a fateful influence. It is not the intention of England to give all its boys the discipline of the public schools or to make them all proconsular at Oxford and Cambridge. The products of these disciplines have served Great Britain well, but the underprivileged can be animated by the strange new sounds and manners which arise in the jazzy republic. Its idiom is provocative, its colors are intense, its spirit bounding, and the noise of its exuberance is at least that of youth. It is all yeast for the dough.

GETTING 'EM YOUNG.

The prohibition bureau in Washington wants schoolbooks revised to emphasize the evil effects of alcohol upon the human body. Laws in 46 states, including Illinois, require instruction in the primary schools in the deleterious effects of alcohol. The prohibition bureau thinks the textbooks are not sufficiently evangelistic in tone. They should leave no doubt in the child's mind of the dangers inherent in a glass of beer or wine.

There is a good deal of ingratitude in this demand. It is probably not much of an exaggeration to say that the prohibition bureau would not be in existence today but for the instruction in the dangers of alcohol which was impressed upon the minds of the children of a previous generation. Much of what they were taught was nonsense and a good deal more of it was a shameless distortion of truth, but it was singularly effective as propaganda. A public opinion was created which was so impressed with the evils of alcohol that it was prevented from making a fair judgment of the possibilities of suppressing the traffic in it by law. It took prohibition to induce many of the school children of twenty years ago to take a drink.

They had been taught that as drugs alcohol and prussic acid are scarcely distinguishable. The folly of exaggeration was never better illustrated. The discovery that a glass of beer did not immediately curdle the insides, petrify the liver, and destroy the higher brain centers led many to think there was no truth at all in what they had been taught and that alcohol was as impotent as soda pop. Three cocktails before dinner in homes of education and refinement is the measure of the pendulum's back swing.

A genuine regard for temperance would leave the education of the young in these matters to the educators. They were forced to commit an outrage upon the minds of a previous generation, the results of which are now apparent and regrettable. They ought not be obliged to make the same mistake twice. Incidentally, the emphasis which formerly was placed upon the physiological effects of alcohol left little time for instruction in any other aspect of physiology and hygiene. No doubt one reason that quacks and patent medicine manufacturers have continued to flourish in an era of unexampled advance in scientific medicine has been the abysmal ignorance of our population concerning the layout of the human body and the functioning of its organs. If less emphasis upon alcohol has improved the instruction in physiology in our schools the results should be all to the good.

PRESIDENTIAL POSSIBILITIES

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING

Dean of Washington Correspondents and Head of The Tribune Bureau at the Capital.

[This is the eleventh of a series of articles discussing the shaping of the national campaign for President to be held in 1932.]

Washington, D. C., April 25.—[Special.]—Let us hark back to an unforgettable scene in the senate. It is the afternoon of Nov. 19, 1919. The debate on the Versailles treaty and the league of nations covenant is drawing to a close. A sudden hush falls upon the chamber, for Borah is observed standing in his place asking for recognition. Senators at their desks cease writing letters and put aside papers. The cloakroom doors open and other senators glide swiftly to their seats. The packed galleries come to tense attention. The Idaho senator, who, with the possible exception of Reed of Missouri, is the only orator in congress ranked by common consent with Daniel Webster, is about to fire the last broadside of the irreconcilables against the treaty.

On that day Borah, in his fifty-fifth year, is in his prime—some, looking backward now, would say at the zenith of his powers. The lines of age have scarcely begun to etch those heavy features and the famous dark mane still lies thick on either side of its central parting. The blue eyes that are wont to sparkle with good humor are grave now as they sweep the galleries and come to rest upon the presiding officer.

Borah, speaking extemporaneously, begins in quiet, measured sentences. He clutches the two sides of his desk lid, which slightly rises as he sways backward. But soon he warms to his work. He points the admonitory finger. He drives home the point with fist thrust into palm.

"In opposing this treaty," he thunders, "I do nothing more than decline to renounce and tear out of my life the sacred traditions which throughout fifty years have been translated into my whole intellectual moral being. I will not, I cannot, give up my belief that America must, not alone for the happiness of her own people but for the moral guidance and greater contentment of the world, be permitted to lead her own life.

"Next to the tie which binds a man to his God is the tie which binds a man to his country, and all schemes, all plans, however ambitious and fascinating they seem in their proposal, but which would embarrass or entangle and impede or shackle her sovereign will, which would compromise her freedom of action, I unhesitatingly put behind me."

With flushed, perspiring face the senator ends and senators, including many on the opposing side, troop about him wringing his hand in testimony of their appreciation of great oratory. Vice President Marshall is seen scribbling a note which presently a page thrusts into the hand of the Idaho senator.

"Even an old mummy on a pedestal," said the Marshall note, "could not remain silent after such a speech."

More than eleven years have rolled by since that day. Mr. Borah is in his sixty-sixth year. The famous mane is thinner, though still scarcely flecked with gray. He rides now at a gentle trot every morning in Rock Creek park—but still he rides. He is serving his fifth term in the senate and is chairman of the foreign relations committee, in which position this foe of the world court and other Hoover policies is loved about as much by Mr. Hoover as Sumner was by Grant, and how much that was Sumner learned when he was removed from the chairmanship.

Like Webster, the Idaho senator throughout nearly all his career in the senate has been classed as prime presidential timber without ever getting any closer to the White House than the offer of the nomination for Vice President, which, again like Webster, he declined. When the Cleveland convention of 1924 was in progress and Mr. Coolidge was in search of a running mate he invited Mr. Borah to the White House.

"Will you accept a place on the ticket?" asked Mr. Coolidge.

"Which place?" countered Borah.

That Senator Borah takes himself seriously is not doubted, though apparently not so seriously as ever to have made an effort to get himself nominated for President. There is the suspicion that he would rather be Borah than President, rather be the great man of the radicals, the great independent, beholden to nobody but himself, rather be the great insurgent than the executive who perforce becomes the champion of regularity against whom others insurge.

The insurgency of Borah has been the cause of a great deal of mental anguish in the Republican party—that is, during three years out of every four. It is a matter of common remark that in the fourth year, when a President is being elected, he is regular enough to suit the stiffest necked standpatter. Nineteen twelve is the exception, for though he refused to follow Roosevelt into a third party, he refused to support Taft, whose nomination he regarded invalid. He was a candidate for reëlection to the senate that year and ran on his own record, and did not vote for any candidate for President. In 1924 he remained regular, refusing to go with the other radicals who supported La Follette as the third party candidate for President.

In between elections there is no telling, least of all by the titular leader of the party, where Borah is going to line up on legislation and other issues of the hour. He is a tariff protectionist, but he has never voted for a Republican tariff bill except the emergency tariff bill for agriculture in 1921. He is commonly found in opposition to administration taxation programs, which he invariably assails as too hard on the poor and too tender on the rich.

"I follow issues, not men," says the senator. "My record shows no inconsistencies of principle. I am a Republican, although many people may not think so, and I have never advocated anything in the senate of the United States that cannot be found in the teachings of the Republican party.

"They say that I have been a Republican only during political campaign. Well, in campaigns parties are proper and desirable. I have not felt that I should go with the party, against my convictions, on questions of fundamental policy."

It used to nettle, pique, and sadden Borah to be called inconsistent. But he has mellowed with the passing years, and, conscious of no inconsistency, he now meets criticism on this score indulgently. Like the Supreme court when it is accused of inconsistency, he takes his placid way comfortable in the reflection that the pygmies who assail him do not understand the constitution. He is somewhat of a constitutionalist himself.

"I am opposed, even if we could secure ratification," said Borah in the senate on March 17, 1914, "to putting into the constitution of the United States a provision of the constitution which is going to be violated 365 days out of the year. . . . For a people to live in open defiance of their fundamental law, for a whole nation to witness day after day and year after year and decade after decade the flagrant evasion of their charter of government is to breed that contempt for order, that disregard for authority, that defiance of law, that indifference to the rights of others which now curses, with a withering, consuming curse, some of the so-called republics to the south. . . ."

No, gentle reader, this is not a speech by Senator Borah against the eighteenth amendment. Senator Borah voted for the eighteenth amendment. This is a speech he made against the nineteenth amendment, conferring the elective franchise on women. He voted against woman suffrage to preserve state rights, he said. And one of his principal reasons for voting for the eighteenth amendment was to preserve rights—the right of Idaho to keep out liquor, which he held could be made effective only by keeping liquor out of all other states.

SPRING STUFF.

THAT in mind is spring eating stuff. Before winter is entirely out of the way the human animal gets a yen for spring stuff. Just why, he cannot tell you, but the desire is there. Some day the scientist will come along and tell him why, but he needs no scientist to tell him of the urge. Something within tells him that.

If he depends on himself, or his neighbors, radishes will be the first spring stuff to become available. Radishes grow very near the top of the ground and that is one reason why they get in so quickly. Almost everything that comes into the home market in the early spring either grows very near the surface of the ground or hangs well up.

The sun must get a fair chance at it. And now the scientists come along and tell us that one of the functions of certain plant cells is to absorb sunshine to change it into chemical substances, and then to store it. Of course, something taught our urges that a long time ago and the scientist comes a little late. How important it is that this sunlight get in just right is shown by potatoes. Those that grow on the surface and store sunlight as a green are poisonous; that is, the green part is poisonous. It has done the wrong thing with its sunlight.

Early radishes are wholesome if they are tender and not too hot. If they are old and tough some of the cells have changed to fiber and some starch to chemicals, such as cellulose, that man cannot use. The objection to hot radishes is that they have condiment features.

Next may come tender young carrots. When they are tender and young, not rank or highly flavored, they can be eaten as radishes are. Probably next will come very young onions. What is said of radishes and carrots applies to young onions growing quickly and developing near the surface of the ground. Most gardens will have English peas right after radishes, and before carrots and onions.

Young peas are filled with a green pigment called chlorophyll, a chemical which is of great assistance in the animal economy. Again we are dealing with a fact which the scientists explained to us centuries after man had learned it. The starch in peas is easily converted into sugar and little of it has been developed into fiber. The good chemicals found there, the digestive organs can easily make available.

The papers have recently had an account of some very desperate people who had to eat grass, as did a famous Biblical character. Well, tender young grass is not such a bad dish. Maybe we would all be better off if we ate more of it. Of course, old grass and hay is another proposition, since man's stomach, unlike that of the cow, is not arranged to get food values out of cellulose. At that, alfalfa hay has value as a human food, but the tenderer it is the more valuable.

The first fruits to get in are the berries. The first of these is the strawberry. It grows near the ground, gets lots of sunshine, needs but little plant, and quickly comes to the ripening. Here is a good place to stop.

DIET FOR A DANCER.

E. C. writes: I am 16 years old and am training to be a dancer. My mother says I do not eat enough strengthening foods. I admit that my meals consist mostly of cakes and sweets.

1. What should I eat?
2. What is good for an excitable person's nerves?

REPLY.

1. On your statement you need to eat more meat, eggs, milk, bread, and cereal. I suspect you also need to do more muscle work, in a gymnasium or elsewhere.
2. An excitable sixteen year old girl given to nerves needs training in relaxation, poise, and self-control.

HAVE YOUR TEST CHECKED.

A Daily Reader writes: Would anything outside of diabetes cause the urine to change color when test is made with Benedict's solution?

REPLY.

There may be other causes. Have your test checked.

TIME TO MOVE IT FORWARD

FROM THE TRIBUNE'S COLUMNS

16 YEARS AGO TODAY

APRIL 26, 1915.

LONDON.—Official dispatches from the front declare that the allies have succeeded in stopping the desperate drive of the Germans on the line near Ypres in Belgium. It is admitted, however, that further attacks are expected. It is believed that a half million new German troops have reached Flanders. The Germans also are making desperate efforts to break the French line near Combres, in the Woevre district, and they claim to have made important advances there.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—"No truce until you agree to pay for the evacuation of Belgium." This is the reply Germany gave to a recent proposal of a truce for peace discussions with Great Britain and France, submitted in the conferences at Rome last week, according to information from a foreign diplomatic source. Among the peace terms which Germany may demand are restoration of colonies seized by the allies, cession of the Belgian Congo or French territory in Africa and neutralization of the Belgian coast.

LONDON. — Reuter's Amsterdam correspondent sends a dispatch concerning the German successes near Ypres, printed by the Frankfurter Zeitung, in which it is admitted that gaseous bombs were employed by the Germans in firing on the allies' trenches. The statement says that the poisonous gases are the German reply to the treacherous projectiles of the English and French constantly observed for many weeks.

30 YEARS AGO TODAY

APRIL 26, 1901.

PARIS.—Count Tolstoi, the Russian savant, is expected in Paris soon. The coming of the Russian author to Paris is construed here as a confirmation of the report some weeks ago that he had been ordered to leave the czar's dominions.

LONDON. — A dispatch from St. Petersburg, dated April 22, says the government has forbidden the exhibition at Moscow of Rapine's life-size portrait of Count Tolstoi, which represents him as a barefoot peasant.

MANILA.—It is reported that the rebel Gen. Cailles, who is now lurking in the mountains of Tayabas, province of Luzon, proclaims himself dictator and the successor of Aguinaldo and announces his intention of continuing the war of extermination.

WASHINGTON. — After conferring with President McKinley and Secretary Root for several hours today the Cuban commissioners are convinced the best thing for the Cuban convention to do is to accept the conditions imposed by congress as set forth in the Platt amendment. They understand fully that until these conditions are complied with the American troops will remain in Cuba and that the present status will remain unchanged.

50 YEARS AGO TODAY

APRIL 26, 1881.

BOSTON.—Mrs. Sarah E. Howell of the Boston Ladies' Deposit bank was convicted of having obtained the money of depositors under false pretenses. She was found guilty on four counts, the maximum possible sentence being a term of ten years at hard labor on each count.

NEW YORK.—The steamship Victoria of the Anchor line, from London, arrived at Quarantine with several cases of smallpox in the steerage. All the cabin passengers and most of the steerage people, numbering nearly 1,000, consented to be vaccinated, but 150 in the steerage refused and were vaccinated by force. The work was done by the quarantine doctors, assisted by the steamer's crew. For a time the scene resembled pandemonium as the immigrants fought the doctors.

CHICAGO.—The annual meeting of the directors of the Home for Incurables was held at the Palmer house and the following officers were elected: President, E. B. Washburne; vice presidents, W. C. Willing, C. H. Schwab, and Mrs. A. F. Blain; secretaries, Mrs. S. H. Stevenson and Mrs. Maria A. Wait; treasurer, Dr. A. P. Gilmore; executive committee, Joseph Stockton, Dr. R. C. Hamill, Mrs. Thomas Wilce, Mr. Schwab, H. N. Higinbotham, Bernard Callagnan, William Deering, and Henry F. Strong.

MORE ABOUT SPARROWS.

Lafayette, Ind., April 16.—I must take issue with the Thomas S. Livsey who knows it all about the English sparrow and writes so confidently in regard to Bob Becker's analysis of the breed. Mr. Becker is too well informed a man, too deeply and actively interested in the preservation of wild life, to be taken lightly, or glibly contradicted, and as one who has studied bird life for many years, lives on a ten acre homestead given over to its protection and is a member of the executive board of the Indiana Audubon society, the Izaak Walton league, and the National Forestry association, I confirm every word that Mr. Becker said and recommend that Thomas S. Livsey become acquainted with more birds than the purple martin before he steps into the public eye to tell us what we don't know about the English sparrow—an alien in this country and developing those traits which so many aliens strut when they adopt the land of the free and the home of the brave as theirs.

The sparrow, as we know the tribe in Indiana, New England, and the country generally, is polygamous—8 or 10 hens to every cock—and being hardy, immune to disease and rearing three or four broods each year, in numbers alone he is a liability, as he outnumbers our song and insectivorous birds 12 to 1. He is a filthy bird in his habits, is lousy and noisy. His benefit to man is negligible.

He is not a weed seed eater as his heavy mandibles testify, and as no so-called house bird is. He is a grain eater almost exclusively, as farmers can tell you, and in no case is he an insect eater, excepting as occasionally he feeds on cabbage worms and others large enough to require no effort to catch. Bluebirds, chickadees, titmice and all hole nesting birds smaller than himself he drives from the boxes put up for them, devours the food in their feeding stations and fouls their drinking places.

Sparrows are skulking, crafty and persistent. The consensus everywhere is that the great decrease in martins is due to sparrows taking their houses. Few birdhouses there are now that do not show one half occupied with the sparrows' bulging nests.

The government does not err when it says what birds should be protected, and what not, to keep alive the small remnant of our valuable ones. The state and federal bird and game laws do not protect the sparrows, blackbirds, cowbirds, and crows. Now starlings have come to further decimate those birds we try to save.

Some states and many counties offer a bounty for sparrow heads. This is not done for gentle, retiring, inoffensive little feathered creatures who take the rooms that other birds do not care for. Specifications for sparrow traps are not sent out in the bulletins of the agricultural department urging that they be made and used to decrease valuable birds.

Protection of our native birds has become a militant task. They should not be invited to our premises unless they are given the safety and care they cannot provide for themselves.

ANNEXATION.

Oak Park, Ill., April 15.—I agree with Austinite and I, too, wish that Oak Park would become part of Chicago. All our alleys out here are paved and we have to keep them clean and are forced to put our garbage in a receptacle to be picked up every other day. I long for the good old Chicago custom of kicking it around the alley until it gets lost. This suburban orderliness gets my goat. I also miss the romantic darkness of Chicago's streets where one may neck one's girl friend or bump off one's enemies without any fear of being seen. Out here we have street lamps every fifty yards, and they are always lighted, it seems to me, and we get no privacy on the streets at all.

We also miss the fun of having a police shakeup every time a new party comes into power. Our chiefs seem to go on forever unless they are found to be efficient or crooked. Efficiency is a way monotonous. Our cops are too darned courteous, too. I love to go into Chicago and hear a few husky cops with a [illegible] inoffensive man or woman. That is my idea of great sport and I miss it very much.

I am also fond of watching a good fire, but seldom see one because the fire department in this town seems so intent on preventing fires and putting them out when they get started. The fire insurance rates are so low out here that salesmen would starve to death if they didn't have Chicago to fall back on for business. I wonder if Austinite and I couldn't get together on Austin avenue and sing our hymn of hate.
S. R. CHASE.

A CONTRAST.

Chicago, April 15.—Since the present law regulating the compulsory school age at 16 is not enforced in Illinois, why seek to pass a law increasing the age restrictions and putting the compulsory school age at 18?

Milwaukee seems to have solved the problem of the working child more satisfactorily. With a population one-third of that of Chicago, Milwaukee has an enrollment of 12,000 in her continuation school, while Chicago's continuation school enrollment is 5,000. But Milwaukee keeps track of her children and takes an annual census of her children. Perhaps this accounts for the fact that Milwaukee has practically no youthful criminals.
CHICAGO EX-TEACHER.

A NICE POINT.

Chicago, April 16.—The TRIBUNE quotes Charles M. Hayes, president of the Chicago Motor club, as saying: "Those who are able to buy their city and state licenses should do so at once." What does he think should be done by those who think that they are not able to buy them; continue driving and ignore the law?
JAMES W. WALKER, M. D.

MONEY AND LIVES WASTED.

Chicago, April 16.—Our latest catastrophe in the intercepting sewer tunnel at 22d and Laflin streets was due to an insufficient supply of gas masks. What does [illegible] is the time to buy ORIENTAL RUGS during NAHIGIAN BROTHERS' great LIQUIDATION SALE!

It is difficult to accurately express with a chart or with words what an outstanding opportunity Nahigian Brothers' Million Dollar Liquidation Sale presents to buy Oriental Rugs. Heretofore Oriental Rugs have maintained a standard of value that is comparable to gold bullion. Nahigian Brothers have, through this sale, reduced this standard value to the lowest point in the history of the Oriental Rug business. The Oriental Rug industry sincerely believes that the prices of Orientals will soon rise to normal or even higher prices. The long duration of the present business depression and the arrival of shipments from the Orient ordered many months ago have made this liquidation necessary. Cash is needed. This sale will live long in the memory of those who participate in it as the most marvelous money-saving event of its kind that has ever occurred.

BAYONETS CHECK ANGRY ROMAN STUDENT THRONG

Collegians Shout Protest Against Belgium.

BY DAVID DARRAH.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ROME, April 25.—In well controlled counter manifestations students of Rome university today swarmed through the streets in long lines protesting against the attitude of Belgian students in behalf of Prof. Leopold Moulin, a Belgian teacher, who was arrested in Milan on April 10 on a charge of anti-Fascist activities in Italy.

The student mobs were escorted by hundreds of police, while several companies of soldiers of the regular army were ready to curb disorders. One group tried to march to the Belgian embassy but was stopped by bayonets. Several were arrested.

Duce Speaks to Students.

Today's demonstration was called by the Fascist party on the university campus, where the throng first assembled to listen to a harangue by Nino di Aroma, the federal secretary of the Roman Fascists. Afterwards they marched to the Palazzo Venezia, and there shouted for Premier Mussolini until he finally appeared on the balcony and addressed them, saying:

"The Italy of the students is always ready to defend the revolutionary régime of Fascism against the stupid calumnies of anti-Fascists."

After another hour of noisy but orderly demonstrations in the streets about the Piazza Colonna the students were quietly dispersed.

The arrest of Prof. Moulin, which has caused a considerable strain on the relationship between Belgium and Italy as a result of the Brussels students' protests, and also because of an appeal by the university committee of the league of nations against Prof. Moulin being tried by a military tribunal, was given further importance today by an interpellation in the chamber of deputies to which Under-Secretary of State Arpinati responded.

Was Followed by Police.

Sig. Arpinati declared that while Prof. Moulin had come to Italy last month as a tourist he had broken away from his tourist group and had traveled alone for the purpose of collecting certain information and which drew the attention of the police.

Police surveillance, Arpinati said, showed that Prof. Moulin had visited Giusto Faravelli, known for his anti-Fascist political activities in Milan. When Faravelli's house was searched, Arpinati said that the police found a letter written by an anti-Fascist named Bassanesi, who recently flew over Milan and dropped anti-Fascist pamphlets. Moulin's name was found on the envelope of this letter, which, Arpinati said, contained instructions for mapping out anti-Fascist activities in Italy.

FORT SHERIDAN OFFICERS HOLD ANNUAL DANCE

The second annual officers' ball at Fort Sheridan was given last evening in the post gymnasium. The 600 guests included the commissioned personnel at Fort Sheridan and the Great Lakes naval station, several of the consuls of foreign nations stationed in Chicago, and society folk along the north shore.

Mexicans in Terror as Earthquake Rocks City

MEXICO CITY, April 25.—(AP)—Two strong earthquake shocks rocked the city of Oxaca this morning, causing considerable panic, but no casualties and no serious damage. Anna Werderitsch, 10 years old, arrived on the Nickel Plate railroad yesterday and was met in the La Salle street station by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Werderitsch, 4920 Princeton avenue, after a journey alone from Duernbach, Burgoland, Austria. It was the first time the father had seen Anna since she was three weeks old, at which time he sailed for America. When he had amassed some savings he sent for his wife four years ago, leaving the child with his wife's parents. She was assisted on her journey from the coast by the Travelers' Aid society.

ROBERT KITTLE FALLS DEAD AS HE PLAYS GOLF

Robert L. Kittle, 57 years old, 5000 East End avenue, railway supply manufacturers' representative, fell dead yesterday of heart disease while playing golf at the Calumet country club.

He and other members of his foursome, W. L. Eulass, Ralph Summers, club champion, and H. L. Miller, had driven from the seventeenth tee shortly before his death occurred. His drive was well over 200 yards. His companions said that he seemed to be in good health during the early part of the round and had played a good game.

Mr. Kittle was a brother of the late Charles M. Kittle, who was president of Sears, Roebuck & Co. at the time of his death in 1928. Mr. Kittle was at one time associated with the Illinois Central railroad. Later, for many years he was sales representative of the Manhattan Rubber Manufacturing company, now a unit of Raybestos-Manhattan. A widow, one son and one daughter survive.

POPE PIUS HEARS REPORT ON U. S. FROM MUNDELEIN

Cardinal Delivers Peter's Pence from Chicago.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

VATICAN CITY, April 25.—American affairs and conditions, both spiritual and material, were discussed by Pope Pius XI. and Cardinal Mundelein at a private audience granted by the pontiff to the Chicago prelate this morning. The interview had been arranged for one hour, but the pope prolonged it 25 minutes more. He showed the deepest interest in the problems of the American people. Cardinal Mundelein made a long exposition of American affairs, and the pontiff asked many questions.

Cardinal Mundelein also reported to the pontiff on the affairs of his archdiocese, and presented to him the diocesan Peter's pence, which he had brought with him. It was not revealed how large this sum was.

Sends Thanks to Chicago.

Pope Pius repeated to the cardinal today his deep satisfaction for the success of yesterday's ceremonies at the inauguration and benediction of the new College for the Propaganda of the Faith, and reiterated his thanks to Chicago for its assistance in the construction of the college.

At the end of the audience Pope Pius presented Cardinal Mundelein with a painting, depicting the Virgin with a child in the background of the landscape and St. Peter and Pope Pius XI. in the pontifical robes kneeling in the foreground.

After the audience Cardinal Mundelein expressed his pleasure at the excellent state of health in which he had found the pontiff.

Looks No Older.

"It is really marvellous," he said. "His holiness does not look any older or changed in the slightest from what I saw him several years ago."

When he had finished his long talk with the pope, Cardinal Mundelein presented his secretary, Father George Casey, and his chancellor, Father McGuire, both of whom had been students in Rome.

Later Cardinal Mundelein paid another call on Cardinal Secretary of State Pacelli and remained for fifteen minutes in conversation with him. Cardinal Mundelein will have several audiences with the pope during the course of next week.

WARN AGAINST 'HEALTH BUREAU' BOOK SALESMEN

An investigation of high pressure salesmen who use the name of the city health department to gain the confidence of prospects was started yesterday by Flint Grinnell, manager of the Better Business bureau, and Dr. Hugh O. Jones, acting health commissioner.

"The salesman," Mr. Grinnell said, "approaches the housewife by asking about her children and stating that he represents the city health department. After gaining the confidence of the housewife he sells her an expensive set of books on the promise of a 'free trial.' When the contract is inspected the victim finds that she has purchased a worthless library at a high cost and that verbal statements of the salesman are not considered."

Dr. Jones stated that all printed matter sent out by the health department is free of charge and that the indorsement of the department has been given to no publishing house.

"When such a salesman appears we would appreciate it if the housewife would make a second appointment and notify the department, so that we may meet the salesman and have him arrested," he said.

"Funeral by Hursen" Of Course

HURSEN has led in number and quality of funerals in Chicago and Cook County for many years. This preference among the 4,000,000 people in the Chicago section is constantly increasing. The reason is obvious.

The unusual Hursen method of conducting funerals, Hursen unusual service, Hursen unusual environment, Hursen unusual elegance, Hursen unusual automobile equipment and, most important of all, Hursen unusual charges, have made "Hursen's the largest and greatest institution of its kind in America."

Hursen Chapels are today recognized as the finest institutions of the kind in this country. The North Side Chapel, particularly, is a masterpiece of beauty, massiveness, facilities and arrangements. It has recently been remodeled. The South Side and West Side Chapels are palaces, convenient for the smallest or the largest funerals.

All Hursen automobile equipment, the finest things on wheels, was built for Hursen along Hursen special designs. Yet the charge is no greater than for equipment far less desirable.

There is no charge for the use of any of the three Hursen Chapels, each equipped with organs of unmatchable tone and size. The charges for Hursen funerals are less than the charges usually made elsewhere. So, call Hursen, of course!

BUSINESS HEADS TO TRY TO CURE ECONOMIC ILLS

Thousands Will Confer on Current Problems.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 25.—[Special]—Can organized business put its house in order?

Can the great men of industry, commerce, transportation, finance and insurance, putting their heads together, devise measures that will prevent the recurrence of economic depressions and stabilize production and employment so as to banish the closed mill and the bread line forever?

Well, they are going to be given a chance to see what they can do about it when the Chamber of Commerce of the United States meets in convention at Atlantic City on Tuesday. Several thousand of the leading business executives of the nation will attend to discuss the problems confronting the business community.

Capitalism on Trial?

Numerous eminent persons, including not a few conservative minded, have arisen in the last few months to observe that the current economic depression throughout the world definitely puts the capitalist system of society on trial. If capitalism, they say, cannot forestall the recurrence of such periods of distress, capitalism will be compelled to make way for some other organization of society. If that should come to pass, communism, many opine, would not be far away.

Those highest in authority confess they do not know what to do about it. President Hoover thinks it too [illegible] to devise a remedy.

"It is my belief," he said in his December message to congress, "that in the passing of this depression, when we can examine in retrospect, we shall need to consider a number of other questions as to what action can be taken by the government to remove possible governmental influences which make for instability and to better organize mitigation of the effect of depression. It is as yet too soon to constructively formulate such measures."

Problem Baffles Congress.

Congress was baffled by the problem. The senate appointed a committee to study the question of insurance against unemployment, but otherwise congress in its two sessions since the beginning of the business depression considered nothing beyond temporary reduction of unemployment and emergency relief of distress. To the larger problem of preventing the recurrence of hard times it did not address itself. It even ignored President Hoover's cautious suggestion that the anti-trust laws be studied to determine whether some of the shackles of business could be removed without impairing the safeguards against monopoly.

In a sarcastic vein Senator James Couzens [Rep., Mich.] challenged the chamber of commerce to take up and solve in its convention the problem of the recurring cycle of economic depression. Mr. Couzens is a multi-millionaire who entertains pronounced views on the unequal distribution of wealth.

Hopes for Instruction.

"I hope these business men," he said, "will instruct congress, before they adjourn, what we are not to do concerning the care of our citizens who are in distress. Congress must realize by now that it is not the function of government to look after its people, but that the care of our people must be reserved to business. We must not have any government in business, because all economic questions must be settled by business, and members of congress may not suggest ways and means to the captains of industry.

"Will these business men tell the American people if they approve of the present trend of accumulation of property in the hands of the few?

"They may observe from treasury department statistics that the distribution of corporate net income is gradually rising until nearly 81 per cent of the entire distribution is going to corporations which have more than $100,000 of annual income. It may also be observed from the same statistics that the distribution of the total income from investments has in the last five years drifted materially to those with incomes of more than $100,000 a year.

Favors "Proper" Division.

"The people of our country will not be so much concerned about who owns America if those who own and control its destinies will see to it that a proper division of the earnings of industry is provided between the workers and capital.

"If business is insistent upon running the government, let them provide ways and means so that all of our citizens will have an adequate income, that they are provided with a decent home and adequate food and clothing. They will then not find any necessity for government interference with business, nor will they find any ground in which to sow the seed of communism.

"What I am fearful of is that there has been such a bankruptcy of ideas and plans to prevent a repetition of existing conditions that business may be simply waiting for these conditions to 'blow over' and then sit complacently until the next cycle of business depression is upon us.

"While they are considering 'new aspects of banking and consumer credit' I wish that they would tell us whether they advise the American people to live beyond their means and to pledge their future income, through installment buying, to such an extent that they become almost economic slaves.

"While considering 'stabilizing industrial employment' I hope they will consider that a number of sound plans have been adopted to insure workers' incomes for a period of forty-eight weeks per year. I hope they will consider that a number of industries have assumed this responsibility and, having assumed the responsibility, have found ways and means of stabilizing production. Unless industry assumes to penalize itself for throwing millions of workers out of jobs they will not feel the responsibility of stabilizing income for the workers.

"I submit that questions of unemployment insurance, old age pensions, the regulations of industry, do not arise in congress unless there is a great need.

Sees Patience Exhausted.

"The public's patience, I think, has already been exhausted, but if, at this great meeting of industrial leaders, concrete proposals are made and put into execution before congress convenes next December it is likely that there will be sufficient public opinion to require congressional action."

To this blast, William Butterworth, president of the chamber of commerce, replied with a counter challenge to Senator Couzens to attend the Atlantic City convention and contribute his proposals for the solution of the problem.

"The chamber of commerce of the United States," said Mr. Butterworth, "is glad to have the suggestion of Senator Couzens. The business men of America, as represented in the chamber, are trying earnestly to find solutions for our major economic problems. It is their hope that through counsel and discussion such as will take place at gatherings like that to be held at Atlantic City they may be able to find answers to some of the questions that are perplexing all of us—government, business, labor, and agriculture alike.

"We believe that sober business management is devoted to reducing unemployment as rapidly as possible without jeoparding the 40 million now at work. The chamber will be glad to have Senator Couzens join 3,000 other business men at Atlantic City, and it welcomes any remedial suggestions he may have to offer."

Mr. Butterworth asserted that "problems growing out of the business depression" would find a foremost place in the deliberations of the business executives at Atlantic City.

FOUR SENATORS GOING TO CHINA TO STUDY SILVER

Pittman to Start Today; Others Later.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 25.—[Special.]—Reminiscent of the oratorical days of 16 to 1, is the quest of four senators which will take place this summer, and which will be initiated tomorrow when Senator Key Pittman [Dem., Nev.] leaves Washington to sail for China, May 16.

The stabilization of silver is the motive which sets him on his journey and which will soon dispatch Senators Claude L. Swanson [Dem., Va.] and Henrik Shipstead [Farmer-Labor, Minn.] to Europe and divert Senator Anthur Vandenberg [Rep., Mich.] to Chicago from his present trip to the Philippines.

All four are members and Senator Pittman is chairman of the senate foreign relations sub-committee on commercial relations with China.

Hoover Silent on Measures.

The trip is a senatorial reaction to the silence with which President Hoover greeted the receipt, a few weeks ago, of the senate's twin resolutions on silver.

One resolution asked the President to call an international conference to agree with other governments, if possible, to suspend the practice of demonetizing silver coins and disposing of them as bullion. The other suggested a loan of some of the treasury's surplus silver bullion to China in order that the Nationalist government might turn it into silver coins.

These two resolutions summarize the silver situation. So low has the price of silver sunk that its value in relation to gold is no longer expressed in the ratio of 16 to 1, but of something like 60 to 1.

Bulk Mined in U. S.

Where the United States comes into the picture is that American capital mines about 70 per cent of the world's production of silver.

And the American interest is involved again in this theory, that the United States must join in suffering from the reduced buying power consequent on the lowered value of silver standard countries. It is this phase of the question which is sending two senators to China, while the other two go to Europe to consult with political and economic leaders concerning a possible international conference.

Among the local members are Attorney General Oscar Carlstrom, State Representative Michael L. Igoe, Sheriff William D. Meyering, Col. A. A. Sprague, Brig. Gen. John V. Clinnin, Brig. Gen. N. U. Co-ed Is Recovering from Effects of Poison

Miss Helen J. Herron, Northwestern university co-ed, was recovering yesterday from the effects of poison she swallowed in her room at the Sigma Alpha Iota sorority house in Evanston on Friday. While police said it was an attempt at suicide, university authorities asserted that Miss Herron had swallowed the poison by mistake.

CLEVELAND CHIEF TELLS HOW CITY HELPS JOBLESS

Administration of the relief work necessitated by the depression was satisfactorily handled in Cleveland by the city administration observing a hands off policy and participating financially through regular organized charitable agencies, Daniel E. Morgan, city manager of Cleveland, told his fellow alumni of Oberlin college yesterday at a luncheon at the Congress hotel. In consequence, he stated, Cleveland has been able to date to keep her expenses within her budget.

"In Cleveland the city council voted $300,000 to help care for the families needing assistance, which was distributed through the associated charities," Mr. Morgan said. "We did not follow the example of our sister city of Detroit, where 45,000 families are being taken care of by the city at a monthly expenditure of nearly $2,000,000. Any city would break down under a burden like that."

RUSSIANS FIND UMBRELLAS DO NO GOOD IN RAIN

The Water Splashes Up and Not Down.

BY HENRY WALES.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MOSCOW, April 4.—[By Mail.]—The thaw has come. Warm weather is melting all this snow and ice and making things underfoot impossible. The unheard of rise in temperature at such a date is the subject of all conversation, and even the Very Oldest Inhabitant can't recall a year when the cold broke so early.

Some prophesy a lot of trouble for the crops, especially if another frigid snap sets in, but others point out that there's lots of room for cold weather elsewhere. It's raining and Doc Johnson, or Ben Johnson, would sure weep his eyes out to see how his umbrella fad has failed to catch on here. I walked up and down the main streets this morning, and although they were crowded with men, women, and children, trudging along with baskets doing their shopping, not a single umbrella did I spot.

Umbrella "Bad News."

A man told me it was "bad news" to carry umbrellas here, that it tainted one with the old régime—like women wearing pearls or gents with diamond scarf pins, or footmen on coach boxes, or crests and coats of arms on stationery.

He was surprised at my ignorance in failing to see the deep, sinister political meaning of carrying a shower stick and told me I would learn.

I did learn, too. I learned that a street car careening through the little valleys in the ice coating of the pavement can throw a spray of slush and water the exact width of any street in Moscow, even the widest thoroughfares like the boulevards.

I learned that a little, measly droshky, hauled by a decrepit old nag too skinny even for the horse butcher, can slew around a little, while moving only eight knots, and still scatter enough slush to ruin your pants on the opposite sidewalk.

All the drain pipes leak and all the cornices drip, and the gutters overflow, and there is plenty of humidity, not to say moisture, or ice water in the air.

Men Wear Skull Caps.

The lads have all shaken their fur hats and donned villainous looking skull caps, like apaches are supposed to wear, and the girls have left off their foxy snow boots of beige colored felt and are wearing rubbers, and the hired hands have ditched their overcoats, made of a sheepskin or two, and are wearing burlap sacking.

The soldiers in their heel length great-coats, are forced to hold up the skirts of the voluminous garments and walk with little mincing steps to avoid treading on the tails which hang down in back, a most unmilitary appearance.

All janitors in hotels, apartments and other buildings shut off all heat and doused the fires with the warmer snap, but it's still pretty sharp. I can see every breath I exhale as I sit here writing.

By getting up and swinging my arms like a milkman on a January dawn every 500 words I can keep my body warm, but the simple expedient of kicking my feet against the desk to keep them warm did not work, as the neighbors complained of the racket.

There's a big rush on in the shops for raincoats, and I saw a line nearly a block long outside a big department store. The raincoats are very nice, and cheap, too, for Russia, and have snappy little leather straps around the collar to seal them hermetically at the throats. The only trouble is they are not waterproof. When I complained, the store manager blandly remarked that all the rubber is needed for industrial purposes and to make the five year plan work and to make the soviet union independent of all these capitalistic countries.

So I bit and asked him, "Then why do you mark them raincoats?"

"Well," he said, "they are not heavy overcoats, are they? If they are not heavy overcoats then they must be raincoats, because we only carry those two kinds of coats."

I had to agree that that was good logic, even if you did get wet inside.

Gilded Dentistry for Girls.

But even with trying to keep up with the spring fashions in raincoats, Moscow girls continue to try to outdo each other in the matter of gilded dentistry. Gold teeth are considered marks of beauty by the fair sex in Russia and the "swellest" ones are those who reveal the most gold when they cut loose a precious metal smile. Not back teeth either, but right out in the front row, gleaming incisors and carmine capped canines, Midas-metal molars, all shining brightly as though just scoured with some cleaning fluid.

You have to take your own gold to the dentist to get the teeth put in. The girls melt down wedding rings, ma's spectacle rims, lockets and other baubles to get the ore. Inquiry revealed that one cannot get crockery plates, because they lack porcelain and other imported ingredients to make them. They manufacture complete sets of iron teeth, covered with a hard, agate like surface, which are guaranteed to wear five years.

Some suspicious persons assert that it is just another way of hoarding wealth and every one with gold teeth should be regarded as a sort of budding capitalist and that they and fillings, too, should be yanked out and handed over to the state to swell its bullion holdings.

I visited a dentist and found him using a barber's chair that he had resurrected from a hair dressing establishment.

Hold Up Soviet Lumber While U. S. Investigates Source

The Finnish steamship Anversoise riding at anchor off Providence, R. I., last week after arrival with four million feet of soviet lumber. Officials of the United States treasury, who recently decreed an embargo against products of convict labor, delayed the unloading until the shippers can prove that the lumber was not produced by this means. PRUSSIA APPOINTS 3,000 MEN TO END GANGSTER DANGER

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, April 25.—With the number and audacity of gangsters increasing steadily, the Prussian police today decided, as the papers put it, "to root out the gangster evil before it develops the proportions it has attained in Chicago."

The home minister appointed 3,000 plain clothes men to be on the lookout in Prussia. Three hundred of these are to be stationed in Berlin, where rival gangs have recently been indulging in nightly brawls.

On Monday the "Immertreu gang" will give a gala ball. Three thousand tickets have already been sold, many to rival gangsters, but mostly to the moneyed gentry who are seeking a thrill for their jaded nerves. Plain clothes police will help the gangsters preserve a high tone at the party. The "Immertreu gang" prides itself on the big sum it will pay to the town of Berlin in entertainment tax.

DRAFT PROGRAM FOR YOUTH WEEK, OPENING MAY 17

Hundreds of Thousands to Take Part.

The final draft of plans for Youth week in Chicago, which is to start May 17, was announced yesterday by George W. Dixon, president of the Youth Week federation, and William J. Bogan, chairman of the central committee. In the announcement, it was pointed out that Chicago is the first city in the country to combine Boys' week and Girls' week.

"Schools, parks, playgrounds, churches, social centers, service clubs, industries, banks and hundreds of other institutions and organizations of a civic and commercial nature will join in the observance of Youth week," the announcement read.

Affects Hundreds of Thousands.

"Hundreds of thousands of parents, teachers and friends of youth will, during that week, give recognition to boys and girls and aid them and encourage them in their development."

Sunday, May 17, will be called Youth day in church. Pastors of all churches will be asked to deliver special sermons. May 18 will be Youth day in industry when luncheons and other celebrations will honor employed boys and girls younger than 18 years old. It is estimated by the federation committee that more than 100,000 boys and girls under this age are employed in offices and factories in Chicago.

School Day on Tuesday.

Tuesday, May 19, will be dedicated to the 700,000 children in Chicago's public and parochial schools. Programs in all schools are planned. The advantages of organized athletic programs will be emphasized Wednesday, May 20. On May 21, physical examinations and dental care will be the center of interest.

The last day, Friday, will be given over to points of good citizenship and the day will arrive at a climax in an assembly in the Civic Opera house, where medals will be awarded to winners of contests in civics in the schools. May 23 will be given over to field days, picnics, games and contests throughout the city.

Mother Swallows Poison After Boy Fails to Return

Bobby Lange, 9 years old, 2325 North Sawyer avenue, went to school as usual on Friday morning. He did not return as usual in the afternoon or even in the evening, and a search for the lad by the Shakespeare avenue police was unsuccessful. At midnight his mother, Mrs. Frances Lange, frantic with worry over his absence, attempted to commit suicide by taking poison. A few minutes after she had been taken to the Belmont hospital Bobby appeared at home and announced that he had been visiting a school friend. At the hospital it was said that Mrs. Lange probably would recover.

AMERICA'S GREAT MUSIC HOUSE SINCE 1864

HERE COMES THE ORGAN MAN!

THE word goes 'round. A-down the cobbly street he trundles his ancient organ and pauses where the shade lies thickest. A twist of the handle and out swell gay songs of half-forgotten days. It doesn't matter a whit. The children come romping . . and tease with their eager pennies. . . They love music. It can be such a splendid part of their lives, now and later. Let them know the joy of making music themselves at the piano . . . which for years has been called the perfect musical instrument—STEINWAY.

The instrument of the immortals is built so thoroughly inside and out that the one you select for your home today will serve your children's children fifty years from now.

The White Ghost Story

Here's the Hupmobile that shows what every Hupmobile can do. A stock model, the White Ghost, different only in color from the cars in your dealer's showroom. Here it is . . . sketched on tour.

CENTURY SIX SEDAN $995

CENTURY EIGHT SEDAN . . . $1295

THREE OTHER EIGHTS FROM $1595 TO $2295

Prices are for standard equipment F. O. B. factory

THE White Ghost, a stock Hupmobile, different only in color from the cars in our showroom, proved what every Hupmobile will give you today . . . for the lowest prices in Hupmobile history. Here are the proofs, facts, figures—proved in 7000 merciless miles.

. . . TIME and again through 7000 miles the White Ghost demonstrated the savings Hupmobile Free-Wheeling brings you. When you free-wheel you ride "on momentum." From 20% to 44% fewer engine revolutions. Wear and tear and gas and oil bills all substantially reduced.

. . . IMAGINE 258 miles of curves and hills—with the clutch used only 43 times! That's what happened in the run from St. Louis to Kansas City. You use the clutch 67% less. Never touch it except to start or reverse.

. . . IN leading cities of the tour, New Orleans, Indianapolis, Milwaukee among them, safety commissioners, police chiefs, mayors . . . yes, and a Governor, too . . . rode in and drove the White Ghost and pronounced it safer. Ask us and we'll send you copies of their letters.

. . . THE Professors of Engineering at a great University put the White Ghost through a gruelling series of scientific tests and said, "A step forward toward greater safety and greater economy."

. . . 7000 miles, averaging better than 60 miles-an-hour, meeting every type of road and weather. Free-Wheeling into curves at 60 and accelerating out at 70 . . . when other cars slowed down to 30.

. . . REPEATEDLY, when icy, slippery roads appeared, the brakes were jammed on and the White Ghost came to a stop straight as a railroad train.

Just a few high lights of 7000 miles. But you can prove these facts for yourself in 7 miles. Phone or call for a demonstration . . . in the White Ghost's twin, awaiting you in our showroom.

Bristol—ready to relinquish its lease—and Lans—eager to establish permanently in Chicago—have closed a deal which opens the way for the most important fine furniture selling event in Chicago's history—destined to eclipse even the sensational liquidation sale concluded by the Bristol firm several weeks ago.

The Bristol stock—fine and exquisite as it is—and there's $250,000 worth of it—must go before Lans formally open the galleries. The showrooms are to be remodelled and redecorated and the new organization wishes to completely dispose of the entire stock before extensive alterations are begun.

The consequences are obvious. Prices have been plunged downward so sharply that it is improbable that ever again will Chicago be offered such gorgeous merchandise at such low prices.

Meeting Ends

Washington, D. C., April 25.—[Special.]—Flowers, not fireworks, tonight brought to a close the 40th annual congress of the Daughters of the American Revolution. Mrs. Lowell Fletcher Hobart, the president general, disbanded the meeting with a benediction of peace and power, and told them to go back to their neighborhoods and work hard for D. A. R. ideals.

Everybody applauded everybody else. Mrs. Charles E. Herrick of Chicago, speaking for the seven victorious candidates of the nine running for office of vice presidents, explained that the victors' only regret was that some had to be defeated. And prohibition, the ugly question mark that thrust itself into a former convention and which was expected to intrude into the closing sessions of this one, never made a move.

So, altogether, this will go down in the association's archives in the words of Mrs. Hobart as "the most harmonious convention" of all. Indirectly, Mrs. Hobart, at the banquet, rebuked those who had rebuked Mrs. William Sherman Walker for her blue penciling of Representative Hamilton Fish Jr.'s speech. Mrs. Hobart paid tribute to Mrs. Walker's zealous work for national defense, and announced, with some precision, that she had been reappointed to the chairmanship of that committee.

Earlier in the day the women had pledged themselves to fight the growth of communism, to work for greater national defense, and to urge that every school teacher be made to take the oath of allegiance. They had also promised to try to get communist propaganda out of the movies; and they had unanimously disapproved of the filming of lingerie.

SON OF U. S. ENVOY WEDS CHILE GIRL BEFORE ROYALTY

COPENHAGEN, Denmark, April 25.—(AP)—The civil marriage of Winifred May Wessel, daughter of the Chilean minister to Denmark, and John Lord Booth, son of the American minister, was solemnized in a religious ceremony today before royalty.

It was the second wedding in the family of Ralph Harmon Booth of Detroit within six weeks. His daughter Virginia, was married to William D. Vogel of New York and Milwaukee in a brilliant social setting on March 4.

Today the officiating clergyman was the Rev. Dr. Jesson, chaplain of the British legation.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. Charles Cramer of Detroit was the best man. The bridesmaids were Miss Freddie and Miss Barbara Wessel, cousins of the bride; Miss Louise Huitfeldt, daughter of the Norwegian minister; Baroness Cecile Schilling, and Miss Winifred Scarf.

King Christian was represented by his brother, Prince Gustav; his sister Princess Thyra, and his nephews, Princes Axel, Eric, and Viggo, with their wives. Miss Wessel wore a gown of ivory satin and, in accordance with Danish custom, a wreath of myrtle entwined with orange blossoms. There was a reception in the Chilean legation after the ceremony. The couple plan to spend their honeymoon in southern Europe, leaving in September for Detroit to make their home. They were legally married yesterday.

ROYAL ACADEMY ACCEPTS MARKET BOY'S PAINTING

[Copyright: 1931: By the New York Times.]

LONDON, April 25.—Victor Albert Ledgar, 16 year old London market boy whose hobby is painting but who is untutored save for elementary school lessons, has had a picture accepted by the Royal academy. He submitted it "just for fun" but it will be seen among the canvases of Augustus John, Sir William Orpen, and other leading English artists at the annual exhibition.

Young Ledgar paints in the bedroom of a flat where his family lives in one of the poorer sections of London. He has never attended an art school, having taken lessons only during his last term at school. The picture accepted by the Royal academy is called "On Board the Hispanola."

The painting is of a sailing ship with two drunken men aboard, one lying on the deck, the other holding the tiller. It took the youth three months to paint it.

26 TRIBESMEN ARE SLAIN IN RAID BY HEAD HUNTERS

TAIHOKU, Formosa, April 25.—[U. P.]—A new conflict between tribes of head hunters in the interior broke out today and 26 Rodof tribesmen were beheaded, the governor general announced. The Rodofs were attacked in their village by 60 Tautsua tribesmen. Government police are pursuing the Tautsuas.

FIGHT LOOMS IN LEGISLATURE ON PARTY CIRCLES

Some Republicans Seek Abolition.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Springfield, Ill., April 25.—[Special.]—A battle is in the offing on the question of abolishing party circles from election ballots in Illinois. The Huebsch-Thon bill to this purpose is being advocated by Republican senators, who make the blunt argument that if a Democratic landslide should occur in 1932 of proportions like the November, 1930, landslide which elected James Hamilton Lewis senator by 744,000 and the Chicago avalanche which elected Anton J. Cermak mayor by 194,257 this month, the effect would be to bury a good many Republican candidates for legislative and other offices.

"Straight" ballots, they argue, would be a material aid to the Democrats, a "straight" being a ballot marked with a cross in the party circle.

Some Democrats are aiding the Republican backers of the move to wipe out the party circles. They advance the theory that in years past the "straights" have been one of the great aids in keeping the Republican party in power.

Study in Other States.

A subcommittee headed by Senator Richard J. Barr [Rep., Joliet], the leader of the upper chamber, has made a tour of Massachusetts and New York to study their ballot machinery. Senator Barr, in a minority report, sets forth that leaders in Massachusetts and New York are not satisfied with their systems. Senator Arthur A. Huebsch [Rep., Brookfield], author of the bill, and a majority of the subcommittee at present favor the Massachusetts system.

Mr. Barr points out that the two eastern states have a smaller list of elective officials than has Illinois. He argues that the abolition of the party circle obliterates in a measure party responsibility.

He advances the idea that the primary law in Illinois might be revised to make state officials nominated by state conventions composed of delegates elected at primaries. One of the early primary laws years ago was a delegate primary law.

Pre-Primary Convention.

"My observation," says Senator Barr in his report, "led me to the conclusion that a large number of people in Massachusetts and New York are not at all satisfied with their present election laws.

"Massachusetts is now agitating the passing of a law providing for a pre-primary convention for the nomination of candidates whose names shall go on the primary ballot, stating the fact that certain of them have been nominated by the respective conventions. In that state the names of the candidates are placed on the ballot alphabetically, so that it is generally conceded the A, B, C names have a great advantage over the others.

"I believe the people of these two states who take part in politics are of the opinion that the abolition of the party circle tends to destroy the party.

Have Shorter Ballots.

"I am of the opinion that these laws work much better in New York and Massachusetts than they would work in Illinois for the reason that these states have much shorter ballots than we have in Illinois, and, furthermore, that each of these states has an illiteracy test which requires every voter to be able to read and write the English language. I am of the opinion that we are starting at the wrong end by abolishing the party circle.

"We should first do something to make our ballot shorter, and, secondly, should do away with or modify to a considerable extent our present primary laws."

Measures to make the Illinois ballot smaller are now well under way in the legislature.

The Legislative Voters' league is advocating the Massachusetts group form of ballot with the party circle eliminated. The question, however, is so debatable that the Illinois election law commission made no recommendations on it except to suggest it as a field for further study. The commission is composed of Judge Edmund K. Jarecki, Judge James S. Baldwin of Decatur, and Gen. Milton J. Foreman.

FAIR TO DEPICT HUNDRED YEARS OF AGRICULTURE

Farm Drama to Be Shown on Lake Front in 1933.

BY PAUL POTTER.

The picturesque drama of a hundred years of husbandry, without which there could have been no building of a Chicago as the world's great agricultural capital, is to be strikingly presented for the millions who attend the Century of Progress exposition on the lake front in 1933.

Telling the story of an industry from "the cradle to the combine" is the sizable task now resting on the shoulders of Harvey Sconce, chief of the agricultural division of the World's Fair.

A native son of Illinois, graduate of its college of agriculture, first president of its agricultural association and noted corn breeder, Mr. Sconce has already developed contacts and plans to insure a complete presentation of the internationally fundamental industry for feeding, clothing and sheltering mankind.

All States Coöperate.

Enlisted in the staging of this spectacle, for which special buildings are already designed and preliminary plantings and models even now in preparation, are leading forces in the agriculture of every state and territory of the United States, and many foreign nations.

Such resources as these have been tapped: The fisheries of Alaska; the fruit orchards of Florida, California, Michigan, Washington and Oregon; the tobacco, rice, cotton and vegetable plantations of the south; the range country of the west; the banana and pineapple plantations of Porto Rico and Hawaii; the grain and live stock fields of the southwest, northwest and fertile cornbelt; the floral gardens of a dozen states; and the tobacco, bee and berry fields of as many more.

The dairy and poultry industries will be depicted from farm to consumer's doorstep.

Five Continents Represented.

Dry farming, irrigated farming, fur farming, ideal crop rotations, and all manner of specialized types of land utilization are to be included in the picture of progress in the torrid, temperate and frigid zones of five continents.

Closely allied with the farming displays will be those of food products and canning, under direction of Dr. A. W. Bitting. In all, provision has been made so far to have some 140 products, farming types, or devices exhibited. More are being added constantly.

The management is working from the general plans of the progress in agriculture's last hundred years as drawn up by 400 scientists in 40 committees appointed by the national research council. The program provides for the federal and state departments of agriculture and every state college and experiment station to be given a share of the mass of detail.

Story of Honey to Be Given.

There will be seen, for example, the drama of honey production, from the large model bee on the giant model flower, to the myriad by-products of this ancient art that now find their way into consumption.

A model of Cyrus McCormick's first reaper, just one hundred years old this year, will head the procession of grain harvesting implements from hand scythe to modern combined harvester-thresher, machine drawn.

There have been planted, in an orange grove in California, 100 tubs containing young trees which will be moved to Chicago's lake front two years hence, to blossom before visitors.

Provision has been made by Henry Ford and Thomas A. Edison to display in detail their newest experimental achievement, the production of rubber from goldenrod.

Advances in Milking Art.

The old milk pail and stool that for many ages were used in milking cows will form a striking contrast with the spectacle of fifty cows being bathed, dried, and milked in 12½ minutes on the new rotolactor machine, which resembles a gigantic merry go round and operates without aid of human hands.

The production of an international meat products supply from beginning to end will be dramatized by the packing industry.

Bread and butter will evolve from the wheat fields and the creameries, all within its own little space and short allotment of time.

One of the unique features in this hall's decorations will be two statuary groups by Lorado Taft, Chicago sculptor. For Chicago's Columbian exposition Mr. Taft designed "The Awakening of the Flowers" and "The Sleep of the Flowers." He now proposes to set forth his modern conception of these two themes as a means of showing the changes in his own art in the passing of the years.

SERGEANT IS FOUND SHOT TO DEATH ON FT. SHERIDAN RANGE

SERGT. M'NALLY.

Sergt. Edward J. McNally, 40 years old, a world war veteran and for 15 years a soldier in the United States army, was found dead in a target pit on the rifle range at Fort Sheridan early yesterday with a bullet hole in his head. His rifle lay beside him.

After a cursory examination by post officers Brig. Gen. Manus McCloskey, commander of the reservation, said that all evidence pointed to suicide, although no one was found who could suggest a motive.

Sergt. McNally was present at breakfast yesterday and in apparent good spirits, his fellow soldiers said. He left breakfast to go to the rifle range which was under his charge. He was found there an hour later.

Sergt. McNally, who had been stationed at Fort Sheridan since 1921, had an excellent record as a soldier, according to his superiors. He was unmarried.

Clown Dies as a Result of Beating by Robbers

David Kelly, 45 years old, a veteran circus clown, died yesterday at the county hospital of an infection that developed after he was beaten by robbers on April 15. He was attacked soon after he left the Chicago Stadium, where he was playing as a member of the European Olympia circus. Kelly, whose home was in East St. Louis, had been a circus performer for twenty-five years.

Clothing valued at $8,000 was stolen from the tailor shop of Jerrems, Inc., at 324 South Michigan avenue yesterday. The burglars entered through a rear door.

FARMERS BACK HOOVER POLICIES, G. O. P. DECLARES

Ex-Gov. Harding of Iowa Assails Democrats.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 25.—[Special.]—The farmers of the midwest are solidly aligned in support of the federal farm board and President Hoover's farm relief policies.

Such at least was the claim made today by the Republican national committee when it issued a statement by former Gov. W. L. Harding of Iowa.

"I make such a statement," said Mr. Harding, "after talking with thousands of farmers in my own and nearby states.

Says Democrats' Scheme Fails.

"Democratic seed of discontent has fallen on barren soil. While the Democrats have wailed about the condition of the farmer but have offered no program of relief, the Republican administration has gone ahead with a concrete program. The American farmer today is selling his wheat at 20 to 30 per cent more than the farmer across the border in Canada. His corn is bringing 30 cents per bushel more than in the Argentine. The Republican tariff and the farm board—both of which the Democrats would destroy—are responsible for this advantageous condition."

Mr. Harding refused to see any menace in the 250 million bushels of wheat held by the farm board.

In tune with the Republican bid for farm support came the announcement of the department of agriculture that it had found a silver lining to the cloud of agricultural depression.

Text of Pamphlet.

In the prospectus of a pamphlet just published and entitled "New credit for farmers," the department states:

"Farmers, bankers and business men may anticipate permanent improvement in the farm credit situation as a consequence of the emergency credit legislation enacted by the last congress. The third emergency act to aid farmers provided a fund of $20,000,000 for agricultural rehabilitation and for loans to individuals to buy stock in agricultural credit corporations. American farmers stand to reap the most permanent rewards."

Kenilworth Woman Hurt as Horse Steps Into Hole

Mrs. Eleanor Ketcham, 40 Devonshire lane, Kenilworth, was injured yesterday when a horse she was riding stepped into a hole and fell. The accident occurred near the Indian Hill Riding club west of Kenilworth. Riding with her were her husband, Frank W. Ketcham, an executive of the Twentieth Century press, and another couple. She was taken to Evanston hospital, where it was said the shock would necessitate her remaining in bed for several days.

U. OF I. REVIEWS ITS $100,000,000 AID TO INDUSTRY

Achievements in Research Told in Booklet.

The story of the contributions of the University of Illinois to agriculture and industry, contributions which industrialists have estimated to be worth $100,000,000 annually, is told in an illustrated booklet, just released at the office of the president, Dr. Harry Woodburn Chase.

The booklet is crammed with facts, demonstrating the university's claim that its research workers cover practically every field of human endeavor and produce results which affect nearly all strata of society.

Only cursory mention is given the university metallurgists, who have produced a new metal, illium, as a substitute for platinum; the chemists, who discovered illinium, the only chemical element ever discovered in America; and the medical staff, which found a treatment for leprosy and developed a serum for ptomaine poisoning.

Achievements in Concrete.

The achievements of the school of engineering in the study of concrete are the first of numerous research subjects to be considered in detail in the booklet. Since the organization of the engineering experiment station in 1903, the booklet points out, the school's bulletins on concrete and reinforced concrete have exercised a profound effect on the development of concrete construction and some of them remain today the only authoritative sources on the subject.

The revised building codes about to be adopted in Chicago, New York, Philadelphia and other large cities are based largely on the work of the university research staff in the building field, the booklet asserts. Another instance cited to prove the influence of the engineering school is the action of the Illinois division of highways last year in adopting a road building formula based on a research bulletin issued by the university in 1923.

Possible $25,000,000 Rail Saving.

In another field, that of railway engineering, the engineering department completed tests last year that indicate a possible saving of $25,000,000 annually in the operation of the 40,000 heavy weight locomotives on American and Canadian lines. The tests concerned the efficiency of a thermic syphon, a device which, although invented 12 years ago, had never had its efficiency adequately tested.

An accomplishment of more immediate benefit to the average family has been the university's research for improvement of warm air heating plants, resulting in increased comfort and economy.

The booklet lists seven outstanding results of the engineering school's study of warm air furnaces. The combustion efficiency, heat carrying capacity, insulation covers, and water pans were among the subjects studied, the whole work resulting in the formulation of a code for installation which the American Society of Heating and Ventilating Engineers accepted as standard.

Studies Steam Heat.

The university pioneered also in the study of direct steam and hot water heating, as the booklet points out. In this instance the research workers exploded the hitherto accepted theory that the heating capacity of a radiator was in direct proportion to its capacity for condensing steam.

The safety of human life was the vital factor in another line of research, carried on over a period of 12 years by the university to study the "fatigue of metals." Hundreds of millions of tests were made of materials picked up from railroad wrecks, automobile smashups, and elevator crashes where metals failed under stress.

The most important investigation now in progress, the booklet says, is one concerning transverse fissures in railroad rails. In certain rails there develops under heavy traffic an invisible fracture, which spears and finally causes the rail to snap without warning.

Ventilating Chicago Subway.

Ventilation of Chicago's subway has become a University of Illinois job, the booklet asserts. The system designed at the university laboratories will be capable of providing 12 complete changes of air each hour.

Unlike the Holland vehicular tunnel in New York, the ventilation problem of which the university solved, there will be no poisonous gases to consider. However, the great heat which train motors, brakes, lights, and people will generate in the summer, is a difficulty fully as troublesome as the gases in the New York tunnel.

"Since it is economically impossible to cool the subway air artificially, the ventilating system will be so designed as to maintain an appreciable air movement of 'cooling effect' throughout the structure whenever atmospheric conditions might become uncomfortable," the university engineers say.

In the field of mining, the university has carried on a study of mining practice in 100 selected coal mines in Illinois since 1911, according to the booklet.

In the field of agriculture, the university is contributing to the wealth of farmers in three principal ways, the bulletin asserts, listing them as follows:

1. Instruction of students, the majority of whom later use their training in agriculture and home economics or in industries closely allied to these.
2. Investigation of and research in the major problems of agriculture and home economics.
3. Extension service to take the new found facts and teachings to farmers and home makers throughout the state.

Less than 20 cents yearly from each of the 30,731,947 acres of improved farm land in Illinois would pay all appropriations for the university, the booklet declares.

ELEPHANT TOOTH CALENDAR GIVES AGE OF MANKIND

Philadelphia, Pa., April 25.—(AP)—Discovery of an elephant tooth calendar that promises to date outstanding human events for more than .. million years past was reported by Dr. Henry Fairfield Osborn of the American Museum of Natural History, at closing sessions of the American Philosophical society here today.

The elephant tooth calendar is a discovery that for more than a million years the amount of enamel on lower grinding teeth of elephants has been increasing. The enamel grows in ridges.

If these ridges could be stretched out like an accordion, the length of enamel a million years ago would be about two foot. But it had lengthened to 26 feet by the time of the Cro-Magnon man, which was about 12,000 years ago. Dr. Osborn stretched paper samples of his accordion calendar before the scientists, and the longest were nearly as wide as the room.

"This length had grown centimeter by centimeter during the estimated 1,000,000 years of the age of man," he said. "As the research proceeds we shall probably be able to ascertain just how long it took to produce a centimeter of enamel length."

Such timing will make the calendar. It can be applied to dating man because his bones have been found principally in association with the bones of ancient elephants. Elephant records go back 20,000,000 years, with man found thus far mostly in the last million.

The enamel calendar, said Dr. Osborn, gives the age of the Piltdown fossil man in England as about 1,250,000 years. The Peking man is believed contemporaneous with this Britisher, but the elephant calendar has not been used in China.

Relief for mothers worrying over children who bring home school reports of having weights and heights wrong for their ages will be found in a new set of growth tables presented by Dr. Charles B. Davenport, director of the department of genetics of the Carnegie institute of Washington at Cold Springs Harbor, N. Y.

Studies of child growth hitherto, said Dr. Davenport, have been made chiefly by measuring about 100 children at a time from lowest to highest school ages. This has given a mass growth curve against which individuals were matched.

But there is a different story in growth curves of individual children which Dr. Davenport has been making for seven years. These individuals often fail to fit the mass curves. They have other periods of growth, sometimes ahead of the mass, sometimes behind, and even taking several different spurts. But they are normally healthy.

Among these are the plow he used on his farm near St. Louis, the shipping records he kept while in the leather business at Galena, the camp chair and saddle he used during his civil war campaigns, and a number of letters.

They are not from any particular part of France, hailing from every section of the Gallic republic—Paris, Limoges, Normandy and the Pyrenees mountains. Boxing fans throughout France are banking on them to carry the tri-color of their homeland to victory when they meet the six Chicagoans and two New Yorkers comprising the American team. WORLD RECORD HOLDER LOSES TO OKLAHOMA SOPHOMORE

Seven Marks Fall in 22nd Annual Carnival.

BY WILFRID SMITH.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Des Moines, Ia., April 25.—Eddie Tolan of the University of Michigan holds the world's record for the 100 yard dash. Last May the international federation accepted his record of 9 5-10 seconds, and although the National A. A. U. more recently approved the 9 4-10 seconds dash of Frank Wykoff at Stagg field in the 1930 national collegiate meet, Tolan's mark still is supreme.

VERNE McDERMONT

Yet no sprinter of world renown has been defeated oftener. For three years Tolan has striven for the dash championship at the Drake relays. Twice he had failed. Cy Leland and Claude Bracey had flashed over the Drake cinders fractions of seconds ahead of the Negro.

Tolan Fails Again.

But this year, his third and last of competition for Michigan, all thought Tolan would win.

Bracey, Leland, and George Simpson of Ohio State, who also had outsprinted him in Western conference meets, had been graduated. This was to be Tolan's year.

This afternoon the stocky Tolan, head thrown high, again strove for a Drake championship. First to leave his marks, he paced the field rushing toward the cotton string and victory. And once more, as in other years, he had failed, so he failed today.

Peyton Glass, six foot stripling racing for the Oklahoma Aggies, a 19 year old sophomore, unknown where Tolan long had been famous, came down the pole lane. By inches he crept up; then lunged forward to victory in his last stride. For a third year Tolan had seen another win.

Tolan needed every bit of energy to prevent a double defeat. Paul Swift, another of the new crop of sprinters the Pacific coast is preparing for the Olympic games, was at his heels. The Washington State youngster, who has been timed in 9 6-10 seconds many times, had been counted Tolan's greatest rival today. Tolan defeated him, but Glass whipped them both. The victor's time was 9 7-10 seconds, outstanding in consideration of the chill which handicapped the track and field stars of the west in the twenty-second Drake relays.

10,000 See Seven Marks Fall.

Ten thousand saw Tolan's defeat today. But perhaps his defeat was forgotten in the three hour swift parade of runners and super athletes who excelled in field events.

Seven times these boys from the Western conference and the trans-Mississippi plains established records better than their predecessors had been able to do in twenty-two years. And in these exhibitions of skill and endurance many of the favorites of other seasons also failed to hold their own as Tolan had failed.

There was Lee Sentman, University of Illinois senior, America's outstanding high hurdler. Seldom has Sentman failed to win his specialty. Perhaps form repeatedly has brought him over the barriers in 14 6-10 seconds. Many times he has come within a tenth of a second of equaling the world mark. But today Bob Hager of Iowa State raced stride for stride with Sentman. Side by side they raced. Then, at the ninth hurdle, Sentman's crooked knee struck the upright. Momentarily he staggered, but recovered. In that flash, however, Hager, still hurdling without fault, gained a yard, and that was his margin of triumph. Hager's time was 14 7-10 seconds, breaking the Drake record set in 1917 by Bob Simpson of Missouri, who is now Hager's coach.

Unable to Finish.

Once more Sentman came back, and this time disaster followed. Racing last in a field of four in the 440 yard

Buckeyes and Penn Capture Relay Honors

Philadelphia, Pa., April 25.—[Special.]—Despite a persistent drizzle and biting winds athletes at the thirty-seventh annual Penn relay carnival defied the elements today with three new meet records and one tied mark as Penn and Ohio State shared major honors with three championships each.

While a crowd of 35,000 sat shivering in the steel stands at Franklin field Penn's one mile relay team of Bill Carr, Jack Edwards, Horace Steel, and Jimmy Healey, indoor world record holders, drove through to a triumph in the classic of all events.

Unpressed by opposition, this fast stepping quartet equaled a record that had gone untouched in 16 years—the 3:18 mark made by Penn's team of Kaufman, Lippincott, Lockwood, and Ted Meredith in 1915.

Best Race of Day.

Considering conditions under which they ran, this was perhaps the finest performance of the day. Other races had greater thrills, other races had closer finishes, but for clean cut merit this was a standout effort.

Ohio State lost a prized event when it came to the final of the intercollegiate half mile championship. Army was the winner, with Yale second and Ohio State third. Army's time was 1:29 3-10.

For close finishes there was Yale's record shattering 480 yard hurdle relay, when Harmar Brereton, J. S. Tritle, G. S. Lockwood, and Capt. Arthur De Voe streaked over the sticks in a heat for the new carnival time of 1:03 4-10 and barely nosed out the fighting finish of Jack Keller, Ohio State's timber topping marvel, in the 1:03 5-10 final, figures that also were better than the old mark of 1:03 6-10.

New Javelin Mark.

For thrills there was the duel in the last quarter mile of the four mile relay as Carl Coan of Penn just beat out Arthur Martin of Cornell and Dave Cobb of Harvard in the none too fast time of 18:02.4, more than ten seconds slower than the existing standard.

For records there were the javelin throwing of George Williams of Hampton college with a new distance of 197 feet 1½ inches and the shot putting of Clarence Munn of Minnesota with a toss of 48 feet 7⅝ inches to surpass one of the oldest records of the meet, Ralph Rose's 48 feet 2 inches in 1904.

YOU CAN STILL BUY TICKETS TO GOLDEN GLOVES

Tickets to the international Golden Gloves bouts between America and France at Soldiers' field May 12 are still available. Mail your orders with certified check to Ticket Manager, Golden Gloves tournament, Chicago Tribune, Chicago, Ill. The prices are $1 and $2. All $3 seats have been sold.

There will be 100,000 general admission tickets placed on sale the day of the bouts at 50 cents each. You can avoid congestion at the gate by ordering a reserved seat now.

U. S. GOLDEN GLOVES TEAM TO BEGIN TRAINING DRILLS FRIDAY

Schmeling to Serve as an Official at May 12 Bouts.

BY ARCH WARD.

America's Golden Gloves champions start a new adventure Friday. That is the date they report for ten days of training calculated to fit them for the international bouts with France at Soldiers' field May 12.

Two days previous ten young men from France, eight national champions and two alternates, also start a big adventure—a trip to America. The French boxers will sail from Havre Wednesday on the France and will land in New York May 5.

100,000 at 50 Cents.

If the weather man only catches the spirit of adventure and provides a balmy evening on May 12, nobody will have a kick. There will be seats for 125,000, more than 100,000 at 50 cents apiece, and judging by applications for tickets there will be little empty space.

Only 21,000 seats will be sold in advance. This group makes up the ringside section. General admission tickets will be placed on sale the day of the match. Carpenters will start work Tuesday constructing seats at Soldiers' field. All rows, starting at the twelfth, will be elevated, so everybody will have an unobstructed view of the ring. The last row will be the same height as the first section of the permanent stands on the east and west sides of the field.

Additional international color was added to the event yesterday when Max Schmeling of Germany, heavyweight champion, agreed to serve as a referee or judge. Georges Carpentier of France and Jack Dempsey, America's fistic idol, previously had accepted an invitation to judge the bouts.

Same Coaches for Yanks.

Responsibility for the development of the American team rests upon the same men who coached Chicago to a 13 to 3 victory over New York. They are Benny Yanger of the Chicago A. A. Johnny Behr of the Illinois A. C. and Jabber Young of the Belle Plaine A. C.

"Ten days will be plenty of time to get the boys into shape," Behr said last night. "Six of the eight members of the team are Chicagoans and we know they are in good condition right now. Most of them have been boxing off and on since they whipped New York."

The New York boys—Phil Dardell, welterweight, and Yustin Sirutis, heavyweight—will start work simultaneously with their Chicago teammates. They will not come to Chicago, however, until May 5. Meanwhile their training will be supervised by Jack Elliott, coach of the New York Golden Gloves squad.

9 Rahs for Weather Man

There still are good reserved seats available for the international bouts. All $3 tickets have been sold, but there are nearly 4,000 remaining at $1 and $2. There is a possibility that only those holding reserved seats will see the show. In event of rain or cold weather the bouts will be moved into Chicago Stadium.

All together now—nine lusty rahs for the weather man!

Crochet? O, that's French for a Hook

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, April 25.—Due to some perverse quirk the French people are partial to the French language in their discussions of boxing, and Americans attending the international Golden Gloves bouts in Chicago on May 12 may wish to know that when a Frenchman speaks of "crochet" he is merely referring to a hook, and when he speaks of a "coup" he means nothing but a sock or a bust.

And to be perfectly "au courant" with the situation the customer would do well to advise himself that "poids mouches" is flyweight; "poids plumes" featherweight, and "poids coqs" bantamweight. Your correspondent is not entirely au courant as yet, having been here less than a week, but he is becoming more courant by association with the "sportifs" at a place called the Silver Ring. This place is conducted by Mr. Jeff Dickson of Vicksburg, Miss., who has just received the legion of honor from the French government for promoting prize fights for the benefit of wounded soldiers.

Appreciation of prize fight promoters runs a little higher than it does in the United States. On a dollar for dollar comparison of receipts turned over to charities of late, Tex Rickard would have deserved the grand cross of the legion.

It will be pleasant news no doubt to a large number of Americans having certain views regarding prohibition that the legion of honor has been awarded to a saloonkeeper, for Mr. Dickson's Silver Ring is a place where alcoholic beverages are sold. The sportifs at Chevalier Dickson's place seem to have some misgivings regarding the ability of their "boxeurs" "to faire le boxe" with "boxeurs Americans" in all classes up to poids lourds class, which is the heavyweight class, as they do not believe amateur boxing has been as well developed here as in the United States.

They are quite optimistic regarding Fernand Laudrin, their representative in the poids lourds, who is an army aviator. Dr. Charles Sebenq, the physician who will accompany the French team to Chicago, believes that M. Laudrin would be professional heavyweight champion of Europe if he were a professional. It required formal permission from three separate departments of the French government for the young man to go to the United States for the amateur bouts, and his professional career, if any, will have to wait until his soldiering is finished.

For the sake of brevity the French have adopted certain familiar English terms for the conduct of their "combats du boxe," because even French equivalents might sound like a political debate and run on and on. Thus, referees in the amateur bouts are limited to three English words; namely, out, break, and some other word which your correspondent did not quite catch.

The French boxers have been given their choice of points of interest to be visited in the United States when they are on their way to "make the boxing" with the boxeurs Americains in Chicago, and they have decided on Niagara Falls, the Chicago stockyards and New York City. There was one vote for Michigan City, Ind. No reason was given.

Herrmann, Former Red Owner, Dies

Cincinnati, O., April 25.—(AP)—August [Garry] Herrmann, the father of the world's series and formerly one of the great powers in baseball, died unexpectedly today at his home. He was 71 years old. Death was caused by infirmities and complication of diseases.

Herrmann, the Kenesaw Mountain Landis of his day, was chairman and ruler of the old National Baseball commission for fifteen years, president of the Cincinnati Reds for twenty-five years and interleague diplomat.

He was a politician, financier, member of the International Tpyographical union, former grand exalted ruler of the Benevolent Protective Order of Elks, a high Mason, and one time president of the National Bowling congress.

Funeral Services Tuesday.

Funeral services will be held Tuesday afternoon at the Elks' temple, built largely through Herrmann's financial leadership. The body will lie in state on that day from 11 a. m. to 1 p. m. Burial will be in Vine Street cemetery.

Garry's passing marked the third removal by death within one month of nationally prominent baseball figures. On March 27 Ernest S. Barnard, then president of the American league and former president of the Cleveland Indians, died at Rochester, Minn. One day later Byron Bancroft Johnson, one of Herrmann's triumvirate on the national commission and forceful ruler of the American league for a quarter of a century, succumbed to a long illness at St. Louis.

Commission Is Abolished.

It was Herrmann's prerogative as national chairman to hand down all decisions and although he acted with impartiality and sound judgment he incurred powerful enmities. His decision which sent George Sisler to the St. Louis Browns rather than Pittsburgh caused a break with one of his closest friends, Barney Dreyfuss, president of the Pirates.

After the world's series in 1919 between the Cincinnati Reds and Chicago White Sox produced the greatest scandal of modern baseball when eight Chicago players were expelled from the professional game for life on charges of accepting money to throw the series, the national commission was abolished, but Herrmann remained as president of the Reds.

In 1927 Herrmann showed first signs of approaching deafness and physical ailments that proved handicaps to him.

Sells Interest in Reds.

Several months later he sold his interests in the Reds to C. J. McDiarmid and led a secluded life until death. In appreciation of his long service McDiarmid and the club's stockholders voted Herrmann a $25,000 bonus and a $10,000 annuity. Later Sidney Weil bought control of the club and likewise continued Herrmann's $10,000 annual pension.

Last January executives of both major leagues voted him a $500 monthly pension.

The Cincinnati Reds game here next Tuesday with the Chicago Cubs may be called off as a mark of respect to Herrmann. Sidney A. Weil, present owner, said he was considering asking permission to postpone the game until a later date as Tuesday is the day of Herrmann's funeral.

Details of the power boat regatta to be sponsored by The Tribune on May 30 and 31 will be found in the motor boat news on pages 9, 10, and 11 of this section.

HORNSBY POUNDS OUT 4 HITS; BOOSTS HIS AVERAGE TO .400

English Takes Cue, Also Collects 4 Safeties.

BY EDWARD BURNS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Pittsburgh, Pa., April 25.—Our Cubs this afternoon staged one of those old fashioned ninth inning slaughters to turn a potential 3 to 2 defeat into a glorious 8 to 3 victory. Six runs they made in that big ninth, six runs before a single batsman had been retired, for the fifth victory over the Pirates in the six games played thus far this season.

WOODY ENGLISH.

Later on we'll tell you about how Manager Hornsby continued his batting orgy of Friday with three singles and a double. Later on we'll tell you you about how Woody English made four hits. There are several things we'll tell you after a while, but right now we want to give you the details of that ninth inning rally.

Kremer Proves Tough.

In the seventh Paul Waner had broken a tie, which his brother had established by scoring two runs for the Pirates. Remy Kremer, who, with his starting adversary, Pat Malone, formed the total of National league pitchers who last year achieved 20 victories, protected the lead in the eighth in impressive style and seemed in a fair way to knock off the tail end of the Cubs' batting order in the ninth.

Grimm, who is batting .156, led off the big inning. Charley walked and Blair was put on to run for him. Johnny Moore batted for Malone and singled to center, putting Blair on third and going to second on the throw in. Spencer relieved Kremer and walked Cuyler to fill the bases. English got his fourth hit of the game, a single to center, scoring Blair and Moore. Cuyler dashed on to third and at first was called out on L. Waner's perfect throw to Traynor, but the decision was reversed when Traynor dropped the ball.

Hornsby Doubles for Fourth Hit.

Hornsby doubled to left, his fourth hit of the game and his eighth in nine times at bat, scoring Cuyler and putting English on third. Spencer made a wild pitch, English and Hornsby scoring. Then Wilson doubled to right. Grant relieved Spencer and in an effort to catch Wilson off second, threw the ball into center field, Hack taking third, whence he scored on Stephenson's single to left. Hartnett supplied the first out with a foul to Suhr, and Bell ended the Pirate agony by tapping into a double play.

Hornsby, by continuing his slugging carnival, has wrought wonders in the enthusiasm of his hired men. The whole squad hopped about like college boys after his third homer yesterday and the personal transition was even more pronounced when he ran his hitting streak to seven hits in a row in his first three times at bat today.

Boosts Average to .400.

When Hornsby got through with the two day freezeout here Wednesday and Thursday, he was boasting a puny batting average of .240. His sterling performances of yesterday and today lifted his season mark to .400.

At the same time Hornsby's terrific work with his bat is effecting an electrifying solution of the personal problems on the ball club it is working a few other miracles on Hornsby's work on the defense. For two days he has been a sparkling performer afield.

English was a rival of Hornsby for batting honors today, for in addition to making four hits, he scored half of the Cubs' first six runs and he drove in the tying and winning runs in the ninth. Prior to the ninth the Cubs had made seven hits off Kremer. Hornsby and English accounted for all but one of this number.

Pat Malone was credited with the victory, although the Pirates were ahead when he left the game. And Pat deserved the verdict, for he allowed only seven hits, two of which came in the first and two in the seventh after two were out.

The game was handled by a new set of umpires, Jorda, Stark and Klem. Moran, Magerkurth and McGrew were withdrawn from the series with no announcement as to the reason. Moran was the center of a jam in Chicago last Sunday and yesterday Ma-

RED SOX BEAT YANKEES, 5 TO 4, IN TEN INNINGS

Pickering Scores with the Winning Run.

Boston, Mass., April 25.—(AP)—Clever base running provided the Red Sox with the deciding run in the tenth inning today as they beat the Yankees, 5 to 4, in the final game of their series.

With the bases full, Pinch Hitter Marquardt hit a weak roller to Chapman. Ruel, who had been purposely walked, started for second, then turned back with Chapman chasing him. Chapman finally tossed to first to catch Marquardt, but in the general confusion Pickering had raced home from third with the winning score.

Lou Gehrig made three of the Yankees' six hits off three Boston pitchers. Score:

BABE RUTH GETS STORY OF YANKS' GAME BY RADIO

Boston, Mass., April 25.—[U.P.]—Babe Ruth, recovering satisfactorily from a leg injury suffered Wednesday, listened to Fred Hoey's broadcast of today's Red Sox-Yankees game, propped up on pillows in his big, third floor room at Peter Bent Brigham hospital.

Ruth wanted to leave for Washington tonight with his clubmates, but Manager Joe McCarthy told him to rest at the hospital for a day or two more and then return to his home in New York.

Dr. Francis C. Newton, in his report on the slugger's condition today, said that the "pain and discomfort have largely gone." Baking and massaging have taken much of the stiffness out of the injured limb, and Babe was able to move it with little or no pain today.

Mrs. Ruth remained at her husband's bedside through most of the day. Hospital authorities said Ruth probably would be allowed to sit up tomorrow.

GREENLEAF AGAIN TAKES LEAD IN N.Y. CUE TOURNEY

Greenleaf had a high run of 63 to Woods' 46. Greenleaf now has won three games and lost one. Arthur Diehl of Rockford, Ill., is second with two victories and one defeat.

In another game today, Onefrio Lauri of New York defeated Andrew Ponzi of Philadelphia, 125 to 83, in 13 innings. Ponzi had the better run with a high mark of 49. Lauri's high run was 47. The schedule for tomorrow's two games sends Ponzi against Woods and Lauri against Diehl.

10 Teams Play in Semi-Pro Games Today

Ten teams will play this afternoon in Chicago Semi-pro Baseball league parks. Mills stadium, Shewbridge field, Logan Square and Grand Crossing park will be the scenes of local games. The Chicago Firemen play at Blue Island.

Five former members of the Milwaukee American association club will be in the lineup of the Milwaukee Red Sox when they meet the Duffy Florals at Shewbridge field, 74th and Aberdeen streets. They are Shinners, Schaack, Humber, Sengstock, and Barth. Ike Corey and other major and minor league stars also will be with Milwaukee.

Mills will play the Madison, Wis., Blues in a double header at Mills Stadium. Lefty Sullivan, Forrest Paddock and Doug McWeeney will pitch for the Mills against the Badgers.

The colored All Stars will meet Logan Squares at the latter's field. Johnny Callahan, once more at the reins of the Logan Square club, has built up a strong team and expects to be in the thick of the Chicago league fight.

Two of the leading travelers in the league, Buck Weaver's Cooneys and Joe Green's Chicago Giants, will play at Grand Crossing park, Seventy-seventh street and Ingleside avenue. The schedule:

Madison, Wis., at Mills stadium [2 games].
Milwaukee Red Sox vs. Duffy Florals at Shewbridge field.
Colored All-Stars at Logan Square park.
Buck Weaver's Cooneys vs. Chicago Giants at Grand Crossing.
Chicago Firemen at Blue Island.

1,500 AMATEURS GATHER FOR U. S. BOXING TOURNEY

New York, April 25.—(AP)—A legion of fighting youth settled down in the city today to wait restlessly for the opening Monday night in Madison Square Garden of the first national A. A. U. boxing championships ever held in New York.

For four straight nights the 1,500 youngsters from 18 states, the Hawaiian islands, and Canada will slug out their individual paths to the gold medals that await the winners in each of the eight divisions.

It may even be necessary, because of the size of the entry list, to turn the boys out for a couple of afternoon sessions.

The tremendous success of amateur boxing this season and the refreshing vigor of the youngsters as compared with the professionals indicate that receipts for the four night sessions alone will run over $100,000.

The six warriors from the Hawaiian islands, led by the barefoot boy of the lightweights, Benny Ahakuela, have traveled 5,000 miles at a cost of $6,000 to compete in the championships. Canada has entered two stars, while state teams of six to eight men have been entered from California, Nebraska, Missouri, Michigan, Indiana, Louisiana, Kentucky, Utah, Georgia, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Massachusetts, District of Columbia, Virginia, Alabama, Kansas, Maryland and New York.

The army is sending up a team from the Third corps area, Baltimore, and the navy will be represented by a coast guard team from New London, Conn.

Only one champion out of the list crowned last year will be back to defend his title. He is Jack Pallat, Cleveland heavyweight. His hopes of retaining the championship have been greatly strengthened by the withdrawal of Justin Sirutis, the big New York university puncher. Ten heavyweights are entered in the tourney.

BOSTON'S BATTLE ABOUT FOOTBALL DATES CONTINUES

Boston, Mass., April 25.—(AP)—Edward A. McLaughlin, president of the Boston College Alumni association, today said the Dartmouth-Stanford, Boston college-Holy Cross football date controversy was still deadlocked. He denied reports that a settlement had been reached whereby Dartmouth would meet Stanford in the Harvard stadium on the same day the Boston rivals were opposing each other at Fenway park, Nov. 28.

McLaughlin said the Boston college alumni had not retracted their protest against the Dartmouth-Stanford game being held in the same city the same day, and that the situation remained just as it was before William J. Bingham, director of athletics at Harvard, had conferred with him yesterday.

Mayor James M. Curley of Boston had refused to permit Dartmouth to meet Stanford at the stadium on the grounds that the game would interfere with the attendance at the Holy Cross-Boston college game. The stadium is in Boston and through an agreement the city has the right to sanction games played there in which Harvard is not a participant.

NORTHWESTERN GOLFERS BEAT PURDUE, 10 TO 8

La Fayette, Ind., April 25.—[Special.]—Northwestern's golf squad defeated Purdue here this afternoon, 10 to 8, in a Big Ten meet. The boilermakers took a one point lead, 6½ to 5½, in the morning singles matches, but the Purple's sub-par golf in the afternoon changed the verdict.

Rogers and Wilson, Northwestern, had a best ball of 64 for 18 holes in defeating Bassett and Mussing of Purdue in one of the afternoon's foursomes. On the first nine they had a best ball of 31, and on nine of the first 14 holes they scored birdies.

In the singles matches, Rogers had the best medal score of the day with 74. Muessing of Purdue turned in the best nine hole medal score of the day when he shot 33 on the second nine in the afternoon's foursomes.

PURDUE VARSITY FOOTBALL TEAM DEFEATS ALUMNI

Lafayette, Ind., April 25.—[Special.]—The Purdue football team ended spring training today by defeating a senior-alumni eleven in a regulation game in the Ross-Ade stadium, 7 to 0.

The senior-alumni eleven, made up of former football stars, including Frank Carideo, now assistant coach at Purdue, and Glen Harmeson, offered stout resistance to the varsity, and the Harmeson-Carideo forward passing combination threatened to score several times.

The lone varsity marker came in the second quarter when Hecker sent a long pass to Pardonner. Twice in the second half the varsity drove to the five yard line, only to have the stalwart alumni forward wall that contained George Van Bibber, George Stears, Guy Mackey, and Harvey Olson finally turn back the thrusts of Roy Horstman, varsity full back, who was outstanding throughout the day's play.

Fred Bennett Signs to Play with Pirates

Pittsburgh, Pa., April 25.—(AP)—Fred Bennett, outfielder who was the central figure in the recent civil court suit which resulted in the authority of Kenesaw M. Landis, baseball commissioner, being upheld, has been signed by the Pittsburgh Pirates, it was announced tonight.

Bennett, who was with Milwaukee of the American Association last year, will report to the Buccaneers at St. Louis tomorrow and is expected to bolster the outfield reserve strength. He is 27, and a right handed hitter and thrower.

Bennett was the property of the St. Louis Browns for several years. Some months ago Commissioner Landis ruled that the St. Louis Americans could not farm out the player again, at the same time declaring him a free agent. Owner Phil Ball of the Browns took the matter into civil court and a few days ago a verdict was returned sustaining Landis.

Harlow Rother of Stanford university was fourth in the discus throw, won by Masjiro Itabashi of Keio university with a heave of 43.17 meters.

ARGENTINA DAVIS CUP TEAM BEATS CHILE IN OPENER

SANTIAGO, Chile, April 25.—(AP)—Argentina won the opening match of the South American zone Davis cup finals tie today. The Argentine doubles team of Andriano Zappa and Lucilo del Castillo easily defeated Roberto Conrads and Herbert Muller of Chile by scores of 6-0, 6-1, 6-0.

Only one match was scheduled for the opening day, the singles being postponed from Friday on account of an injury to Chile's ranking player, Elias Deik. Two singles matches are scheduled for tomorrow and two more for Monday. The winner of the tie will enter the interzone competition against the North American zone winner.

WHITE SOX CALL OFF LAST GAME OF INDIAN SERIES

Tigers Open at Comiskey Park Today.

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

Cold weather, slight rainfall and, possibly, general debility of the team induced the White Sox officials to cancel yesterday's scheduled final with the Cleveland Indians.

The Sox had been playing for several days without drawing customers, without winning what should be their share and without getting any of the cripples back into normal shape; so the postponement was justified. When the Indians call around this way later in the season the Sox will be better prepared to take care of themselves.

By that time both Ted Lyons and Al Thomas, or at least one of them, may be able to work, and that will be something.

Play Tigers Today.

Starting this afternoon and continuing through Wednesday the Tigers will provide the visiting half of the attraction at Comiskey park. Thus far the Detroiters haven't startled anybody by their deeds, so the Sox have nothing to fear. The privilege of working for the Tigers in the opener of the series probably will be awarded to Vic Sorrell.

Donie Bush's selection in today's meeting may be one of several men. In fact, it will be several men unless some improvement is shown over performances thus far in the infant campaign. Nobody has been able to display any marked effectiveness over the regulation stretch. Pat Caraway came closest and he may be put to work today mainly with the idea that he might satisfy the Sunday patrons. Bush's other possible choices are Vic Frasier or even the veteran Red Faber, who didn't fare any too well when he made his last attempt.

The blasting indulged in by the Indians on Friday when Thomas tried to fool them has not altered Bush's idea that in time the Baltimore lad, who a couple of years ago was rated with the best right handers in the business, will resume his winning ways.

Bush Is Patient.

"Give him a few more starts and he will shake off whatever it is that is ailing him," is Bush's way of looking at the problem.

Others are not that optimistic. It is not far fetched to suspect that as the result of a bad arm all last season, at least until the city series, Thomas might have lost his confidence. This same thing has happened with other good pitchers.

Lyons, also the victim of a peculiar arm malady, may be able to start throwing about the latter part of this week. Doctors insist there is nothing wrong with the arm but they are giving lamp treatments. And Lyons can't pitch, at least not with his old time fervor. Hence, there must be something wrong.

JOE M'CARTHY CAN'T GET AWAY FROM CROWDS

New York Throngs Are Bigger, if Not Better.

BY EDWARD BURNS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Pittsburgh, Pa., April 25.—Joe McCarthy speaking.—Time, August, 1929: "Ever since I was a little boy in short pants, I have been a National league enthusiast. All the big league games I witnessed as a youngster were in the Philadelphia National league park. The class of the National league play is what is causing us to break the all time attendance record for both leagues at Wrigley field. I don't think much of umpires, but even they are better in the National league than they are in the American, judging from what I hear about the umps in the other league," etc., etc.

As Joe went on in the foregoing manner he got more and more partisan. And when he had finished his discourse he was just about willing to admit American league teams, at least as a gate attraction, were of the same category as those of a class B league.

Even after Joe's boys took a sound thrashing in the world series of 1929, he would give no ground in his National league partisanship. And his enthusiasm was not to be criticised, for in his years as boss of the Cubs he had seen people fight to get in Wrigley field. And he had heard of no one ripping down any turnstiles to enter Comiskey park.

What a Surprise for Joe!

Imagine, then, Joe's surprise on opening day, April 14, 1931, with Boston, 1930 cellar champions as the attraction against his new charges, the Yankees. More than 70,000 fans were in the Yankee stadium that day.

How amazing it must have been to Joe to realize that many folks would come out to see an American league game. But it was, perhaps, a great episode in his transplanting.

Five days later—last Sunday—with the Athletics at the stadium, Joe had another happy experience. Instead of 70,000 spectators, there was more than 80,000 bugs out to see the game. This was the largest turnout for a single game in history, and the second largest ever to witness a baseball game, a few thousand more having set the mark at a double header between the same two clubs when Joe still was saying the National was the the only league.

These startling figures, in these days of financial blues singing, are not cited by way of making any comparison with the lure of the respective leagues. For, even with the Yankees' great stadium in existence, the fact remains that the Cubs hold the record and the runnerup honors for the biggest season business in baseball. But the significance of these two mammoth outpourings in the first week of McCarthy's incumbency as manager of the Yankees will be viewed from several angles.

Food for Comparisons.

Those who have taken an interest in the personal phases of the McCarthy-Hornsby matter will have a means of comparison in attendance figures they scarcely can get in the playing department, at least not until the Yanks and Cubs meet in a world series.

The Cubs, with an inadequate capacity, enjoyed the best attendance for the opening week they've ever had. For opening day, and the following Sunday, the total was 86,000. So the thing resolves itself into a matter of sustained popularity. One of the advantages that the Cubs have over the Yanks, in event of playing reverses, is that the Chicago fans are better stickers than the New Yorkers. In Gotham the great bulk of the fan population is strictly of the bandwagon variety.

While it is true that the fans do not go out to the ball parks to look at the manager, there is no question that the customers never underestimate the importance of a head man. Speculation as to the prospects of a club generally start with the fan's estimate of the manager's ingenuity, his standing with the players, and so on. The outpourings in New York, after a comparatively lean season following Miller Huggins' death, can not be anything but a vote of confidence in Joe McCarthy's talents. The overflow crowds at Wrigley field, after a winter of dire predictions by knockers, also must be taken as a calm and intelligent reconsideration by many formerly skeptical fans, in so far as the Hornsby personal equation is concerned.

Cheery Prospects in A. L.

At any rate, it is nice to see baseball booming, and from the viewpoint of American league magnates, it must be cheering to have the prospect of a race that will challenge the gate figures of the National league favorites, notably the record holding Cubs.

LASKER BEATS SANTASIERE IN CHESS TOURNEY

New York, April 25.—(AP)—Only one of the sixth round games of the International Chess Masters tournament was completed this afternoon. Edward Lasker of New York defeated A. The other five matches were adjourned until Monday at the expiration of the allotted five hours of playing time.

José R. Capablanca, Cuban expert, who leads the tournament with five straight victories, appeared a sure winner over Abraham Kupchick of New York. He was a piece to the good after capturing a knight on the 18th move.

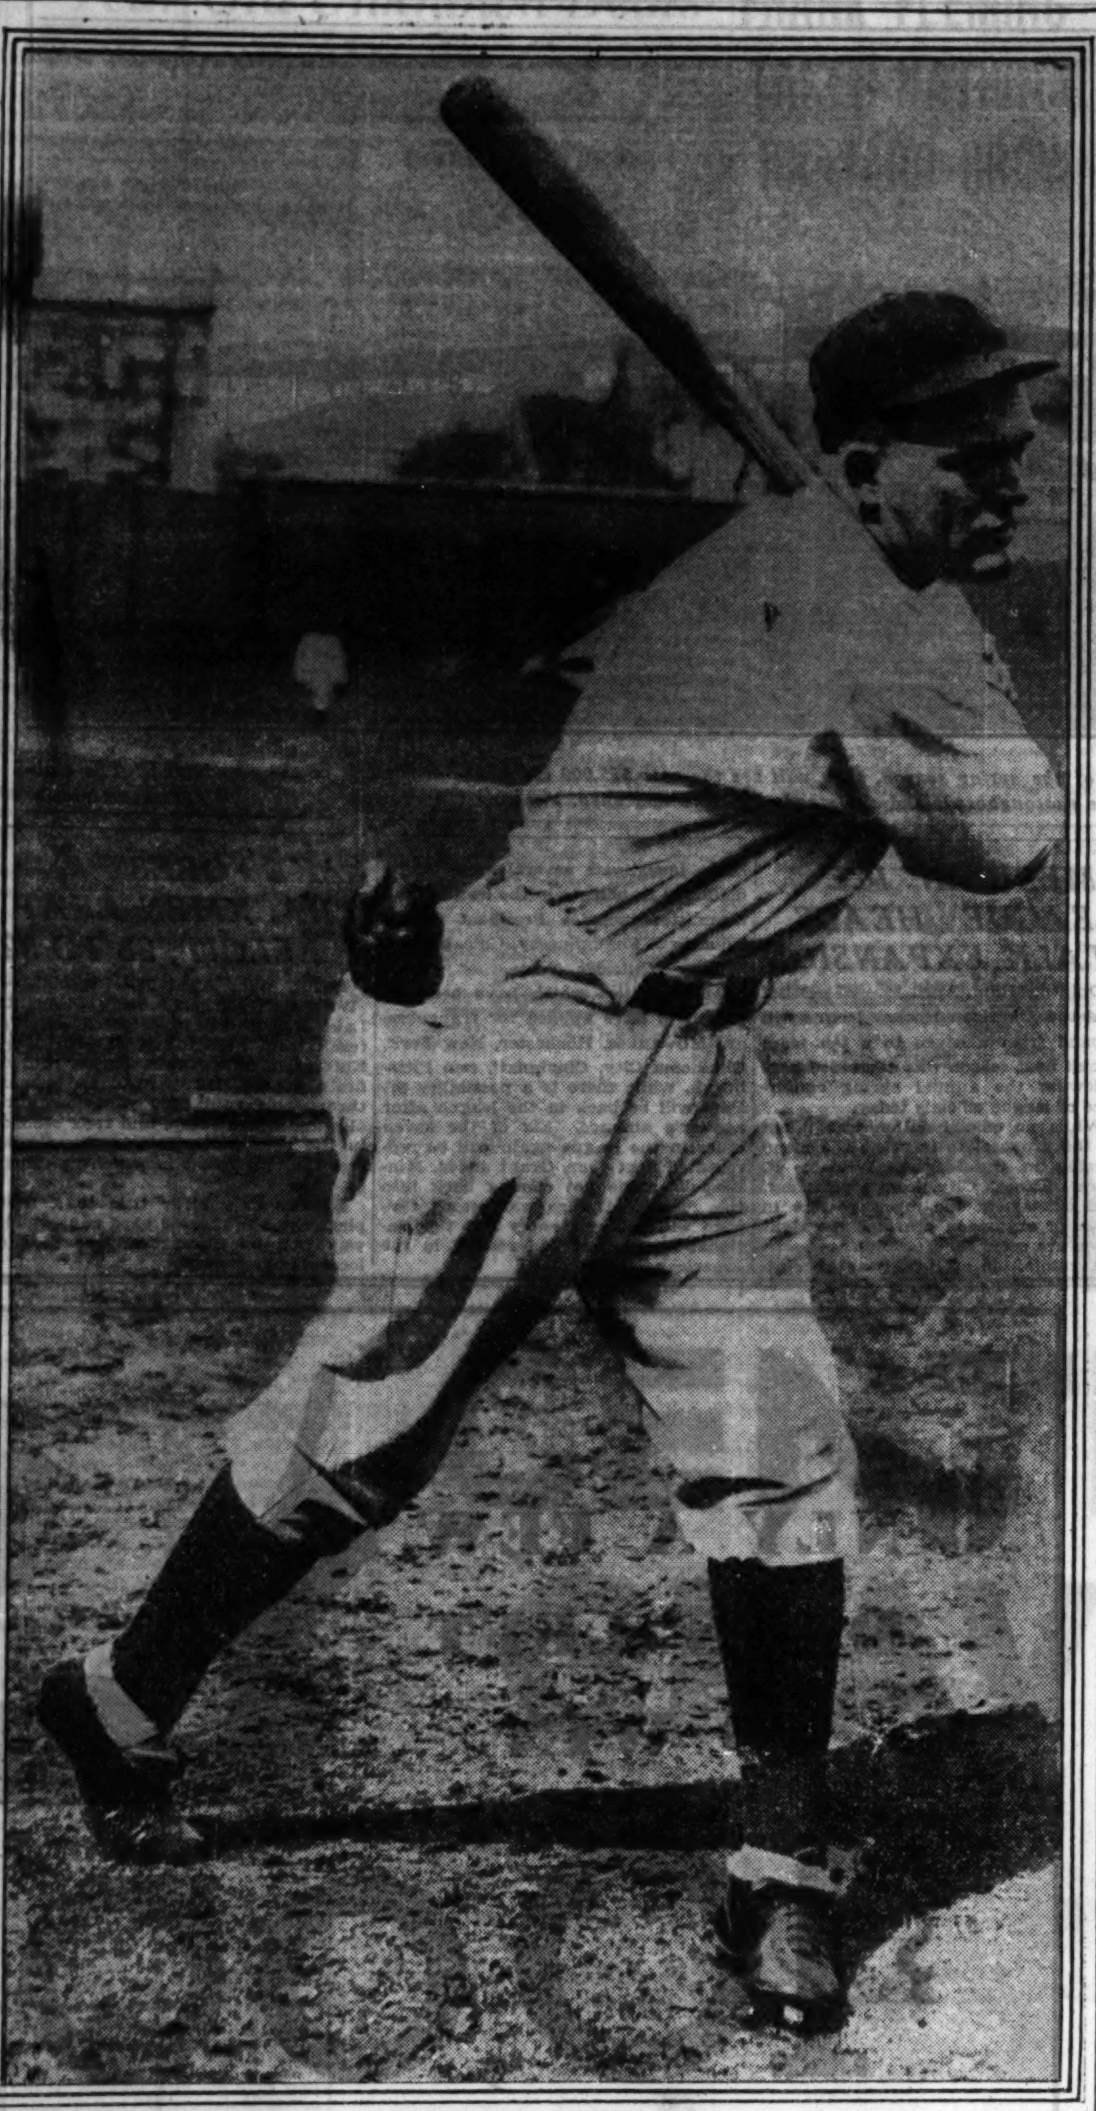
BACK IN CHAMPIONSHIP FORM



Rogers Hornsby, manager of the Cubs, who is showing evidences of his old time batting form, which a few years ago made him the greatest right handed hitter in modern baseball. Adding three successive singles yesterday to his four successive hits of Friday, Hornsby ran his string to seven straight hits before he was finally stopped, and lifted his batting average from .240 to .400. In the last two games he has hit safely eight trips to the plate, three homers, one double, and four singles cracking off his bat.

gerkurth showed a pitiable lack of knowledge of the elemental rules of baseball in a first inning ruling which Moran and McGrew promptly reversed. Today when Moran and Magerkurth failed to show up there was speculation as to whether the move was made to spare them the embarrassment of widespread laughter that their confusion has caused.

The Cubs left tonight for Cincinnati for their first meeting of the year with the Reds, who kicked them out of the 1930 pennant. Charley Root will go after his third victory.

Both Score in First.

In the first inning each team made a run but failed to progress further after each had filled the bases. Cuyler bunted and was thrown out, but English, Hornsby, and Wilson knocked successive singles, the last of which scored English. Stephenson walked, and the bases were full with one out. Then Hartnett hit into a double play, Thevenow to Regan to Suhr.

In the Pirate half, L. Waner walked and Regan flied to Wilson. P. Waner single to center, L. Waner stopping at second. Traynor singled to left, scoring L. Waner, and putting P. Waner on second. Mosolf walked, and the bases were full with one out. Suhr forced P. Waner at the plate, Grimm to Hartnett, and Thevenow fouled to Hartnett.

The Cubs stepped out for another run in the third, but again progress was halted after they had filled the bases with one out. Cuyler walked and went to second on English's single to right. Hornsby drove the ball to the left field foul pole, but the runners were afraid of a possible catch by Mosolf and delayed their sprinting, so the hit went for only a single and the bases were full.

Fumble Aids Cub Cause.

Wilson forced Cuyler at the plate. Then Stephenson grounded to Regan, who fumbled with an easy double play in sight, English scoring. Hartnett sent a long fly to center, but Hornsby and Wilson were running on the pitch, and Hornsby didn't have the opportunity to touch up and walk home after the catch. Bell tapped to Kremer for the third out.

Opportunity seemed golden in the fifth when English made his third hit of the game, a single to center, and got to second while Hornsby was beating out a bunt for his third hit of the game and his seventh hit in a row. Wilson flied to L. Waner, Stephenson popped to Regan, and Phillips went down into his own dugout to catch Hartnett's foul fly.

The Pirates tied the score in their end of the fifth. L. Waner walked with one down and raced home on Regan's double to the scoreboard. P. Waner walked, but Traynor flied to Wilson and Mosolf flied to Stephenson.

Pirates Gain Lead.

The Pirates took the lead in the seventh after two were out. L. Waner flied to Wilson and Regan was called out on strikes. P. Waner singled over Malone's head and was credited with a stolen base when Hartnett made a low throw to English. Traylor singled to right, scoring P. Waner, and went to second on the throw in. Mosolf walked, but Suhr popped to English.

Wilson became very angry when Umpire Jorda called him out on strikes to start the eighth inning. Stephenson fouled to Phillips. Then Hartnett walked, but was forced by Bell.

But how different was that ninth.

Olympic Body Adds Events for Women

BARCELONA, Spain, April 25.—(AP)—Women athletes will be permitted to participate in running events at a distance of more than 200 meters at the 1932 games in Los Angeles, the general Olympic committee ruled today.

This was the most interesting step taken at the first general sessions of the Olympic committee, which spent most of its time listening to a description of and applauding arrangements being made by the United States to hold the tenth Olympic games.

Change Gymnastic Competition.

Charles H. Sherrill of New York, an American delegate to the executive committee, told the convention of plans being made to house and entertain visitors at Los Angeles and said the United States was arranging to handle double the number of entrants in any previous Olympic games.

The chief proposal in which the United States was interested, that of changing the gymnastic games from team to individual competition, was approved by the delegates. Mr. Sherrill had argued that unless this change was made, entries would be sharply curtailed in gymnastics since few countries cared to assume the expense of sending an entire team, preferring to send only a few outstanding competitors.

Norway to Send Full Team.

Sherrill and the other American delegate, William Garland of Los Angeles, were assured today by Norway it would send a full team to the winter sports competition at Lake Placid. Sir Thomas Fearnlay, Norwegian delegate, said his country heartily approved of the arrangements made. The committee decided women would be allowed to participate in the skating events at Lake Placid.

The executive commitee was reëlected for another four year term intact.

POLITICS TO PLAY A HEAVY ROLE IN A. L. PRESIDENCY

Magnates Likely to Delay Choice Until Fall.

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

There is to be no haste about selecting a man to fill the chair of president of the American league. In times of unemployment it probably is a bit strange that a $40,000 job [it will be reduced to $25,000] should be wandering around without an owner, but the magnates want it that way. There really is no reason for them to hurry. Besides, they haven't located a suitable candidate.

When the executive chair became vacant recently through the sudden death of Ernest S. Barnard, the majority of the eight owners quietly agreed that Billy Evans, former newspaper man, umpire, and now business manager of the Cleveland Indians, should have the position. Evans just as quietly let it be known that he wasn't available, which either was a testimonial to his own bravery or to the men who now employ him at a lower salary. With Evans unavailable the owners immediately decided the matter could be held up for future disposal, possibly not earlier than next fall.

Brings On Petty Politics.

The delay in the matter is going to bring on the inevitable politics, of which baseball has had too much in recent years. Each owner will be casting around for a man suitable to himself or to those with whom he wishes to curry favor. Indications of this already are apparent, at least according to those who claim to know things.

The rumored candidacy of William McCarthy, president of the Coast league until he ran afoul of the powers of the William Wrigley faction, is reported to be the project of Jake Ruppert, owner of the Yankees. McCarthy's record in baseball is proof that he is the kind able and willing to speak hi own mind, but his candidacy might encounter obstacles.

Ruppert always has been suspected of wanting the American league headquarters moved to New York, as a matter of prestige. The president of the league can decide this point to suit himself, so if a "Ruppert man" should happen to come in he might make the change. However, the majority of the owners still regard the league as a western institution which should remain close to where it was conceived, so McCarthy's chances probably would depend entirely on whether he would agree in advance to continue the base of operations in Chicago.

Barrows Ruled Out.

Ruppert had another possible candidate in Ed Barrows, his business manager, but this move didn't even get to the budding stage. Whatever chance Barrows might have had, granted that he desired the job, was nullified by his unpopularity with the newspaper men. He assaulted a writer a couple of years ago, and since then his press box percentage has been as low as a pitcher's batting average.

That William Harridge, since 1911 secretary to the late Ban Johnson and of the league, and now acting president, hasn't been more prominently mentioned is easily explained. The magnates know that Harridge is in their employ and that they can at any time move him up a notch. They might be wise in doing just that thing.

If any man knows the working of the league, Harridge is that man. He is well thought of by all the baseball scribes, and that is a thing the magnates admit they will consider. It was one of the reasons they wanted Billy Evans. Another factor in Harridge's favor is that he is well schooled in diplomacy. He couldn't help but be any other way after serving for years as front office man for Johnson, who picked his friends and wanted no dealings with others.

The National league, after neglecting John Heydler a couple of times, finally boosted him from the secretaryship to the presidency, so the American doesn't have to look far for a precedent.

SOCCER TEAMS START PLAY FOR PEEL CUP TODAY

Chicago soccer teams this afternoon will begin play in the first round of the Peel Cup competition. Sparta, Peel Cup and National league champions, will face the Maccabee All Stars at 19th street and Keeler avenue, while the Carpenters and Olympias will clash at 19th street and 47th avenue.

The Maccabees will have Henry Schoonfeld, former Hakoah star, John Neilson, ex-Sparta player, and A. Webster, wing from Detroit, in the lineup, while Sparta will be aided by Baba Vlcek, a clever inside man.

Joe Witsunski, goalkeeper from Johnstone City, will play for the Olympias, who plan to make a strong bid for the cup. Danny Carroll, speedy center, will lead the Carpenter forwards.

The Bricklayers, runners-up for the national title, and the Jugoslavs will be idle today, having drawn byes in the first round.

KENTUCKY DERBY.

KENTUCKY'S fifty-seventh Derby, to be run at Churchill Downs, Louisville, May 16, promises one of its greatest contests in years from the standpoint of contention if the leading candidates now regarded as sure starters go to the post. It commands added interest from the fact that turf critics generally expect 1931 to be a season of great 3 year olds, with the ultimate title a moot question.

The Preakness stakes at Pimlico a week preceding the Derby may change some established rating, as well as bring into the limelight some now lightly regarded youngsters. Thus the Kentucky Derby barrier will release for the trying test of one and one-quarter miles the best 3 year olds which are ready for such a gruelling route. Its winner will establish temporary claim to a championship in this division which seems likely to show more high class performers than for many years.

In the winter or future book quotations Equipoise, Twenty Grand, Mate, and Insco are held at the shortest prices. That quartet alone would insure a contest. But there are many others whose trainers regard them highly. Among these others prominently mentioned are Pittsburgher, Sweep All, Surf Board, and Prince D'Amour.

Two year old supremacy of 1930 was disputed between Equipoise, Twenty Grand, and Jamestown. The latter will not be ready for the Kentucky Derby, but will be reserved for some of the later events, which include the Belmont Stakes, American Derby at Washington Park, Latonia Derby, the great Arlington Classic with its richest 3 year old prize money of the year, and those other classics of the Saratoga and Belmont [fall] meetings.

It is a turf axiom that when horses beat one another without one standing out "they ain't much account." These 2 year olds, now 3 year olds, were an exception. Equipoise beat Twenty Grand and Twenty Grand beat Equipoise. But when Twenty Grand beats Equipoise a nose in the Kentucky Jockey club stakes in the fastest mile ever run by 2 year olds anywhere, who is going to call that a conclusive test?

Barring mishap between now and May 16, both these colts will start at Louisville. The "Sonny" Whitney colt, Equipose, is quoted at 3 to 1 against in the future betting, while Twenty Grand, property of Mrs. Payne Whitney, an aunt of "Sonny," is 6 to 1. Mate, which ran such a good inaugural last week, is third choice at 8 to 1. Insco, owned by Griffith Watkins of Alton, is 12 to 1.

Intervening events may change the prospects somewhat, but it certainly looks like a "hoss race" at Louisville May 16. "Experting" by French Lane and The Wake will follow in due season. It's probable that we'll have to go to Louisville and talk to the horses themselves, as per annual custom, before reaching a definite conclusion.

50 Species of Birds Prey to Killing Hawks

BY BOB BECKER.

When the roll is called at the end of the year a mighty long string of indictments can be drawn up against the sharpshinned and Cooper's hawks which prey upon and kill our song and game birds in the central states. As Uncle Sam has said after investigating the killings of this pair: "No birds, from the size of doves, robins, and flickers to the smallest warblers and titmice, are safe" from the attacks of these birds.

A comparatively small hawk—he is only about 12 inches long, blue gray above, grimy white below and barred on the sides with a rusty brown—the sharpshinned is known to kill more than 50 species of birds exclusive of chickens. The predator likes his barnyard poultry about half grown or smaller. He can and does exterminate early broods which are allowed to run at large.

Here Are Hawks' Victims.

Here is a partial list of the more common birds which the sharpshinned and his more abundant co-killer, the Cooper's hawk, take in the course of a year: Mourning dove, downy woodpeckers, yellow winged woodpecker, cowbird, grackle, goldfinch, white throated sparrow, field sparrow, chipping sparrow, junco, song sparrow, fox sparrow, vireo, six varieties of warblers, overbird, catbird, nuthatch, hermit thrush, quail, young pheasants, robin, and bluebird.

If there ever is a time when birds need cover, it's when one of these speedy hawks makes a surprise attack. It's a case of "Jack be nimble and Jack be quick" if quail, junco, young pheasant or thrush is going to escape with its life. The pheasant is so speedy on his feet that he has his chance to escape the talons of a hawk by sprinting in and through a tangle of weeds and tall grass until he is hidden. Some pheasant cover that we have walked through actually is tunneled by pheasants. These hideouts are a haven to the ringnecks when attacked.

Quail Hideouts.

Quail must have similar cover as protection against feathered predators. Dense hedgerows choked with weed growth, tall stands of wild grass and other plants which furnish a hideout, a tangle of raspberry bushes or other bushes grown up with weeds, draws in between hills where thickets are found, and other similar places save quail when a hawk attacks.

The towhee, vireo, sparrows, ovenbird, catbird [which nests in thickets], and other small birds also must turn to such thick cover to escape hawks.

These land birds rely upon a quick dash into a hideout to escape death. But coots, shore birds and ducks have their cover in deep water. One summer we spent several weeks on a bird refuge in the west we saw many of a speedy nose dive made by teal, pintails and other species when a hawk gave any indication of zooming down.

Duck Hawks Fast.

Supreme as a killer of waterbirds is the duck hawk. Few birds fly more swiftly than this fellow. We used to think that the teal was the fastest thing on wings until one day, on a big marsh near a lake, we saw a duck hawk strike one down as the harassed teal tried to get to open water.

Oliphant Gets 2 Homers and Hanley 1.

Northwestern made it two in a row over Minnesota by winning yesterday's game, 9 to 2, at Roycemore field. The victory was the third of the Big Ten season for the Purple. The Wildcats pounded three Gopher pitchers for nine hits, three of them home runs, two by Oliphant and one by Hanley. Buck Fyfe, Northwestern veteran, held Minnesota to two scratch singles and struck out eight men.

Northwestern got off to a three run lead in the third. Dempsey doubled, Hanley followed with a single, and Oliphant cleared the bases with a home run over the center fielder's head. Three hits, one of them a triple by Fyfe, accounted for three more Purple tallies in the fifth. In the seventh Northwestern scored three more when Evans doubled and Hanley and Oliphant cracked out home runs in succession. Score:

RACING SEASON OPENS FRIDAY AT AURORA TRACK

BY FRENCH LANE.

Chicago's racing season, which will extend over a period of six months and bring all the great horses in the country into action here some time between now and Nov. 1, will open at the course of the Aurora Jockey club in the Fox river valley on next Friday afternoon.

If Chicago racegoers are as enthusiastic as the racegoers were in Kentucky, New York, and Maryland when the season opened at those centers, a bumper crowd is in prospect. For at Lexington, Jamaica, and Havre de Grace attendance records have been shattered this year.

The Aurora Jockey club, with better horses than have ever patronized the track, with a spic and span new clubhouse, even though it is small, and with a plant that has generally been revamped, is making its strongest bid for Chicago patronage at this year's spring meeting, which will continue for 20 days.

Fans Tire of Racing by Wire.

And it will likely get a huge patronage, for Chicago, ever a hotbed of turf enthusiasts, has indicated it has tired of the telegraphic race reports and is very anxious to see the thoroughbreds go into action.

Aurora's program this spring is without a stake attraction, but the great stake events in Chicago will come later, for there's the American Derby at Washington Park in June, the Arlington Classic, Arlington Cup, Arlington Handicap, Arlington Post and Paddock stakes for 2 year olds in July, the Hawthorne handicap in August, the Lincoln handicap in early September at Lincoln Fields, the Hawthorne Gold Cup in early October, and many other stakes worth anywhere from $5,000 to $20,000 sandwiched into the season's program.

Championships in some divisions are sure to be decided in this series of Chicago stake and handicap events. So the sport at Aurora for 20 days, which will find a lot of well matched horses competing for prizes that are more valuable than any ever offered at that track, will likely put the Chicago turf fans in fine fettle for the more important championship events that are to come later in the Chicago season.

1,200 Horses in Quarters.

For more than six weeks the thoroughbreds and the persons who make up the racing colony have been arriving at the Aurora track. Today about 1,200 horses are quartered in or near the Aurora racing grounds, and they include about 300 two year olds, the best lot of youngsters that have ever arrived on the Chicago racing scene so early in the season. This may indicate that the juvenile racing will be the best to be offered at Aurora this spring, and out of the wild scramble among the baby racers may come some colts or fillies that will make a strong bid for the title in their division.

The Aurora Inaugural handicap, a dash at six furlongs, will be the feature of Friday afternoon's opening. It should bring out the best sprinters at the track and time trials indicate that there are a large number of performers awaiting the engagement. Martin Nathanson, supervisor of the racing at Aurora, and Racing Secretary Charles Henry are arranging a program for opening day that will bring out most of the best horses that will race there through the meeting.

In the Aurora colony horses are to be found not only from Illinois, but from Kentucky, Maryland, New York, and the winter racing centers, New Orleans, Miami, Cuba, and Agua Caliente. Big shipments are to arrive early this week from the Tanforan track in California and from Maryland.

Expect Crowd of 20,000.

Aurora's opening crowd should be the largest on record because women are to be admitted free. Every Monday and Friday will be Ladies' day during the Aurora season and no exception was made of the rule for the opening. The officials of the Aurora track have made plans to handle a crowd of 20,000.

So dig the binoculars out of storage, for the bugle is going to sound "Boots and Saddles" at fifteen minutes after 2 o'clock next Friday afternoon.

MAROON TRACK TEAM GETS TO MEETS BY AUTO

Philadelphia, Pa., April 25.—(AP)—When the University of Chicago track team "hits the roads" it does just that—on rubber tires.

Maroon athletes here for the Pennsylvania relays said they not only had driven the 1,000 miles from Chicago by auto to compete in the meet, but they also took to the road to compete in the Kansas relays, making the 2,600 mile trip to Lawrence in automobiles.

The team's junkets so far have cost the University of Chicago nothing, its members said, slender guarantees paying for most of the gasoline and meals and the athletes themselves paying the balance out of their pockets.

Rice Pitcher Hurls No Hit Game; Beats Methodists

Houston, Tex., April 25.—(AP)—Ray Hart, Rice institute pitcher, turned in a no hit no run game today to defeat Southern Methodist university, 5 to 0.

NO HIT GAME BY ROOKIE.

Selinsgrove, Pa., April 25.—(AP)—Hughes Bringinger, pitcher for the Susquehanna university baseball team, pitched a no hit no run game here today in defeating Moravian, 6 to 0. It was his first intercollegiate game. He struck out eight batters and gave six bases on balls.

WHEN THOROUGHBREDS RETURN TO ILLINOIS TURF

When Chicago racegoers visit the Aurora Jockey club's plant Friday afternoon for the first program of the spring season, they will see the new $75,000 clubhouse at the left of the grandstand. The clubhouse, now nearing completion, will be ready for opening day. The track has been put in top condition for the thoroughbreds and the stands are spic and span, awaiting the crowds. Equipoise Is Last in Stake Race at Havre

Havre de Grace, Md., April 25.—(AP)—Favorite for the Preakness and Kentucky Derby, America's heaviest money winner as a 2 year old and a one to seven choice to win today, Equipoise ran last in the $10,000 Chesapeake stakes here this afternoon.

The Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney colt, ridden by Albert Robertson, leading winner of the Havre de Grace spring season, was badly beaten in the mile and one-sixteenth feature, trailing a field of six 3 year olds that were not considered in his class.

Anchors Aweigh, a son of Man o' War, from the Greentree stables, was brought in with a rush by C. Kurtsinger to nose out Soll Gillis from the Seagram stable. Third was landed by L. W. Ziegler's Levante. Then came Great Gun and Mynheer.

Beaten by 13½ lengths.

Thirteen and a half lengths behind the winner, with Robertson frantically belaboring him, was the son of Pennant-Swinging. It was the biggest upset in recent turf history and was stunning to a crowd of 18,000 that had been yelling "come on Equipoise," expecting to see the favorite spurt forward.

Had Equipoise won he would have paid $2.30, the shortest odds on a Maryland track in years. The reason for the defeat, said Dr. Henry J. McCarthy of Baltimore, who was called to the Whitney barn to examine the favorite after the race, was that Equipoise was suffering from a mild case of kidney poisoning.

"Equipoise contracted a case of azoturia, brought about by a change in the weather," said the veterinarian. "When I looked him over as he left the paddock for the race I informed a horseman that the colt had the ailment and would not do himself justice, as it causes an animal to have poor use of his hind legs. If he is rested he will be able to overcome it in a short time and be as good as ever."

Head Trainer T. J. Healey and Freddie Hopkins, who handles Equipoise, said they would not have allowed him to leave the barn had they known of his illness.

Has No Interference.

Anchors Aweigh was the general choice for second place because of his victory Wednesday in his first start as a three year old, but he was not ranked with Equipoise, though nominated for the Preakness and the Derby. The Man o' War colt was fractious as on Wednesday and held up the start for eight minutes.

Equipoise suffered no interference and there was little to account for his failure. Though he won $156,835 as a two year old and was victor in his only other start this year, he was known not to be invincible, as he was defeated last year by Mate, Twenty Grand, and Jamestown.

The time, 1:46 4-5, over a fast track, was not exceptional, as the record for the Chesapeake is 1:45 1-5.

Equipoise was so heavily backed that fancy prices were realized by those who believed he could be beaten. Anchors Aweigh paid $24.20 to $2 to win, $6.70 to place, and $5.30 to run third. Soll Gillis paid $31.20 and $13.10 and Levante $17.80.

SURFBOARD IS VICTOR

New York, April 25.—[Special.]—Surfboard, which may be Mrs. Payne Whitney's color bearer in the Preakness, gave the Greentree stable its fourth victory in the Kings County handicap, which dates back to 1903, when he led from start to finish today and won from older horses in impressive fashion. Leopardess, Navigator and Constockery were the other Greentree winners, but all were older than three when they scored.

Mokatam, winner of the initial handicap for Harry F. Sinclair at the United Hunts meeting, was placed second to Surfboard after G. A. Best's Reveille Boy, winner of the 1930 American Derby, was disqualified. The official placing put W. R. Coe's Maya in third position.

The action of the stewards was the first of the meeting, and Robert A. Fairbairn said that Reveille Boy had been set back following the report of the patrol judge that there had been crowding for most of the way around the bend. Jockey J. G. Wynne, rider of Reveille Boy, was suspended for five days.

Surfboard's victory was worth $5,700 and makes the Greentree stable the leading money winner of the meeting. He is the fourth three year old to take the Kings County, others being Israfel in 1906, Massak in 1928, and Bargello in 1929.

Twenty Grand and Equipoise at 5-1 in Derby

New York, April 25.—[U. P.]—Cornelius V. Whitney's Equipoise, which ruled first choice in future wagering on the Kentucky Derby to be run three weeks hence, now shares favoritism with the Greentree stable's Twenty Grand, due to his poor showing in the Chesapeake stakes at Havre de Grace today. Both are now quoted at 5 to 1 by Tom Shaw, a commissioner. Equipoise last week was quoted at 3 to 1.

Anchors Aweigh, winner of today's contest in which Equipoise finished last, has been dropped from 40 to 1 to 25 to 1. A. C. Bostwick's Mate remains at his former price of 8 to 1, while Griffin Watkins' Insco has been dropped to 10 to 1.

Surf Board Drops to 15-1.

Surf Board, stablemate of Twenty Grand and Anchors Aweigh, has been dropped from 20 to 15 to 1 by virtue of his victory in the Kings county handicap at Jamaica today. Despite the poor showing of Sweep All at Lexington Friday, Shaw has cut Charles T. Fisher's Nominee from 30 to 25 to 1.

E. R. Bradley's Barometer and B'ar Hunter have been lowered from 60 to 30, while the Shady Brook farm's Pittsburgher has taken a 20 point drop to 40.

Shaw does not believe Spanish Play, winner of the Louisiana Derby and runner-up in the Florida Derby, to be on a par with the leading contenders, and rates the Kentucky colt a 60 to 1 chance.

60-1 on Don Leon, Ormsby.

Don Leon, Boys Howdy, High Day, Ormesby, Phantom Star and Polydorus are also offered at 60 to 1, with few supporters.

The following quotations being offered by Shaw are regarded as a definite line on the almost certain starters in the historical Derby at Churchill Downs on May 16:

Horse—	Straight.	Place.	Show.
Equipoise	5-1	5-2	7-5
Twenty Grand	5-1	5-2	7-5
Mate	8-1	4-1	2-1
Insco	10-1	5-1	5-2
Surf Board	15-1	7-1	4-1
Sweep All	25-1	12-1	6-1
Anchors Aweigh	25-1	12-1	6-1
Barometer	30-1	15-1	8-1
B'ar Hunter	30-1	15-1	8-1
Sun Meadows	30-1	15-1	8-1
Siskin	40-1	20-1	10-1
Pittsburgher	40-1	20-1	10-1

Others of 126 eligibles are quoted at 100 to 1 and upwards.

Navy Wins by 2 Lengths from Massachusetts Tech

Annapolis, Md., April 25.—(AP)—The Navy varsity crew defeated Massachusetts Institute of Technology by two lengths on the Severn today, after trailing a length at the start. The time for the Henley distance was 7 minutes 10 2-5 seconds. The tech junior varsity crew won its event, however, by a length and a half. All races were over the Henley distance, a mile and five sixteenths.

AMERICAN ICE LEAGUE HEADS TALK EXPANSION

Duluth, Minn., April 25.—(AP)—Belief that the American Hockey league will expand from a seven to a ten team circuit next season was expressed here following the annual spring conference of league officials today.

While no official action was taken on the proposal to increase the membership in the league, William F. Grant, Kansas City, league president, said officials at the meeting were in favor of expansion provided the right cities are selected.

A committee of three was appointed to investigate several applications made for franchises in the league. The committee includes President Grant, Thomas J. Shaughnessy, Chicago, and Walker Whiteside, Tulsa.

Among cities which have been reported to have applied for franchises are Milwaukee, Rochester, New York, Oklahoma City, Cincinnati, and Pittsburgh, while there is a possibility St. Paul will be back in the league after a year's absence. Six of the seven cities in the league again will be represented next year, Grant added, Minneapolis alone not coming back into the circuit. It also was stated Chicago will not seek entry into the National league, but will remain in the American circuit.

LAKE FOREST TRACKMEN BEAT BELOIT, 98 TO 32

Beloit, Wis., April 25.—[Special.]—With Carl Parker scoring 36 points, Lake Forest college defeated Beloit's track team here today, 98½ to 32½. Entered in nine events, Parker scored firsts in the 100 yard dash, discus throw, pole vault, 220 yard low hurdles and broad jump, and took second in the shot put. The javelin throw was the only event in which he failed to place.

Beloit's only clear title to a first place came in the 880 yard run, which was won by Stewart Gloyer of the local team.

SOISSONS WINS MARYLAND HUNT CUP; TWO FINISH

Baltimore, Md., April 25.—(AP)—Soissons, the Flying Horse Stable's six to one shot, ridden hard by Jack Skinner, won the 38th Maryland Hunt Cup steeplechase today, leading Brose Hover, the favorite, by nearly 50 yards. Of the seven starters, these were the only ones to finish, all of the rest failing to rise after spills which started at the second of the 22 jumps of the four mile course.

Despite a drizzle, a crowd estimated at nearly 15,000, including sportsmen from all sections of the country, saw the race, outstanding of its kind in the United States.

Brose Hover Falls.

Brose Hover made a gallant effort to win the Ross W. Whistler Challenge Cup for his owner, Benjamin L. Behr of Chicago. Brose Hover has won this event twice and needed only a victory today to give Mr. Behr permanent possession of the trophy. But he went down on the second jump, throwing his rider, Crawford Burton, who remounted to finish.

Bon Master's owner, C. L. A. Heiser, over whose estate the race was run, also had two legs on the cup. But the horse went down and out on the eighteenth jump.

Reel Foot, W. W. Lanahan's Maryland entry, led most of the way, followed closely by Sea Soldier, another Chicago horse, owned by A. H. Niblack. The twentieth jumped, however, proved too much for them, both hitting the timber and going down, refusing to rise. It was here that Soissons, the Boston horse, took the lead.

Pace Is Slow.

The winner's time was 9:32-5, much slower than the record of 8:58 3-5, set by Brose Hover in winning last year. Behr's entry also won in 1925.

Brose Hover was the overwhelming favorite, after finishing first two weeks ago in My Lady's Manor Point to Point, which opened the Maryland cross country season.

EMERSON PREP ATHLETE SETS HURDLES MARK

Gary, Ind., April 25.—[Special.]—A steady downfall of rain and a slippery track did not prevent high school trackmen of Chicago and northern Indiana from record shattering performances in the first annual Gary invitational interscholastic relays here this afternoon.

Topping the record performances was a 15 second 120 yard high hurdle victory scored by Kenneth Sandbach of Emerson of Gary. Caught by four watches Sandbach's winning time bettered by one-tenth of a second the national interscholastic mark established in the 1930 University of Chicago national interscholastic by Charlie Casper of Harlandale, Tex.

19 Year Old Unknown Beats Tolan in Drake Carnival

Nebraska's quartet of stars won in 1 minute 2 5-10 seconds with Wisconsin and Iowa following closely.

And there was Harold Manning, Wichita's versatile distance star. Holder of the national collegiate two mile championship, and favorite to break Orval Martin's Drake record today, he was forced from the race at the start of the fifth lap and watched another, Clark Chamberlain of Michigan State, go on to victory and a new record.

Chamberlain, himself the national cross country title holder, swept with tireless effort eight times around the track in 9 minutes 23 1-10 seconds, three and one tenth seconds better than Martin had done last year.

Manning was second that day, a year ago, but his national record time last June was superior even to Chamberlain's this afternoon.

Manning Wins in Medley.

Manning, however, found consolation. Running the anchor half mile in the sprint medley for colleges, he won by inches from his rival from Abilene Christian. Wichita's effort of 3 minutes 30 9-10 seconds broke the Drake relay mark. Coe college and Loyola of Chicago finished third and fourth.

And Tolan also shared in Michigan's three relay triumphs. Running last for his team in the university 880 yard relay, Tolan broke the tape for a meet record of one minute 27 seconds. The former mark of 1:27.5 had been established eight years by Illinois and tied two years later by Michigan.

Michigan's other relay victories were in the one mile and two mile events. Washington State, Drake and Marquette trailed the Wolverines in the two mile relay, while Notre Dame was second in the mile, the final event of the program.

In that race Edwin Russell, Wolverine anchor, came from behind to win by a foot from Alex Wilson, Canadian Olympic runner.

Here Are Other Marks.

Other record performances were:

Abilene Christian college's two mile team, which was timed in 7 minutes 57 9-10 seconds.

Hugh Rhea's 50 foot 7.2 inch shot put mark, for the second time in two days, advanced the record established last year by Jim Bausch of Kansas. The Nebraska football star yesterday spun the 16 pound ball 49 feet 7 inches.

The quartet of University of Texas football stars lowered the football 440 yard relay time to 43 2-10 seconds, with Tulane, Northwestern, and Alabama finishing in that order. Tulane was defending champion. As a result Texas will receive the Knute Rockne Memorial trophy. The event also was opportunity for the crowd to stand, bareheaded and silent, in brief tribute to Notre Dame's former coach.

Competition was close in other events, although records were not endangered.

Hein Beats Weldon.

Hein of Washington State defeated Weldon of Iowa in the javelin, reversing the decision at Kansas a week ago. Hein's mark was 199.9 feet, with Weldon throwing 192.65 feet.

Ed Gordon of Iowa leaped 23 feet 10½ inches to win the broad jump from Gray of Nebraska, whose mark was 23 feet 6⅝ inches.

Purma of Illinois was .33 of a foot better than Kabat, Wisconsin's discus thrower. Purma had a championship performance of 143.88 feet.

Strong of Southwestern Teachers, Oklahoma, won the high jump at 6 feet 3¾ inches, an inch better than Shaw, Wisconsin; Ehrlich, Kansas Aggies, and Russell of Bradley Tech could do.

Kansas won the 440 yard relay, the shortest on the program, while Illinois' quartet of mile runners took the longest, the four mile relay. Neither surpassed Drake records.

McDermont Wins Vault.

Verne McDermont, holder of the indoor pole vault record, soared 13 feet 6 inches for a championship with five others, among them Tom Warne of Northwestern, tied at 13 feet. Last year Warne jumped 13 feet 11 inches, three inches short of the world's outdoor record.

120 YARD HIGH HURDLES—Won by Hager, Iowa State; Sentman, Illinois, second; Flick, Kansas, third; Egleston, Michigan, fourth; Schaeffley, Minnesota, fifth. FRANK FLEMING TAKES NATIONAL BILLIARD CROWN

Harper Beats Schweitzka in Spite of Collapse.

Champaign, Ill., April 25.—[Special.]—Frank I. Fleming of Champaign won the 1931 national amateur three cushion billiard championship when Walter A. Schwietzka, also of Champaign, lost to Robert B. Harper of Denver, dethroned titleholder, tonight, 50 to 49, in one of the most dramatic games ever played in amateur billiards.

Fleming's triumph was made possible when he defeated Lewis M. Vogler this afternoon, 50 to 42. This was Fleming's third national three cushion championship.

The Schwietzka-Harper game was marked by the great comeback of Schweitzka, who trailed, 31 to 13, in the fourtieth inning, and the nervous collapse of Harper just after Schwietzka scored three points in the first half of the eighty-third inning, to take the lead, 49 to 46. The game was delayed more than 15 minutes until Harper recovered.

From the 40th inning to the 69th Schwietzka outscored Harper, 29 to 10, and took the lead for the first time at 42 to 41. Here the players settled down to a fight which saw the score tied at 43—43, 44—44, 45—45, and 46—46, the latter tie being made in the 81st inning.

Fleming gained the crown with five victories and one defeat. Schwietzka and Harper each won four and lost two but Schwietzka gained second prize on the basis of the point total. Joseph Hall, San Francisco, was fourth; Vogler, fifth; H. N. Purdy, Atlanta, sixth, and Anthony N. Clesi, Beaumont, Tex., seventh.

Final standings follow:

Player—	W.	L.	H.R.	Best game.	Tot'l
Fleming	5	1	5	54	291
Schwietzka	4	2	5	60	[illegible]
Harper	4	2	7	56	262
Vogler	3	3	6	69	259
Hall	3	3	7	40	276

Commission to Hear Lewis' Demand for Londos Bout

Strangler Lewis will go before the Illinois athletic commission Tuesday to inform that group that he wants to meet Jim Londos for the heavyweight wrestling championship of the world. At the same time Lou Daro, a California promoter, is expected to present a certified check for $25,000 made out to Londos as his share in the receipts of the proposed bout. In addition, Lewis says he will post a forfeit, the amount to be determined by the commission.

Chicago wrestling fans will see the Strangler at the Coliseum on Tuesday night against Jean de Deaux. It will be his first appearance in this city since he recovered his prestige by defeating Don George, the conqueror of Gus Sonnenberg, who previously had defeated Lewis. Le Deaux is a giant Frenchman.

In one of the other bouts on the program, Sonnenberg will encounter Karl Zbyszko, the nephew of the veteran wrestling brothers, Wladek and Stanislaus Zbyszko. Karl has lost only one match in America, that to Sonnenberg a little over a year ago in Milwaukee.

Hank Bruder, formerly of Northwestern, will grapple George Schwab in a preliminary.

LOW CENTER OF GRAVITY

TESTS PROVE IT SAFE AT 47°

ACCEPT NO CAR WITHOUT IT

The whole trend in motor cars is toward low center of gravity—in the achievement of which Dodge stands squarely in the forefront of progress.

Low center of gravity means safety. It means beauty, expressed in low-swung sweeping lines. It means a steadier riding car. Easier control, easier steering at high speeds.

In the new Dodge Six and Eight, it means even greater strength of chassis than in the past. For the Dodge Double-Drop frame has a box-type center—so powerfully reinforced that the hardest going at any speed cannot transmit destructive strain to the car.

Contributing still further to low center of gravity is the Dodge Mono-Piece Steel Body. Mounted without sills, this body shares the strength and steadiness of the frame. Virtually a single piece of steel, it is squeak-proof, weave-proof and trouble-proof.

The low center of gravity typifies the modern character, the modern dependability of the new Dodge cars.

See them. Drive them. Learn how much in beauty, how much in performance, how much in comfort and luxury they offer. You'll quickly realize why the country is united in the opinion that Dodge gives the great value of the year.

25 Autos at Indianapolis for Speed Race

Indianapolis, Ind., April 25.—(AP)—Twenty-five automobiles already are here for the nineteenth international 500 mile race, to be run at the Indianapolis motor speedway May 30, a check up today showed.

Speedway officials said the entries would approach sixty by deadline time, midnight of May 1. Extra garages to house the cars are being built at the speedway.

Never before in the history of the race, officials said, have there been so many racers here so early for training and preparation for the chase for approximately $100,000.

Louie Meyer's two cars—one the 16 cylinder job he brought home fourth a year ago, and the other a new eight cylinder—have been here for several weeks. Meyer is expected within a few days.

Louis Schneider, Indianapolis, who finished third in 1930, has two cars in course of preparation. Phil Shafer, a veteran of many races; Joe Caccia, Italian driver; Russell Snowberger; Joe Russo; Wild Bill Cummins; William (Speed) Gardner; and the Dussenberg brothers, Augie and Fred, have their machines either at the track or in downtown workshops.

Billy Arnold, winner of the race last May; Peter De Paolo, Leon Duray, and other prominent drivers are expected here with their cars within a week.

WADE DOUBTS IF FOOTBALL BUILDS UP A UNIVERSITY

Chapel Hill, N. C., April 25.—(AP)—Wallace Wade, whose football teams at Alabama twice won Rose bowl games, today said he did not believe a championship team increased either the enrollment or the endowment of a university.

Wade, director of athletics at Duke university, was addressing the American College Publicity association at the University of North Carolina here.

"It seems to me," Wade said, "that the experience of institutions all over the country shows the way to increase student enrollment and endowment is to raise academic standards, improve equipment and secure better teachers."

He said football should be emphasized only for the development and training it gives young men.

Auto Tour to Lafayette Is Scenic Trip

BY HAL FOUST.

Three hours' drive from Tribune tower over one of the best roads in the United States is Lafayette, Ind., on the banks of the Wabash river, endeared by song to the hearts of all Hoosiers and rich in pastoral scenery and historic background.

The recommended route is over U. S. 41, which can be picked up on the outer drive, and U. S. 52, which is met 8.5 miles south of Kentland, Ind. The total mileage to Lafayette is 129.

The concrete highway is a delight to those who enjoy the purr of their motor at high speed. There are few towns on the route, and the curves are well moderated so the driver of a modern automobile can take full advantage of Indiana's modern speed law, which has no limit other than the maximum consistent with the condition of the road and the nature of the traffic.

Season Far Advanced.

The highway does more than accommodate those in a hurry to get some place. The roadside is pleasant to those who appreciate the gentle hills of a fertile farm country, fruit trees abloom, flowering shrubbery in farmers' yards, violets and spring beauties in the ditches of the right of way, and song birds calling from valley and knoll. Just these few miles south of Chicago, with its cool lake breezes, makes a difference of two or three weeks in the advance of the season.

On entering West Lafayette the motorist passes Purdue university, Big Ten football champion of 1929, with an attractive campus representing a $6,000,000 investment in educational facilities, and with a student body of 4,500. The city, with 5,095 population and many beautiful homes, is built in the bluffs on one bank of the Wabash, while in the hills across the river is Lafayette proper with 26,155 inhabitants. The town was platted in 1825 by William Digby, three years after its first white settler, Peter Weaver, built his log cabin there.

Replica of First Fort.

The history of the nearby valleys predates Lafayette by more than a century, however. The Wabash river was paddled by the French fur traders in the seventeenth century. In 1719 they built Fort Ouiatanon, four miles south of Lafayette. The post was the first fortification on the Wabash and is described in some histories as the first white settlement in the present boundaries of Indiana.

A replica of the old log block house was finished last year. To visit it turn south on the South River road where U. S. 52 and Ind. 43 intersect in West Lafayette. It's an attractive side trip, "On the Banks of the Wabash, Far Away." In addition to the sycamores mentioned by Paul Dresser and his brother, Theodore Dreiser, in their song, elms, oaks, willows, and poplars line the river's edge.

North six miles from Lafayette on the west bank of the Wabash is the Tippecanoe battleground, where William Henry Harrison, governor of the Indiana territory, on Nov. 7, 1811, defeated Tecumseh's brother, the Prophet, and ended the Indian scare in the territory. In 1840 "Tippecanoe and Tyler, too," was the Whig campaign slogan that elected Harrison President and Tyler Vice President.

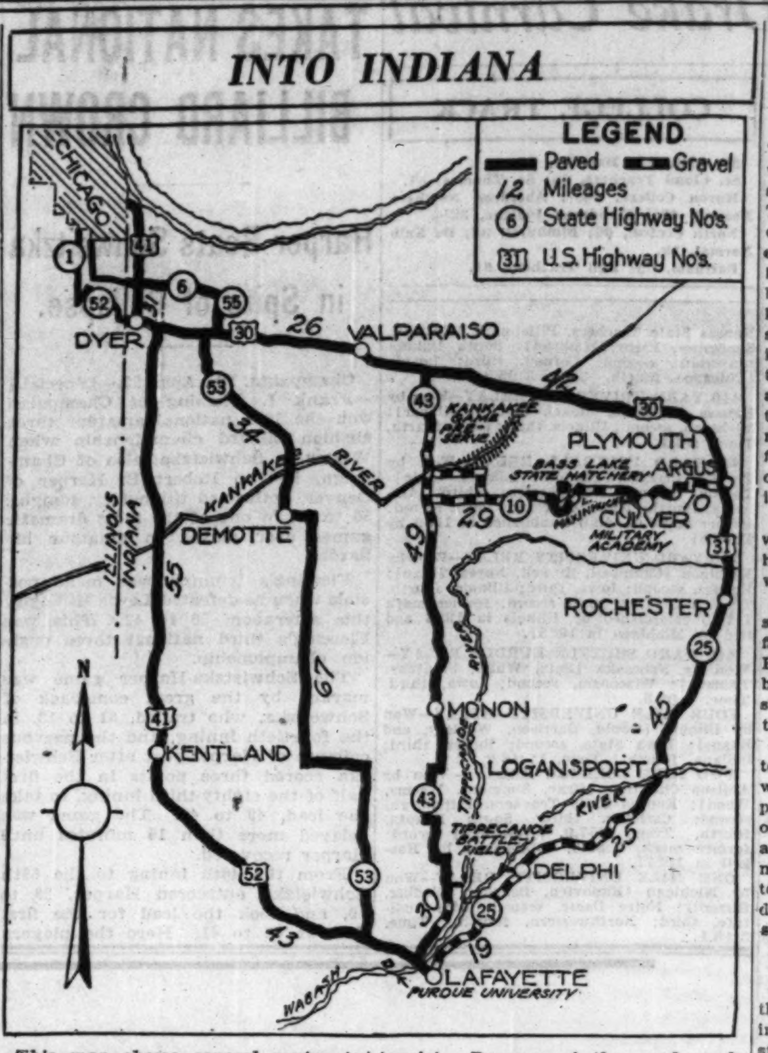
A Famous Battleground.

The battleground is in a scenic setting, on a wooded knoll at the junction of the Wabash and Tippecanoe rivers. However, a Methodist camp of frame houses does not fit with the natural surroundings.

The fastest route for the return trip to Chicago is over U. S. 41 and U. S. 52, as has been described. Alternate routes, which may be followed just for the sake of using a different road, are Ind. 43 and Ind. 53, as shown on the accompanying map. However, for the motorist who wants a full day of Hoosier touring there's a picturesque gravel road to Delphi, just a few miles from the battleground, and then a good highway, Ind. 25, to Rochester, and U. S. 31 to Plymouth, that adds about 70 miles of attractive driving through rich farming country to the trip.

At Argus, on U. S. 31, the motorist can turn west on Ind. 10, a fast gravel road, and pass the Culver Military academy on Lake Maxinkuckee, see the state fish hatchery at Bass Lake, and get a view of the state game preserve on the Kankakee river without adding many miles to the trip, although adding an hour or so of time.

INTO INDIANA



This map shows several routes to Lafayette, Ind., where scenic beauties, rich in historic background, can be easily reached by the Chicago auto tourist. Because of the good roads Lafayette is only 3 hours from Chicago.

NEWS AND VIEWS

The judges who will distribute the $5,000 awards in the letter contest on Diamond advertising have just been announced by the Mid - Continent Petroleum corporation. They are L. N. Flint, head of the department of journalism, University of Kansas; Lou E. Holland, Kansas City, Mo., past president of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World; R. A. Justus, advertising director of the Tulsa World. The contest was started to determine whether the public has a preference for a humorous or a serious style of advertisement.

A merger of the Autodraulic corporation of Chicago with the Krone-Sebek Die Casting and Manufacturing company, 2935 West 47th street, has been announced. The Krone-Sebek facilities, according to Paul E. Krone, president, will be employed to start quantity production of an hydraulic jack which jacks up the front or rear wheels of a car by the turn of a key on the instrument board, without requiring the driver to leave his seat.

One of the largest contracts for automotive transportation placed by the government since the war has been awarded the Hudson Motor Car company which has received an order for 1,000 Essex Super Six units. The cars are to be used by the postal departments on mail delivery work in twenty-five cities for light and heavy duty and long and short hauls.

Word was received here yesterday that a new model six cylinder car of 70 horse power will shortly be introduced by a leading automobile company now manufacturing sixes and eights. It will sell at the lowest price ever placed on a product of this manufacturer, whose identity is being withheld. The new car is to be named the Prosperity Six.

VOICE OF THE TRAFFIC

DANGER, SLOW DOWN.

Chicago, April 22.—In your editorial, "Speed on Highways," April 7, you state with truth that "dangers of the unforseen generally will be relative to speed." The less the speed the better emergencies can be met by intelligent, attentive drivers. Pedestrians do sometims step squarely in front of slowly moving automobiles, when disastrous results may follow, but speed in excess of what is reasonable for a given situation is a factor in nearly all collisions. Some other factor, such as momentary inattention, being a stranger to the road or street, failure to observe road rules and signs, or faulty mechanism is also involved. The easiest factor to control is speed. Only an ounce or two less of pressure on the throttle is required for such control.

If a large newspaper like THE TRIBUNE would begin an active propaganda against high speeds the streets and highways would become much safer.

The tendency of late in almost all sources of public opinion has been to find excuses for unrestrained speed. Proof of the folly of such speed should be shown in the loop, where speed is slow and, though the congestion is great, there are few bad accidents.

Of course, where nearly every one is tearing about the streets as though he were on a bet to shake his machine to pieces, the slow driver gets in the way of his neighbors. But why all the hurry, anyway, with saving of a minute to the mile, but with wear on the car, damage to the nerves of every one concerned, and danger of a broken neck or fractured skull? C. C. CHURCH.

HOTELS FOR TOURISTS' DOGS.

Watertown, Wis., April 20.—I note in this morning's TRIBUNE an article speaking of the necessity of keeping a steady stream of automobile traffic through the city this season.

One thing that I know is keeping many thousands of automobile tourists out of the large western cities was impressed upon me in Chicago last year, when driving up from Miami, Fla. My wife and I had our dog with us, and it was a decided task, taking the greater part of an afternoon, to find a hotel that would allow us to bring our dog with us.

In the east it is becoming a matter of course for auto tourists to take their dogs (any size) into the hotel with them without question. We are in and out of Chicago very often and have been fortunate in finding one of the smaller hotels on the north side that not only allows us to bring our dog but welcomes him, as he has become a great pet of all.

Some enterprising hotel manager in Chicago is going to reap a harvest by letting the traveling public know that dogs will be taken in preference to many so-called humans. Why don't more hotels provide separate accommodations for pets? J. B. SWIFT.

TO HIT-RUN DRIVER.

Chicago, April 22.—I wonder if it would be of interest to the hit and run driver who ran down an aged woman and a little girl at Leavitt and Augusta streets Monday evening, April 6, to know that this woman died of injuries caused by him. His conscience should bother him enough to have all the pains of hell until he reaches there at his end.

REPORTS INDIANA TRAP.

Chicago, April 21.—Chicago motorists beware of auto trap (formerly known as speed traps, now known at reckless driving traps, since Indiana has no speed law), on Dunes highway near Tremont, east of Gary, Ind. Unsuspecting motorists are pounced upon by policemen either in car or motorcycle and haled into an impromptu court before a J. P. and a fine hastily extracted for reckless driving. J. P. VICTOR.

JONES, DIEGEL TO PLAY DUTRA BROTHERS TODAY

Los Angeles, Cal., April 25.—(AP)—Bobby Jones, teamed with Leo Diegel, Agua Caliente professional, will meet the Dutra brothers, Mortie of Long Beach, Cal., and Olin of Santa Monica, Cal., in an 18 hole match here tomorrow.

Olin Dutra was substituted for George Von Elm of Los Angeles today when the latter dislocated his left thumb in practice and announced he would not be able to play.

It will be Jones' second public appearance since he came to California to work in the movies. In the previous match the Atlanta, Ga., lawyer and Diegel lost to Mortie Dutra and Von Elm 2 down over the Agua Caliente course.

One other match is listed on Bobby's schedule. He will appear in a team match with Diegel at San Francisco May 3. The matches are being staged for charity.

The Adventures of Three American Boy Scouts in the Wilds of Brazil

The Pan American museum of Chicago sends Grant Dailey, its experienced explorer and ornithologist, and three Boy Scouts to Brazil on a scientific bird collecting expedition. The three Scouts, Skibo Jackson, Red Harper and Dana Jackson, go with Dailey into the little known Mountains of the Moon country east of the Rio Branco, a region inhabited by the dangerous Macashe Indians.

The museum party makes a permanent camp on the Rio Garapato, not far from an Indian village, the chief of which warns them to stay away from the Mountains of the Moon where Canemei, the evil spirit, is supposed to live. The penalty for going to the mountains is death.

Dailey and the boys go on a jaguar hunt and Skibo, who gets a shot at one of these big cats, is charged by the animal. Now continue the story.

CHAPTER VII. DANA DISAPPEARS.

RED and Dana, some distance away, saw Skibo topple over backwards almost in the path of the leaping jaguar. They were terribly frightened. For a few seconds they could not move. The possibility that Skibo was about to be mauled by this infuriated beast paralyzed them.

Pedro cupped his hands and uttered a frantic cry of warning. The hoarse calls of the Indians rose above the noise and confusion and their voices galvanized the boys into action. The started toward Skibo on the run.

In the meantime the dogs—that had been so startled when the big cat leaped from the branch—started after the fleeing animal with fierce yelps. The jaguar didn't pause in his onward rush through that armed circle. He flashed past the prostrate Skibo and in a few bounds was out of sight in the forest. The dogs were not far behind him.

By the time Dana and Red reached Skibo, Dailey was bending over him and lifting him by the shoulders. He looked anxiously at Skibo's pale, terrorstricken face. "You're all right, aren't you? Skibo! You didn't hurt yourself?"

Skibo sat up and pushed back his hair. He blinked at Dailey and at the boys, and smiled rather a wan smile. Then he reached over and picked up the .256 rifle which he had dropped.

"I'm all right, Mr. Dailey," he said in an unnatural voice. "Where did the—the jaguar go?"

Grant Dailey smiled down at Skibo's courage. Thumping him between the shoulder blades, he said: "You've been initiated now. You are a member of the big game hunting fraternity, Skibo. Sure you didn't turn your ankle when you fell?"

Skibo felt his ankle. He wiggled it and then gingerly stood up. While he was testing it by putting his weight on it Dana put an arm around Skibo's shoulder.

"Gosh! I thought that jaguar was coming right for you, Skibo," Dana said, breathlessly. "There we were, over there—like two ninnies—too scared to do anything."

"I was going to shoot—but—I was going to shoot—when——" Red was so excited that he wasn't coherent. "But I—I couldn't even move."

Skibo stood up, pulled at his belt, straightened his game bag over his shoulder, and picked up his hat. In an anxious voice he asked:

"Mr. Dailey—do you think we will ever get another shot at that jaguar?"

"Listen!" Dailey held up his hand for silence. "Hear that?"

From the depths of the forest came the noise of the dogs in pursuit of the big cat. Even as they listened the Indians spoke to Pedro. There had been a noticeable change in the barking and yelping. Pedro said:

"The jaguar, she has climbed the tree again! The Indians say we should hurry, queek!"

Dailey turned to Skibo with a quizzical smile. "Well, do you still want to have another mix with this jaguar? He's been treed. It's still your shot—but you can take it or leave it."

Skibo set his jaw. "I'll take it, Mr. Dailey. And I won't fall down again. Come on."

"Pedro," Dailey ordered, "go down near the river bank and light the dead leaves on three or four of those palm trees. They should blaze up so that they can be seen for a long way."

He would have started out ahead, but Dailey told him to wait and let the Indians go first. Somewhat, reluctantly Skibo stood still, gripping his rifle, until the savage hunters with their long bows had gone on for several feet. Then, with Dailey beside him he started through the forest. Red and Dana and Pedro followed behind.

The jaguar had been so hurried by the dogs that he hadn't been able to go far. They pressed him so closely that less than a quarter of a mile away the boys found him crouched on another low hanging branch, snarling and showing his teeth to the mongrel dogs.

The forest here was a little more open than it had been back where they first treed the big cat. There was very little underbrush, so that it was much easier to get a shot. Dailey told him:

"All right, Skibo. Step up and do your stuff, but take your time."

Skibo, holding his rifle at ready, moved slowly ahead and a little to the left, so he could get a clear shot for the shoulder of the jaguar. When he got into position he braced his feet and raised his gun. With a coolness that surprised Dailey, after this recent experience, Skibo waited a tense second or two, took careful aim, and then the heated forest was shattered by the explosion of the .256. He immediately pumped a fresh shell into the chamber and made ready to shoot again.

It was unnecessary. The long, powerful cat slipped sideways as the heavy bullet found its mark. For a long moment it tried frantically to cling to the branch. Then, still snarling frightful, throaty growls of defiance, its claws pawing and slashing at the branches, it dropped.

Skibo's gun was leveled and ready for a final shot. But as the big cat thudded heavily to the forest floor Dailey shouted:

"Don't shoot any more. You got him."

A moment after the jaguar had fallen to the ground the dogs rushed in to worry their ancient enemy. The Indians encouraged the dogs to do this, because they wanted them to share in this victory and to know that after trailing the onca there was always this triumphant finish.

As soon as the jaguar was stretched out on the ground Red and Dana threw their sun helmets into the air and shouted: "'Ray for Skibo!" and then they rushed up to him and whacked his back.

"Good boy," Dailey said, shaking his hand. "I knew you'd do it. That was nicely done. You showed the real stuff that time."

But Skibo could not stand still to receive any congratulations. He danced across the space between him and the jaguar, eager to see this magnificent trophy. The dogs were tired of nipping and barking at their fallen enemy and now were panting heavily. Skibo knelt down to get a good look. He touched the beautiful spotted cat rather hesitantly and hastily withdrew his hand. Grinning sheepishly, he then reached over, took hold of one paw and gave it a playful pull.

As Dailey and the boys came up, Skibo grasped the jaguar's head by the ears and was crowing with triumph. Dailey was immensely pleased and not a little amused by this jungle comedy, but he did not forget his work. He pulled a steel tape measure from his pocket and measured the length of the jaguar from head to the tip of its tail and from the head to the base of the tail.

"This is a fine male," he said as he jotted down the figures in his notebook. "It's well over six feet and the skin is in excellent condition."

Putting his notebook away, he said, "Now, we must get to work and skin this fellow before we go back to camp. It's midday and so hot that we had better take the pelt of this animal as quickly as possible. Pedro!"

The half breed looked up. "Si, Doutor."

"Take your machete and clean out the brush. Make a place where we can work. And tell the Indian boys that they are great hunters. Tell them that tonight we will make them presents for finding the onca."

Taking a small whetstone and two skinning knives from his game bag, Dailey started to work on the the skin of the jaguar. The boys discarded sun helmets and game bags, took out their knives and rolled up their sleeves to help him. Red's part in the work was to hold the animal steady and turn it when Dana and Dailey progressed with the skinning.

The boys discarded sun helmets and game bags, took out their knives, and rolled up their sleeves to help him.

It was Skibo's part to sharpen the spare skinning knives. As soon as one of the knives in use became slightly dulled it was tossed to him. He would hone it on the small stone and then hand back a knife with a keen edge.

As Dailey worked along he said: "It's a great help to have so many hands. I've had to do this job alone out in the bush, and between sharpening the knives and fighting the ants and the bugs, it can be a tedious job."

In a short time the pelt of the jaguar had been removed.

"Now," Dailey said, wiping his wet face, "we've got another job. Animal skulls are just as valuable as the pelts in identifying and studying a species, so we must take the head of this fellow. We won't need to clean the head here—we can do that in camp. Now, I'll do this job myself."

The boys formed a semicircle and watched Grant Dailey's practiced hands remove the head of the big cat. When this was finished, they rolled the skin as Pedro said:

"O, Doutor! The Indians—they ask if—the Doutor is not use the meat, eh? They like to take eet."

"O, yes!" Dailey nodded his head. "They can have all of it except one piece. I want the boys to eat jaguar steak tonight."

Soon a strange procession was winding through the forest. Skibo had insisted on carrying the game bag with the skin. He trudged along behind the Indians who were bearing fresh red meat in one hand. They had wrapped it in palm leaves. Bringing up the rear came Red, singing lustily: "O, a hunting we will go-o-o . . . a hunting we will go-o-o . . . high-ho-o-o . . ."

Dailey noticed that Skibo had let one of the jaguar's paw's stick out from the game bag and that he looked at it from time to time as he stumbled along through the brush.

It was a hot, tired and very hungry party that arrived in the permanent camp that afternoon to be greeted by the delighted cries of their Indian paddlers. The delayed lunch which Pedro prepared was an occasion. After a hurried and festive meal Dailey said that there would be no rest that afternoon until the jaguar skin had been fleshed and salted.

"Inasmuch as there is so much fat on the skin," he said, "it's necessary to go over it with sharp skinning knives to remove the fat so that the salt can work into the skin and preserve it."

They all sat down in the shade and cut away at the skin for more than two hours. It was a dirty, greasy job in which there was no play. On the contrary, it was plain, hard work. Ticks crawled up their bare arms and bored their heads into the skin. Little rivulets of sweat poured down their necks. They were almost sickened by the rank animal smell and the grease and everybody was glad when, at five o'clock, the jaguar skin was rolled up in salt and put away for the night.

"We'll let him soak all night in the brine," Dailey said, standing up and stretching. "Then tomorrow we'll hang it in the shade to dry. Now, let's take a swim and get cleaned up."

When they got out of the water he called them around him. "Come here. I want to look you over. These ticks, you know, crawl all over your bodies and dig in where you least expect them. Before you put on your shirts let's have a tick inspection."

With a pair of small tweezers he went over their backs, arms and chests and found that some of these nasty little forest insects had burrowed into their flesh. Each one was sure to leave an irritating sore on their bodies. After pulling out a tick, he washed the spot with pure alcohol. When he had finished, he told the boys to dress.

That night he opened up a tin of orange marmalade that he had been saving for such an occasion. Pedro made a mess of hot biscuits and baked them in a frying pan. He propped up the pan before the fire and turned the big biscuits from time to time until they were well browned. Then he fried several steaks from the jaguar. Although the meat was too fresh to be very tender, the boys ate the rich dark meat with great delight, while Pedro told them at great length how onca meat made hunters brave and crafty!

"From now on," Dailey said, after dinner, "birds will be our main work. This has given you a taste of big game shooting—but for some time now we must hunt birds. There will be plenty of shooting. I want to see the chests filled with specimens. We'll take a hand at preparing them."

In the days that followed the jaguar hunt, the constant popping of guns could be heard in the vicinity of the Rio Garapato. The program called for hunting every morning from breakfast until around ten-thirty or eleven o'clock. Then Dailey and the boys would come in, have lunch, and sit down at their work tables to prepare the skins of the new specimens.

These daily hunts took them far back from the river to the islands of forests and the igarapes where the hot winds of the savannah country rustled through the beautiful groves of palm trees. And their hunting also on the long hikes along the Garapato where birds were unusually abundant.

The little trunks in which the specimens were kept filled rapidly. Into them went complete series of wood hewers—because eight or ten specimens of each species were required by the museum; ant thrushes, two or three kinds of fly catchers, including the long scissor tailed variety which has tail feathers eight inches long; small, gaily colored cotingas; strikingly beautiful trogons about ten inches long which looked like glittering segments of a rainbow; magnificent scarlet macaws; humming birds by the score; jabiru storks, eight of them for a group, including young birds; tinamous, those shy, almost flightless birds of the forest which look something like a partridge; toucans, parrots, motmots, and exquisite sun bitterns with big fanlike tails. In addition the boys had killed some mammals. There were a few squirrels which in some respects resembled our North American gray squirrel; several opossums and three specimens of the paca, a shy, water loving, tailless animal about as big as a beaver. It proved to be delicious to eat.

After six weeks of successful bird collecting, Dailey was forced to decide that Pedro must take one canoe and four Indian paddlers in order to carry two chests full of specimens to Boa Vista. In view of this trip he was glad that he had kept the paddlers with him instead of sending them back to Boa Vista.

After delivering the specimens to the jefe politico in Boa Vista Pedro was ordered to buy some supplies. The Indians loved to come over and drink coffee so a new supply was necessary. They constantly begged for a little salt, which was very scarce in that part of the upper Rio Garapato. Dailey was liberal with it, so the camp supply was low.

During Pedro's absence, the boys took turns with the cooking. It was hot work, but with Dailey's help they did not mind it. Their camp menus were varied with occasional bananas and plantains which old Chief Tiranamandu sent as presents.

Grant Dailey repaid this courtesy by giving him salt, tobacco and fish hooks. The Macashe Indians were especially pleased to receive the steel fish hooks. The only hooks they had were crude ones made of bone.

When Pedro came back he proudly announced that he had something "veree nice for the leetle doutors. Pedro, he buy it in Boa Vista."

He reached in one of the sacks and brought out a tin of chocolate for each of the boys and a can of sweet pickles for Dailey. He failed to mention that Dailey had given him the money for these presents! The boys were glad to have Pedro and his never failing smile back in camp—and glad, too, that there would be no more dishes for them to wash.

With this release from camp duties they began to clamor to do some trapping on their own. At first Dailey put them off with the excuse that he wanted them to keep shooting. He was anxious to complete the bird collection before it came time for them to leave.

They kept after him for several days. "Well," he said, "I'll tell you what we will do. If you will take one of the Macashe boys with you as a sort of guide I'll let you fellows run your own trap line. We're getting far enough ahead on our bird collecting so that I can keep busy without your assistance."

"Aw, gee, Mr. Dailey," Skibo said, showing his disappointment. "It's no fun going out with those Indians. They can't talk to us. And they want to shoot everything with their bows and arrows. They can see the game before we can—and pow! There goes an arrow. We don't get any shots."

Red shook his head. "The other day one of them told me through Pete that the rifle was no good. He said it makes so much noise that it scares all the birds and game away."

"So far you've done very well," Dailey replied. "I'm afraid that you might get too interested in your shooting and trapping—and not get back to camp. I want you to get all the thrills and experience you can down here. But I'm a little worried about letting you go out in the jungle alone."

On the agreement they wouldn't go too far away, he finally let them lay their own trap lines. He gave each one of them ten wire rat traps so constructed that a horseshoe shaped band of wire snapped down on an animal and killed it instantly when the trigger of the trap was sprung. The boys also were given six steel spring traps for larger animals.

Dailey insisted on two things in their trapping work. First, they should visit every set morning and night so that no animal could remain in a trap for any length of time, and they must be equipped for any emergency. He gave each of the boys a can of emergency rations. In this can were three cakes of highly concentrated food which could be eaten without cooking. Each cake represented a meal and tasted somewhat like a bar of chocolate. They also carried plenty of shotgun shells, their machetes, matches, compasses and pocket knives.

Dailey accompanied them on their first trip to place their traps, as he wanted them to know how to set them without hurting their fingers. He showed them how to anchor each trap with a piece of wire so that an animal could not drag it away. Then he demonstrated the importance of blazing a trail through the timber and setting traps near it. A single blaze on a tree meant the trapping trail. A double blaze was the marker which indicated that a set had been made near it.

He also pointed out the likelihood of finding arboreal rats and other small animals of the forest around old logs, hollow trees and other similar cover. "You may get some 'possums," he said. "And cutia—which look something like a large rabbit. Or possibly, with the big traps, a spotted tiger cat."

"Say, Mr. Dailey," Red asked one morning after two unsuccessful trips over his trap line, "I saw you putting some cotton on a tree. Is that a good way to mark a trap?"

"Where it's so green and dark," Dailey replied, "the white cotton stands out like a lighthouse and tells you where your trap is placed. You wrap the cotton around the end of a twig about four feet from the ground and close to your set. Take some along the next time you go out. A double blaze on a tree is all right, but a cotton marker will enable you to find your sets much easier."

"What are the best baits to use?" Dana asked. "I've been using mandioca meal, but it doesn't seem to produce much."

Dailey laughed. "Well," he said good humoredly, "you were so anxious to start this thing that I thought I'd let you work out your own baits."

Skibo swelled his chest. "You city boys!" he said contemptuously. "You saw that opossum yesterday? That was caught, thanks to my brains and old Chief Piranamandu."

"What did you use?" Red asked. "I haven't caught a thing."

"Wait just a minute," Dailey interposed, "Now I'll tell you. For trapping small mice and rats down here it is hard to beat ordinary old rolled oats, the kind we use to make oatmeal. I'll give you some. I have a couple of small sacks of oats in the outfit. You simply set your trap and dust a small handful of oats around the trigger. Spiny rats, cotton rats, mouse opossums and similar small animals will go for this bait."

"I use bananas," Skibo couldn't resist saying. "That's what——"

"When you don't have rolled oats use pieces of bananas. They're fairly good."

"That's for the little rat traps," Dana said. "What about the big ones?"

"To bait the steel traps," Dailey said, "I don't believe there is anything better than meat. When you go out in the evening to set your traps, divide up all the bird bodies on my work table. After carefully setting your trap—and hiding it—under a thin dusting of dirt and leaves just drop one or two of the bodies around it."

The boys were eager to go out that afternoon and bait their traps. Before four o'clock they had loaded their game bags with meat and oatmeal and started out with their guns and machetes. Dana left camp much earlier than Skibo and Red. It was around three o'clock when he hurried into the woods with the remark that he was going to move his traps further away. He was very mysterious about the location of his line.

During the next two days the boys began to bring in several interesting animals every time they returned to camp.

"I wish you would keep your eyes open for tiny animal trails," Dailey said one evening when they were sitting around the fire. "There are little trails through the bush that are not more than three inches wide made by jungle rats. And don't overlook setting a trap on any regular game trail. The small animals use the big trails, too."

"'Possums don't have trails, do they?" Skibo had been the best 'possum catcher with three excellent specimens. "I can catch them any old place."

"You can make a blind set for a possum," Dailey said. "They forage through the woods and don't follow any set trails. They'll find your bait."

Skibo, holding his rifle ready, moved slowly ahead and a little to the left, so he could get a clear shot at the shoulder of the jaguar.

That night, when the drums were beginning to send out their low toned notes across the savannah, Dailey told the boys how much of the small rat life of the forest centered around the trees. "Because there are many species of forest rats in Brazil," he said, "which are tree climbers. You're all too sleepy tonight, but some evening I'll tell you of a time when I was in the upper headwaters of the Amazon—during the rainy season—when many of the rats of the forest were driven to high ground in the village."

"Tell us tonight," Red urged. "We're not sleepy."

Dailey leaned back in his camp chair and looked up at the familiar southern cross that sparkled conspicuously among the brilliant stars of that tropic sky. "Tomorrow night," he promised. "You may not be tired—but I am."

The next day Dailey was out early shooting and he had better luck than usual. He spent the entire afternoon under the big tarpaulin preparing the specimens and didn't notice when the boys left for their trap lines.

At five o'clock he had finished. The permanent camp on the bank of the river was deserted except for the Indian paddlers who were squatting on their heels in front of their palm thatch hut, and Pedro beginning to stir around and get the fire going for cooking.

Dailey took a dip in the river and came back, rubbing himself with a towel, feeling much refreshed. He stopped to talk to the halfbreed and then went into his own tent and dressed.

The cool trade wind was beginning to steam down from the round domed Sierra de Lua, the Mountains of the Moon, and as it chased the heat of the day before it, Dailey thought how much he enjoyed having the three boys with him.

At first, when the museum directors had talked to him about taking three Boy Scouts into the interior of the South American jungle, he had hesitated. He had always gone alone on his expeditions up until then; or with one experienced white man. But now, as he lounged on his cot, awaiting the return of the boys, he realized how lonely he had been.

Grant Dailey was looking forward to the returning boys with their young enthusiasm. It was always a great time when they came in in the evening. There was endless material for stories of how many traps had been sprung, of how one or two had been dragged away by animals, and what extraordinary specimens they had just missed catching. Presently, he heard Red's excited shout from somewhere near the camp:

"Whooo-hooo! Mr. Dailey. Look what I got!"

Red came up from the river with a fox under his arm. He was hot and almost incoherent at his catch. It was similar to our red fox in North America and the biggest animal that had been trapped so far.

"Gosh! he's a heavy old one," Red said. "Just lift him, Mr. Dailey."

"Well, Red. Good for you," Dailey said, examining the fox. "I'm glad to have this fellow. He's a nice addition to the collection."

While Red was admiring this trophy, Skibo entered the clearing. His game bag looked heavy and he dumped it in front of Dailey with a flourish. Wiping his face with a handkerchief, he said:

"Enter old Skibo," and very proudly he said, "I've got something—got him in one of the big steel traps."

"What is it?"

"I don't know, Mr. Dailey. I guess it must be one of those cooties you were talking about."

"You mean coati," Dailey said with a chuckle as he pulled out a handsome young Brazilian raccoon. "That's a beauty, Skibo. Red got a fox tonight and Dana——" He stopped and looked thoughtfully at the sun. It was within thirty minutes of setting. "By the way, where is Dana?"

"I haven't seen him," Skibo said. "Have you, Red?"

"No, I didn't see him at all. All I know is that he left camp awfully early. Around two o'clock or so. He went out a long time before we did."

Dailey shook his head. "I wish he wouldn't stay out so late. I'd better speak to him about that. He's a good woodsman, but he ought to do his trapping closer to camp."

"O, he'll be along," Red said confidently. "I'm going to take a swim."

As the minutes slipped by, the sun drew closer to the horizon. Dailey became very nervous about Dana. He questioned the boys when they came up from the river. They could tell him nothing. Apparently Dana's trap lines were some distance from theirs.

"I didn't tell you this," Dailey said. "But those four rats he brought in yesterday were puzzlers. I have always found them in rocky country—on ledges—and places like that. I can't for the life of me guess where he caught them along the Garapato." Suddenly he banged a clenched fist into his left palm. "You don't think Dana is crossing the river?"

The anxiety behind his words startled the two boys. They looked at each other in perplexity. Just then the flaming sun went swiftly down behind the distant horizon. With the disappearance of the sun an ominous feeling of impending disaster enveloped the little camp.

Dailey began to walk restlessly up and down in front of the fire. He stopped, every now and then, to listen. "Red," he said, after ten minutes. "Get my repeating rifle. I'm going to fire some shots."

He fired every five minutes for the next hour. There was no answer.

"Pedro," he ordered crisply. "Go down near the river bank and light the dead leaves on three or four of those palm trees. They should blaze up so they can be seen for a long ways."

"Si! Si!" Pedro's smile was gone. "You think maybee the leetle Doutor is lost, eh?"

PREDICT HIGHER VALUES FROM FASTER TRAINS

Realtors Say Towns Are Brought Nearer.

BY AL CHASE.
[Real Estate Editor.]

Nothing increases property values quicker than good transportation, accompanied, of course, by the other necessities of modern home life. For this reason the recent announcement by the Burlington railroad of new train schedules whereby from three to ten minutes have been cut from the running time to western suburbs has stirred much comment from realtors, who believe it will have a prompt beneficial effect on property.

"Some of the rush hour trains will now make the run to Hinsdale in twenty-five minutes, a distance of seventeen miles," said a Du Page county realtor. "By contrast, it takes the Chicago and North Western, which hasn't speeded up its suburban schedules for so many years every one has forgotten, twenty-nine minutes to go the same distance west to Villa Park with its fastest evening train. And, at that, Villa Park is the first stop west of Chicago for that train.

Has Four Tracks.

"The Burlington now has four tracks for its suburban service, whereas the North Western has only three and probably won't add the needed fourth for many years, if ever. This new speeding up of its suburban service by the Burlington, in effect, brings Hinsdale and other Du Page county towns four to five miles closer to the city. We expect realty values to increase all along the Burlington. That means more people and, of course, more passengers for the 'Q.'

"Incidentally, the opening of 55th street to Hinsdale and the new grade separation of Ogden avenue at La Grange, now well under way, will shorten the time of the man who drives."

What "L" Terminals Do.

In connection with the question of how transportation boosts property values Ernest J. Teberg, vice president of the Metropolitan District Realty trust, has compiled a checkup showing how property values increase in the general vicinity of elevated terminals, comparing present frontage worth with those existing before the opening of transportation in the areas affected.

"In 1899 property around Sheridan road and Irving Park boulevard was selling for $30 a front foot," said Mr. Teberg, "and the district was entirely unbuilt, as we understand the term 'built-up' today. At Wilson avenue and Broadway lots with all improvements were selling for $950, and there were no buildings to speak of. Much of the territory was pasture land, with plenty of scrub oak and sand patches everywhere.

"Elevated service to Wilson avenue began in 1900, and within two or three years buildings were everywhere, with a consequent rise in values. The $30 a foot property in the Sheridan road-Irving Park boulevard area kept on rising until it is now evaluated at $2,250 a front foot. Corner property at Broadway and Wilson was evaluated in the last edition of Olcott's "Blue Book of Values" as high as $5,000 a foot.

Selling for $20 a Foot.

"In 1908 property along Howard avenue between Sheridan and Clark was selling for $20 to $40 a front foot. The elevated was completed to that point in that year, and property began an increase which is not ended. Even under present bargain-counter valuations Olcott gives the worth as around $2,500 a foot for the best locations.

"In 1906 a lot at the southwest corner of Lawrence and Western avenues was sold for $23 a foot. The elevated line arrived in 1907. Today prices on the same property are $3,750 a foot.

"Even more startling is the rise of property near the terminus of the Englewood branch of the elevated, which was opened in 1906. Values at 63d and Halsted rose from $100 a foot to present worths of $7,500, $10,000 and $13,000 a foot.

Opened in 1925.

"More recently, the Niles Center elevated line was opened in 1925. Previously the land had been valued at a top price of $250 a foot in the vicinity of Dempster street station. Today prices of $400 and $500 are found, and the forecast is for a steady rise in values.

"In Westchester, which is the latest elevated terminal area, property was selling at acreage prices before the line was opened. Now, according to Olcott, frontage values of $200, $300 and $750 exist.

"As the foregoing shows, the extension of elevated lines has always been followed by an increase in land values, due of course to the fact that population growth follows transportation.

"It has been estimated that two-thirds of Chicago's population lives in zones extending a half mile or so on each side of the elevated lines, and from this it may be prophesied that areas into which the lines are extended cannot but experience a heavy growth in population, with consequent rise in realty values."

ADDITION TO WEST SIDE MEDICAL CENTER

Eric E. Hall is architect of the above seventeen story nurses' home, a new unit in the development of the Cook county hospital, told about last Sunday in this section. Ralph W. Hammett designed the exterior and made the sketch shown. George L. Ramsey, also of the Hall organization, is responsible for the floor layouts. The building is to be erected on the north side of Polk street, extending from Winchester to Lincoln street, on a site 242x177. This structure will have 828 living and sleeping rooms and will accommodate 800 nurses.

PLAN $150,000 BANK BUILDING FOR ROSELAND

The Roseland Standard Building and Loan association has purchased the southwest corner of 113th street and Michigan avenue, in the heart of the Roseland district, and will start work shortly on a $150,000 building project. It will be occupied by the owner and also by the Roseland National bank, with which it is affiliated.

The association was organized in 1910 as the Roseland Home Building association by Teninga Bros. & Co. In its twenty-one years of existence its assets have increased from $16,000 to $3,000,000. About six years ago the same interests organized the Roseland National bank.

The officers of the association include Theophilus Schmid, president, also head of the Roseland National bank; Henry Dekker Sr., vice president, a pioneer Roseland merchant; Cornelius Teninga, secretary-treasurer, who is president of Teninga Bros. & Co. and vice president of the Roseland National bank; George E. Q. Johnson, attorney, United States district attorney, who has been the attorney and a director of the association ever since it was organized twenty-one years ago.

The other directors include: David J. Harris, president of the Roseland State Savings bank; I. E. Berkson, Guy J. Bunting, vice president of the Illinois Central railroad; N. Harry Guilbert, director of the department of safety and compensation of the Pullman company, and others.

LARGE CANADIAN RISK FIRM LEASES 1 LA SALLE FLOOR

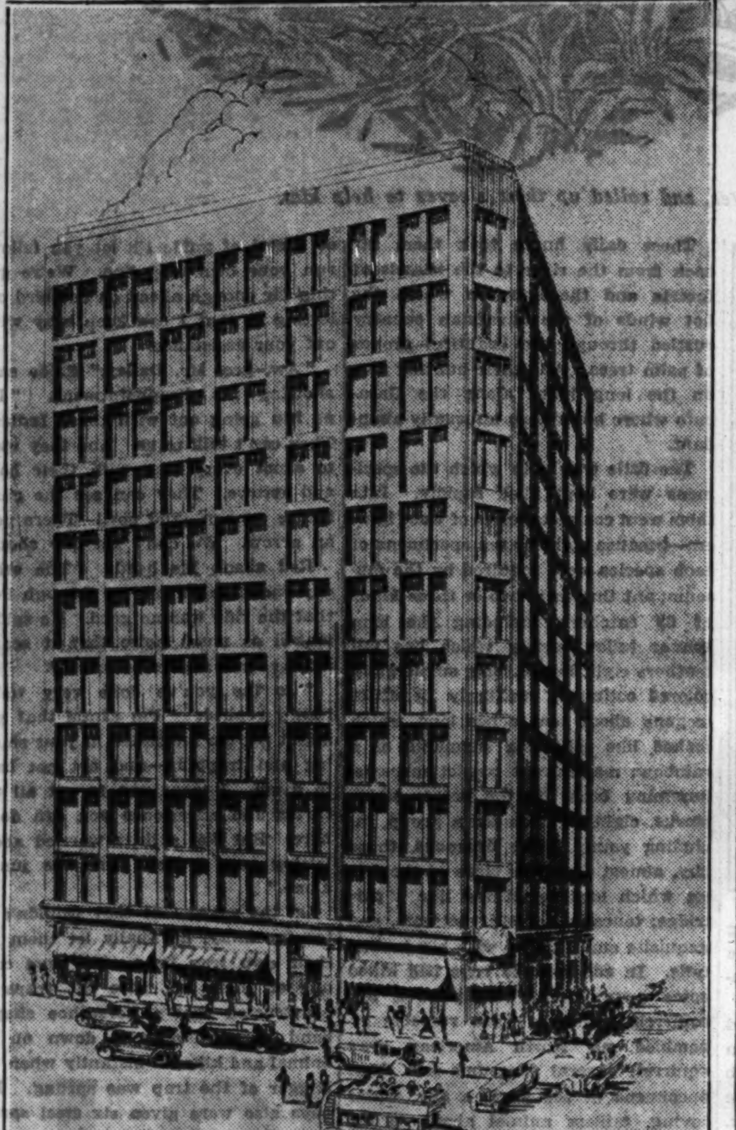
The Sun Life Assurance company of Canada, one of the oldest and also one of the largest life insurance concerns on the American continent, has leased the entire seventh floor of the One La Salle Street building. The space rented, comprising approximately 13,000 square feet, is more than twice the area it now occupies in the building at 112 West Adams street. It will be taken over on May 23 for a term of fifteen years. The rental was not disclosed.

Leasing of the new quarters, according to Douglas J. Scott, Chicago manager, was necessitated by the immediate demand for increased office facilities to handle the firm's rapid expansion. The annual business of the local branch, he said, has grown from $2,500,000 in 1926, when the agency was established, to $17,500,000 in 1930.

The Sun Life is the eighth largest insurance company on the continent in point of assets and tenth in the amount of insurance in force. In point of net increase in insurance in force for 1930 over 1929, it ranks third.

Associated with Mr. Scott in charge of the local agency are C. Walter Foltz, agency assistant, and Clarence P. Lea, branch secretary.

AT STATE AND JACKSON



This is how the Maurice L. Rothschild building at the southwest corner of State street and Jackson boulevard will look when three floors are added to the present structure, as told about in Friday's Tribune. As will be noted, the present old fashioned cornice will be removed and the architect, Alfred S. Alschuler, has given the roof lines a modern treatment with narrow setbacks. This architectural face lifting will give the structure, erected more than two decades ago, a youthful, 1931 appearance.

In case you didn't read the Friday story, we'll add that Mr. Rothschild has decided to use one entire new floor for the women's and misses' dresses and another entirely for women's and misses' coats. The use of the third floor has not yet been determined.

The additional three floors will give the firm 40,000 additional floor space. Many new employes will be added later on. This firm, by the way, has 125 more on its pay rolls this month than it did a year ago at this time. It has neither laid off nor cut the salaries of any of its employes.

FARM AND GARDEN BY PAUL POTTER

BADGER FARMER REALIZES PROFIT ON 14,000 LAMBS

Woolly Youngsters Eat 2,000 Tons of Feed.

Fourteen thousand lambs fed on and marketed from the farms of William F. Renk & Sons, Sun Prairie, Wis., have proved a contention that Mr. Renk, a state commissioner of agriculture, voiced in the fall of 1930 when these lambs arrived from the west. He said then that over a period of years it was a profitable business to feed sheep for market.

Now he announces, as a few hundred are still left for fattening and shipping, that the 14,000 animals will show an average profit of around 65 cents a head and that he intends to feed the same number beginning next fall.

These western lambs are the major "crop" of the three Renk farms that total 388 acres. Enough alfalfa hay is produced to furnish roughage for the stock, but feed purchases of grain the last few months have totaled 4,000,000 pounds, or 2,000 tons, the equivalent of a train of 40 carloads.

Flocks Started 33 Years Ago.

It was back in 1898 that the flocks were established, after two trips to England and Scotland by Mr. Renk in search of foundation stock. Shropshire and Hampshire sheep compose the flock of 350 pure bred sheep on the farms. The western lambs are purchased by the trainload from range owners in late summer and arrive on the farms about the first of October each fall.

Under the management of Walter, eldest son of Mr. Renk, the feeding plans sends a steady stream of marketable lambs to Chicago, beginning Nov. 15. In one week recently 2,000 of the finished animals were shipped from the farm.

Another son is Wilbur, a senior in the University of Wisconsin, and there is a younger brother and sister. Each has passed or is in the midst of an apprenticeship that takes the young showman into some of the keenest competition in the world, but which has permitted Renk pure bred stock to garner more than 10,000 prizes in recent years.

Takes Many Show Awards.

Among the awards are included the winnings of Chief, all-American Shropshire ram, undefeated in 1929 at the Illinois, Wisconsin, New Jersey, North Carolina, Virginia, and Eastern States state fairs. This same animal defeated the champion rams at the Chicago International, Pacific International, and the Kansas City Royal stock shows. Identical honors were bestowed by judges on Vain Chief, all-American Hampshire ram.

Aside from the business of feeding the western lambs, the pure bred sheep business has been an active and profitable one for the Renk family. Stud rams have been sold to many large flock owners, including colleges, throughout the United States. The college flocks using Renk animals are those of California, Ohio, Wisconsin, Purdue, Minnesota, Kentucky, and Tennessee, in addition to stock purchased by the United States government.

Salomie, a goatess, rules the pure bred stock and show flocks. She is an African fur goat, said to be the only one in the United States. As a mascot she has been trained as a performer and has even been called upon to lead some of the large live stock parades.

Use Silage to Make Mutton.

Other Badger farms also are prominent in the sheep breeding and the accompanying industry of feeding western lambs. One of the efficiencies of the Wisconsin farmer has been to obtain cheap feed and the necessary succulence in this feed from pea vine silage. The state produces and markets more than half of the field peas canned annually in the United States.

The discarded vines are piled in stacks at the vining stations where the pods and peas are stripped from the plants. A silage is produced that costs little or nothing to turn into lamb and mutton.

Recommendations by the Wisconsin college of agriculture regarding the feeding of sheep include the rule of dividing pasture lands so that the sheep can graze on a fresh field every year to lessen trouble with parasites.

Pure water, and not water supplied by a stagnant pool, is the best, and this rule is easily followed in sections of Wisconsin where natural springs dot pastures.

A supply of salt before the flock at all times is another detail that denotes the successful shepherd, according to an axiom still followed by Badger sheepmen. The axiom was a favorite of Frank Kleinheinz, now deceased, but who for more than 40 years aided Wisconshin sheep breeders through his work as shepherd of the University of Wisconsin flocks.

HOME BUILDING AND REMODELING

GEORGIAN HOME HAS STOOD TEST OF MANY YEARS

Here's One at Sauganash Ready to View.

BY LOUISE BARGELT.

LOUISE BARGELT.

When one builds a Georgian home, skillfully and authentically designed in the true spirit of its innately beautiful type, the home owner can be assured that he will own a house which he will not regret when it is too late to change. The Georgian dwelling has stood the test of many successive generations, been fined and refined, and represents in its dignity and poise, the collective experience of honest people and skilled craftsmen.

Building after a tried and dependable style eliminates the risk attendant on hazardous novelties which may look well on paper but which may not work out so satisfactorily in practice, is important.

Abundant opportunity there always is to work out attractive and original combinations within the secure confines of established patterns. An instance of this fact is seen today in the Georgian house designed by C. H. Lampe & Co., architects, 155 North Clark street, Chicago, a style of home which can be depended upon to stand up under all ordinary tests of esthetics and use.

Open for Inspection.

Standing at Forest Glen avenue and Peterson road, Chicago, opposite the Sauganash community house, it is now completed and ready for inspection on receipt of invitation cards from the builders, George F. Koester & Co.

The exterior walls are of round cornered paving brick with stone trim and Brittany tile roof. Black blinds, wrought iron grills at the front window and copper downspouts give color contrast to the dark red of the brick walls.

Through a wide wooden entrance with huge door and shining black knocker one enters the airy and spacious reception hall with access to the living room through a large wood trimmed arch. At the opposite end of the room is a large fireplace with characteristic carved wooden mantel and recessed bookcases on each side with concealed radiators beneath.

Paper of Georgian Design.

The windows here, of casement type, extend down to the floor. Walls of the reception hall and living room are papers in a representative Georgian design; light cream in color this paper harmonizes with the deep ivory woodwork with its slightly antiqued finish.

A pair of large panelled wooden doors with opaque antique glass inserts form the entrance into the dining room, while at the opposite side of the room French doors lead out to the porch. Above a painted dad is wallpaper of scenic design.

A butler's pantry or breakfast room adjoins the dining room with sufficient space for a small table and four chairs in front of the casement windows. Cases at the far end of the room provide storage space for table linen, silver, china, and crystal, with an opening to the clothes chute from this case.

A plaster arch leads into the kitchen and here one sees a workroom designed to appeal to the esthetic as well as the practical side of the household's feminine contingent.

Green, Yellow, and Cream.

In both breakfast room and kitchen the decorative scheme is light green, pale yellow, and cream. Light canary glazed tile forms a 5 foot wainscot with washable paper above in soft colors of green and yellow and cream.

The sink, hung below wide casement windows, has two compartments, one deep with popup waste for dish washing, thus eliminating the dish pan, and the other shallow for draining the dishes. This sink is the center unit of a cabinet with generous space for kitchenware of all kinds.

Above the cabinet on either side of the windows are cases reaching to the ceiling, while on the side wall the refrigerator is again the center of another set of cases with broom closet, combination vegetable bin, etc.

The lavatory is so placed as to be accessible from front and rear of the house and yet possess extreme privacy. Here again the decorative scheme is charming, with tile wainscot in warm gray and floor and plumbing fixtures black.

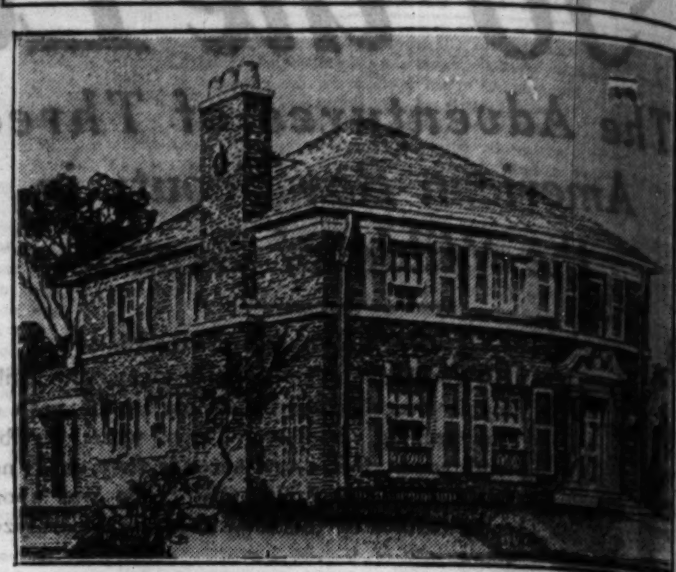
Three Bedrooms, Two Baths.

On the second floor are three bedrooms and two baths, with ample storage space provided by a large cedar closet, two ordinary closets, each with outside window, and wardrobes in the dressing room.

The master bedroom has a small dressing room and bath of its own, with a French door leading out to the deck of the porch. Peach and green is the color scheme used in this suite, while in the second bath fawn colored tile is used in the wainscot with harmonizing pattern in waterproof paper above it. The three bedrooms all have wall paper in the Georgian spirit.

Concealed radiation is used throughout the house with gas fired boiler. An air humidifying system is also installed.

DESIGNED BY CHICAGOAN



Here a Georgian home is seen, its exterior of dark red brick with stone trim, black blinds, wrought iron grilles and Brittany tile roof. Designed by Architects C. H. Lampe & Co., 155 N. Clark St., Chicago. House is now open and cards of admission may be obtained from Sauganash office of the builders, George F. Koester & Co., Chicago. Approximate cost of construction $15,000, but if some of the interior refinements are omitted, could be reduced to $13,600.

AGRICULTURAL QUESTIONS

DESTROYING STUMPS.

Can you give me any information about a chemical solution which destroys tree stumps? I heard about a solution which will destroy stumps in a few months. It is applied by boring a hole in the stump and pouring in the chemical. After the hole is sealed up it is supposed to burn the stump so it can be removed easily. I would appreciate help as I have just had some elm trees cut down and wish to put others in their places, by this spring if possible. B. V. A.

REPLY.

Retail and wholesale firms apparently cannot suggest the use of any such chemical. One simple practice that is used where sufficient time is available, perhaps several seasons, is to go out in the woods, scrape up some of the fungi including spores and dirt from a well rotted tree stump and place this in a hole bored or cut into the fresh stump. This hastens rotting but still requires several seasons. The other recommendation is to grub out the stumps with spade and ax, getting down far enough to cut off the main roots, and then take out the stump.

USING COAL ASHES.

My garden soil is heavy and black. For flower gardens and for vegetable growing the soil works better if sand is mixed with it. Would sifted coal ashes loosen the soil? E. H. S.

REPLY.

Sifted coal ashes will be satisfactory, providing they are leached with water before they are applied. The reason for this is that otherwise the sulphur remaining in the ashes would form undesirable acids in the soil.

TRIBUNE SPONSORS POWER BOAT RACES MAY 31

MOTOR BOAT SHOW IN PROGRESS AT NAVY PIER

100,000 TO SEE BIG, LITTLE AND SPEEDY CRAFT

Display Engines and Accessories Also.

The second annual Chicago Boat show, much bigger than last year, has attracted more than 100 manufacturers of cruisers, runabouts, outboard boats, engines, and accessories to the Motor Boat mart, scene of the exhibition on the upper deck of Navy pier. The show was formally opened Friday. It will continue through next Sunday.

Into the 80,000 square feet of floor space allotted to the exposition have been brought the wares of boat manufacturers throughout the United States. There are spacious cruisers for wealthier mariners, built for long ocean jaunts and deep sea fishing; there is the popular runabout type for the average family; and there is the slender outboard racer for those who demand speed and lots of it.

Expect 100,000 Visitors.

In addition to the boats themselves the 100,000 visitors expected to attend the exposition during its stay here will find every accessory imaginable for a boat, so many in fact that amateur builders might assemble enough material to construct a boat of their own. The boat owner who wishes to power his boat with a new force also will find engines of every type to suit his taste.

The boat whose sleekness and size has caught the eye of every one at the show is the new 46 foot custom commuter built for Philip K. Wrigley, launched recently. It is of solid mahogany and is trimmed in bright nickel with green upholstery. Its two engines produce a speed of 28 miles an hour. The Wrigley boat has a rival in a specimen displayed by the Burger Boat company, a sizeable double cabin cruiser.

Boats from Brooklyn.

From Brooklyn, N. Y., comes the Wheeler shipyards with three cruisers, 27, 33, and 40 feet in length. The Chris-Craft corporation shows a 22 foot commuter, in addition to a 36 foot single cabin craft and a 31 foot double cabin cruiser. Chris-Craft also is demonstrating a new type of boat, only 15½ feet long and with a 43 horsepower motor.

Dodge, the Matthews company, Gar Wood, Dee Wite, Hacker, Robinson Marine Construction company, Johnson Motors, Kainer, Century, and the Outboard Motors corporation are other important exhibitors at the motor boat show.

Milwaukeeans Hail Power Boat Regatta

BY CHARLES NEVADA.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Milwaukee, Wis., April 25.—Announcement that THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE will sponsor a Milwaukee to Chicago Lake Michigan race on May 30, was being hailed today as the season's best competitive news among outboard motor enthusiasts here. Especially gratifying was the reaction of Commodore J. A. Mahoney and Mrs. Helen H. Raab, officials of the Wisconsin Boating association. They lost little time in giving their personal indorsement and the sanction of the group they represent.

Both commended the race and termed the enterprise not only a boon to this type of sport, but also an impetus to the industry which, singularly enough, claims Milwaukee as the home of the world's largest maker of outboard motor engines.

Follows Races Everywhere.

Mr. Mahoney travels the country over to watch these races. Mrs. Raab, purely from the standpoint of an enthusiast, has been one of the sport's greatest boosters here over a period of fifteen years. She now is serving her second term as secretary and treasurer of the W. B. A.

Others connected with the game pointed out that the test will be watched by motor engineers throughout the nation. It will provide them with results and observations on which they may work to bring about further improvements in outboard engines.

The Outboard Motors corporation, reputed the world's largest maker of outboard motor engines and located here, was the first to offer an official entry. Representatives of the concern plan to enroll Ray Pregenzer, Fox Lake youth, who holds the record for the fastest time ever made in an outboard motor.

Record Holders Enter.

Fred Mikkelson and Roy Hanson, Milwaukee record holders, already have signified their intention of entering, according to Mrs. Raab. Mikkelson last fall won the national and eastern class E titles at Middleton, Conn. Hanson, using a class F motor, the largest made, captured the eastern championship for that division at Middleton also. Kirby Raab, a noted fancy diver and swimmer in these parts, will be another entry, as will Robert Guttman of Manitowoc, Wis., an aviator.

The winner of last year's Milwaukee to Chicago race, restricted to amateurs, was Clifford De Witt of Clinton, O. He has assured Wisconsin Boating association officials he will return to defend his laurels.

Other officials of the Wisconsin Boating association, which has indorsed the race, are: Vice Commodore Charles Steele, Rhinelander, Wis.; Recording Secretary William Cramer of Milwaukee and the following directors: George Boyer, George Boller, Chet Ruggles and E. A. Ettinger, all of Milwaukee, and Nate Boynton of Oshkosh.

VERY GOOD, HORACE!

Horace Tennes, 18 year old Loyola academy senior, and a few of his trophies. Tennes is the outboard driving champion of the central states.

Tennes Likes Outboards, and He's a Champ with 'Em

BY HERBERT VEDDER.

Strange as it may sound, this story concerns an 18 year old lad to whom a summer in the lake region of northern Wisconsin does not mean fishing, hunting, and loafing. These pastimes come in for attention only between outboard motor boat races in the life of Horace Tennes, 3400 Sheridan road.

And if any proof be needed that this Loyola academy senior has been putting his time to good use it may be mentioned in passing that he is the recognized outboard champion of the middle west by virtue of winning the McDonald trophy of the National Outboard association last year at Fox lake.

Won Miller Trophy.

Not only that, but young Tennes copped the Speed Miller trophy of the Northwest Speedboat association. This is emblematic of the championship of the northwest, including the Dakotas, Minnesota, Iowa, Illinois, and Wisconsin among other states. It is awarded on the basis of times made in races at Ashland, Wis., and at Minneapolis.

It was just about four years ago when the lad first became interested in outboard racing and his first victory was in a free for all held at Eagle River, Wis., in August, 1927. The following summer young Tennes picked up two cups with his "Hootnanny," but it was not until 1929 that he really got going. It was then that he started trekking about the countryside with Sunset Cyclone and the good old Hootnanny, and the result was 13 trophies, including the Barker, awarded for the best times in the various races at Minocqua, Wis.

Tennes added 21 more cups and plaques to his collection last summer, mainly with his "Palm Beach Baby," and is all set to start out on another campaign in another month or so.

Everything hasn't been rosy for this lithe, swarthy youth, however. He was leading the field in the Milwaukee-Chicago marathon last year when his boat broke in two on him. Another sad experience was at the national meet at Middletown, Conn., where a piston went bad and ruined his chances.

"Darn that piston," Horace complained.

But right now he is concerned most with a disappointment caused by the fact that one must go to school. It isn't that he does not like school—he intends to go to college next year—but the chance to go to the International Outboard races next month at Lake Garda, Italy, with expenses paid, is not to be laughed off easily.

"You see, dad thinks I ought to finish up with school at the academy," the boy said. "And then I have some work to make up on account of going down to Florida to race. No, we didn't do anything there," he added with his characteristic restraint about telling of his races. It happens, though, that he did win fourth in both the Col. Green trophy race at Miami and in the $25,000 Sir Thomas Lipton cup run at Palm Beach.

Outboards His Hobby.

Outboards are his principal hobby. While others are directing admiring and covetous gazes in the direction of runabouts and luxurious cabin jobs at the Motor Boat show, Horace Tennes is one fellow who won't be so interested. He will be looking over the latest in outboard craft.

He has two natural ambitions—to retain the McDonald trophy, thus being the first to win two years in a row the prize first set up in 1929, and to "get somewhere in the nationals," as he puts it.

Motor Boating Comes to Fore as Recreation

BY HOWARD RICHARDSON.
[President Wilson-Richardson Company.]

Motor boating is coming to the fore as one of America's most favored forms of recreation. Few, however realize that Chicago bids fair to become the hub of the boat world because of the unsurpassed facilities which will be available to the owners of pleasure craft in this district within the next decade.

HOWARD E. RICHARDSON.

While it is a fact that the marvelous improvements on our lake front are mainly responsible for Chicago's reputation as the coming pleasure boat center, it must be kept in mind that the city has a hinterland in which beautiful lakes and navigable streams abound as nowhere else in America.

Largest Show in the World.

All of which means that Chicagoland promises to become increasingly important as a market for the boat and motor industry. Where in the past it has proved impossible to stage a great showing of the products of the boat industry we now have the largest permanent exposition of boats and their accessories in the world.

Formerly, it was hard to handle pleasure craft in our harbors, because of a woeful lack of facilities. Now, almost any type of boat can be accommodated from the largest cruiser to the smallest outboard. And soon it will be possible for large yachts to cruise from Chicago to the Gulf of Mexico.

It is safe to say that the waters in and around the city will be as popular for water motoring within the near future as are our marvelous hard roads popular with motorists. Compare the future interest in motor boating with the rapid increase in bathing which took place after the city provided adequate beaches.

Owning Boat Now Easier.

Twenty years ago, the average Sunday attendance at our beaches was 10,000. Now it runs far in excess of 100,000. When the lake front improvements are completed on the north and south shores of the city and adequate facilities for boatmen are installed we are sure to find boating as popular on the lake as is bathing now.

Ownership of strictly pleasure craft such as are being exhibited at the Boat Show on the navy pier at present is much more simple than the ownership of an automobile, and the sooner that fact becomes generally known the more boats there will be in use. When we stop to consider that a man can now purchase a beautiful inboard runabout, capable of doing thirty miles an hour, for as small a sum as $750, or a complete outboard unit of motor and boat for from $250 to $500, and that these craft will last for years with but little depreciation, it is obvious that the ownership of a boat is no tax on a citizen's purse.

The upkeep of a boat and motor is slight. The purchaser of a boat has the satisfaction of knowing that he has no crowded highways to contend wtih and no dust and gasoline fumes to put him in bad temper. Further, the manufacture of boats has reached such a high degree of perfection that boating is safe and the possibility of accidents remote.

Fifty Miles an Hour.

The 1931 boating season in this section promises to be more successful than any season for years. Despite business depression, the boat and motor industry has developed products that are sure to create unusual attention and normal sales. Fifty miles an hour with an outboard motor is now a reality and fifty-five miles an hour should be reached this summer.

Light, cheap and safe models of both inboard and outboard boats are now on the market and, the searcher for recreation is certain to have his attention drawn to the water by the unusual attractions now being offered water motorists and their friends.

A New Chris-Craft FOR $795

Full-powered! Fast! Over-sized! Seaworthy! Sturdy! Dependable!

Now, for the first time, you can have Chris-Craft quality and Chris-Craft performance for $795!

Not in an outboard or an outboard conversion, but in a full-sized runabout, built to the standards that have given Chris-Craft world leadership and worldwide acceptance!

This new Chris-Craft is 15½ feet in length, and seats six comfortably. It has unusual freeboard and generous beam—looks and behaves like a much bigger boat.

It is faster than any runabout in its price class, with a speed of 30 miles plus—a nimble, "peppy" boat, amazingly easy to maneuver and control. A specially designed 43 h. p. marine motor with reverse gear gets it away like a rocket—gives you smooth speeds and flashing acceleration.

It has the famous Chris-Craft Philippine hardwood V-type hull and double planked bottom—lifting rings, automatic bilge bailer—automobile type cam and lever steering for easy control—full salt water equipment—and many other features found in the larger and costlier Chris-Craft.

Here is a real runabout—smart, capable, dependable, safe—at a sensational low price. It is presented for the first time at the Chicago Motor Boat Show, as part of the most distinguished fleet in Chris-Craft's 44 years of quality boat building.

There are 21 Standard and Custom runabouts, embodying many noteworthy improvements and refinements; sedans that combine cabin luxury with runabout performance; new family cruisers with a choice of several cabin arrangements and a range of prices from $3,975 upward; Custom cruisers and commuters priced at $10,500 and $15,000 respectively; and, completing this great fleet, the Custom yacht at $35,000, the finest of its kind afloat.

You are cordially invited to visit the Chris-Craft display at the Motor Boat Show and our permanent showrooms. Inspect these new boats; judge for yourself these values—which we sincerely believe have never been equalled in boating history.

OUTBOARD BOATS' GROWTH AMAZES EVEN INVENTOR

Evinrude Traces History of Small Motors.

BY OLE EVINRUDE,
[President Outboard Motors Corporation.]

The story of the outboard boat motor is one that increasingly large numbers of people ask me to tell them with each succeeding year. They tell me they are amazed at its progress and development. Sometimes I, too, am amazed, for when I think back to 1909 when I built and sold the first outboard boat motors, and then look at the motors we are building today—well, it sometimes doesn't seem possible.

OLE EVINRUDE.

My first outboard motor was a single cylinder, 1½ horse power row boat motor, somewhat ungainly in appearance, and rather clumsy and heavy, judged by this year's standards. I did not dream then that twenty-one years later we would be building motors developing 40 horse power, with four cylinders, capable of 50 or more miles per hour. I did not and could not predict that these motors would have electric starters, so that all you would need to do to start them was merely to flip a switch.

Reduce Weight 41 Pounds.

But perhaps I ought not jump so far, nor so fast. To begin with, I've mentioned my first motor. It weighed about 70 pounds and developed 1½ horse power. Today, one of the motors we are building weighs only 29 pounds and develops almost twice as much power.

From 1909 to 1920 all outboard motors had only a single cylinder. They served tens of thousands of American outdoorsmen faithfully and found their way into commercial fishing and other industrial uses, first in Norway and Sweden, and then gradually throughout the rest of the world.

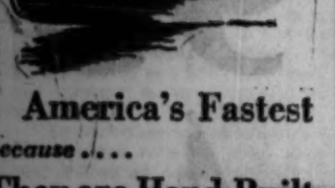
I think I can say that when I perfected the first twin cylinder outboard boat motor in 1921 it marked a turning point in the industry. The addition of another cylinder added very little weight, but increased the power materially. More than that, it made possible much higher engine speeds, power we originally wouldn't have believed possible.

The single lunger never did much over five miles an hour. The first twin cylinder almost doubled that in 1921 with a speed of over 9 miles an hour, and that was quite a sensation, and that's when outboard motor races, of which there are thousands every year now, really began.

Perfects Four Cylinder.

By 1928 I had perfected a four cylinder outboard motor. It was an innovation for only a very short time, since outboard racing had become a very popular sport, and this four cylinder motor developing over 25 horse power was the means of setting higher speeds. Race drivers and thousands of others who knew the thoroughly enjoyable thrill of driving a fast boat gobbled up all we could make and the speed record of over 41 miles per hour was set by a young man, Eldon Travis of Peoria.

Last year about 45 miles per hour was the record for two cylinder outboards, and 49 plus for the fours. This year I believe I can safely predict well over 50 miles, for the most powerful motor we now build develops over 40 horse power. That's motor car speed—with an outboard motor! And going 45 miles in a boat is worth a hundred in an automobile if you, like most people in this day and age, enjoy speed. Just try it some time.



America's Fastest

because . . . .

They are Hand-Built

It's quality that counts in a boat... Quality that has its source in experienced design—in judicious and careful selection of materials—in the finest of hand-built standards. John L. Hacker, N. A., has designed more fine speed boats than any other naval architect. He prides himself on building fewer boats annually—but building them better. Hackercraft are not turned out with the prodigality of machine production—they are hand-built. That is why Hackercraft are today recognized as the fastest boats for their size and power ever produced. Don't fail to investigate the thrilling advantages of a quality boat—a Hackercraft—from $2495.

HACKERCRAFT

BOUND FOR HOME OF THE BIG ONES

This 38 foot Matthews sport cruiser, owned by Joseph M. Cudahy of Chicago, is headed toward the waters off the Florida coast for a bit of deep sea fishing. Mr. Cudahy used the boat considerably for this purpose during the last season at his Palm Beach home. It is powered with a 180 horse power Sterling Petrel motor and an auxiliary engine for trolling purposes.

CENTRAL STATES MARKET DRAWS EAST'S BOAT MEN

Eastern shipbuilders are realizing more and more the worth of the central states boat market, according to Corwith Cramer, Chicago distributor for the Cape Cod Ship Building corporation, the Wheeler shipyard, and Hackercraft. The Cape Cod concern and the Wheeler shipyard are among the largest builders of standardized craft on the Atlantic coast. Both companies have several of their products on display at the boat show. These displays from the east, as well as the showing of two Hacker built runabouts, are under the supervision of Mr. Cramer.

The Wheeler shipyard, according to Mr. Cramer, has produced hundreds of cruisers and utility craft during the last few years. Two generations have gone into the development of their present stock boats.

The hulls are of the modified sea skiff design traditionally famous along the Atlantic seaboard. This design is particularly adaptable for rough weather use, where extreme seaworthiness is essential. This year Wheeler is offering more than 20 models, with a wide selection of recognized power plants.

The Cape Cod Ship Building corporation offers a wide selection of stock models which should be of especial interest to yachtsmen seeking a small yet practical and reasonably priced sailing craft. The 18 foot Knockabout, as well as the 15 foot Junior, are now on view at the Boat mart, where both are on permanent display.

The Jackson Park Yacht club, Mr. Cramer reports, has a class of the 18 foot Knockabouts and several members are contemplating the purchase of additions to the present fleet. Milwaukee Yacht club members several years ago adopted the "kitten" class 12 foot sailing skiff model.

Chris-Craft Head Urges Confidence Among Builders

BY JAY W. SMITH.
[President Chris-Craft Corporation.]

I see nothing about the present economic condition of the country to justify the deep, indigo dyed pessimism which has been hanging like a pall over us all. Similar conditions have been with us before, different, perhaps, in circumstances, but curiously alike in principle. No one can deny that a change for the better will come and that the return to normal business conditions is only a matter of time.

JAY W. SMITH.

Speaking for our own corporation, I can say that we have sincerely tried to roll up our sleeves and go back to work. Without sacrificing the quality of our materials or our workmanship we have offered a new runabout to the public at a much lower price.

Without reducing our old wage scale, but by reducing the cost of production and by counting on a satisfactory volume of sales, this price has been achieved.

The chief requisites, at the present time, for a return to normalcy are bigger dollar value in the product, unity of coöperative effort between management, capital, production, and sales, and confidence. We cannot afford to waste our time crying over a business depression that has already happened. Our present task is to go back to work with muscle and with brain to correct the things which brought about the present economic difficulties.

The country is richer today than it was ten years ago, five years ago, or even three years ago. Now and then comes a temporary setback, but always we have gone forward from such a period to even greater heights of prosperity. We have just come through the periods of recession and low prices and are now entering upon the period of improvement.

Illinois Driver Sets Mark to Win Greene Trophy

The high spot event in the annual Florida racing season is the Col. Greene trophy race in the Miami Beach regatta. Highest honors in this event this year go to 4-60—four cylinder marvel of racing motors. Long remembered will be the performance of Ray Pregenzer, 230 pound racing pilot of Antioch, Ill., for his outstanding drive to victory in 40.45 miles per hour, four miles better than any Greene trophy winner has ever run this course.

MOTOR BOATING WITHIN REACH OF FAMILY BUDGET

A summer of pleasure afloat is in store for the owners of an outboard or inboard motor boat. And motor boating is within the reach of the average family budget.

Think of a gleaming all mahogany craft speeding along Lake Michigan or through the clear waters of your favorite lake resort, away from the noise, dirt, and dangers of the city and highways. Out on the water is vitality, for there you have health giving sunshine, undimmed by factory soot and haze, and all within a few minutes of your home.

That motor boating of all types, from the smaller outboard to the larger cruisers, is going to the fore as one of America's favorite forms of recreation, especially here in the west, is obvious to all those who have followed boating for the last ten years.

There are all purpose boats in the outboard and inboard fields, such as runabouts, speed dinghys, fishing boats, all powered by your favorite motor. The manufacturers of such boats have expanded their lines to include beautifully designed and richly appointed inboard power boats, all to be had at such economical prices as from $135 to $750.

An armada of fifteen inboard and outboard motor boats, together with types of racers that have won scores of major honors, have been entered in the Motor Boat show on Navy pier by the Century Boat company. Century inboard and outboard boats were driven to 121 official major victories during 1930. And this year they have been first in the famous Col. Green trophy at Miami, and the Sir Thomas Lipton race, and the President of Ecuador trophy, both at West Palm Beach.

The Century Boat company also announces a series of radio programs illustrating how to use and what pleasure may be had from inboard and outboard boats.

A slogan contest has been inaugurated with the broadcast and three Century boats will be given away to the ones presenting the three winning slogans on Century boats.

YOUTHFUL SPEED DRIVERS' PRIZES TOTAL $25,000

The supremacy which youth of both sexes has achieved in outboard racing circles is shown in trophy collections worth $25,000 at the Navy Pier.

Dodge Sees 1931 Longest Boating Year

The motor boating season this year will begin earlier and last longer than any previous season, according to Horace E. Dodge, president of the Horace E. Dodge Boat and Plane corporation of New York and Newport News, Va.

HORACE E. DODGE.

"The motor boat show was used this year as a business barometer by the builders of boats and engines in a more critical manner than ever before and it proved conclusively the truth of recent statements that the American people have started 'the big parade' toward water recreation. Sales at the show were suprisingly large and we, as well as other builders of runabouts, are immediately going into full peak production to build up our stocks of boats of the spring selling season.

35 Boats a Day.

"Our Newport News plant will shortly be producing from 35 to 40 boats a day and we expect that the end of 1931 will see our production and sales considerably ahead of 1930.

"The motorboat runabout is growing in popularity, in both low and high priced types. It appeals particularly to those who want the thrill of speed and the relaxation of water recreation, but have not the time for extended cruising. Buyers at the show, in a majority of cases, ordered their Dodge boats for delivery around April 15 instead of June 1 as in former years.

"What the later months of the year will produce we have no means of knowing, but from all present indications 1931 will be one of the best years the motor boat industry ever experienced.

Increase Dodge Distributors.

"Whe have greatly expanded our distributing organization during the last month and now have more than 225 Dodge distributors and dealers in all parts of the world. We and other American boat builders are about to fill the harbors, lakes and rivers of the world with reliable, safe, well built boats at prices more moderate than was formerly considered possible. Mass production principles have entered the boating industry and the history of the world-wide expansion of automobiling is about to be repeated, on a naturally lesser scale, with high quality American boats."

DON'T fail to see the only boat of its size that sailed to the Pier through 100 miles of ice-blocked sea in a January blizzard.

CHICAGO TAKES PLACE AS PORT FOR MOTOR BOATS

Progress on Harbor Plans Speeds Up.

BY COL. C. M. PIPER,
[Vice President Johnson Motor Company.]

In the past Chicago has always made use of its convenient location to Lake Michigan as an ideal summer watering place, but it is safe to predict that the next few years will see a new development of its waterways for recreations.

COL. C. M. PIPER.
[Kaiden photo.]

Already there are indications of coming progress. Extensive plans for harbor facilities are charted in exhibits now at the Chicago motor boat show. Commissioners of the south park system of Chicago have voted to spend $40,000 in dredging and improving the harbor for outboard boats located at 59th street in Jackson park. The lakes to the gulf waterway will be completed within a year, it is predicted. The plans for the 1933 World's Fair include numerous facilities for small pleasure boats.

Crowded Highways Are Cause.

It is only natural that Chicago, with its waterway resources, should eventually develop its water motoring facilities to their fullest extent. Now it is following. Eventually Chicago will lead a ational return to the waterways for pleasure travel.

The crowded automobile highways are reason for the water motoring trek. The Sunday afternoon drive has ceased to be a pleasure and probably in many cases will be supplemented by a Sunday cruise in the family motorboat.

Business Is on Upgrade.

This year our company received more inquiries regarding our line in one day than we received in an average week last year. And last year was the leading year thus far. This definitely indicates the trend of the public mind. There is more interest in water motoring than ever before.

Cruisers for Every Man's Purse at Show

BY JOSEPH B. LODGE.
[Vice President and General Manager, Dee Wite, Inc.]

One of the most significant developments in the marine industry is illustrated by the large number of medium priced cruisers now being exhibited in the Motor Boat show. For the last several seasons there has been a marked trend toward this type of craft.

JOSEPH B. LODGE.

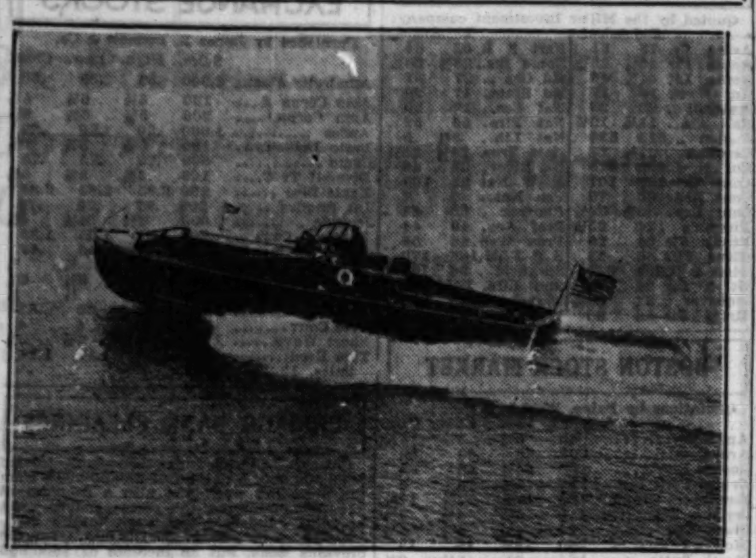
The buying public is coming more and more to insist upon boats in which the whole family can make extended trips with comfort and convenience. The 24 foot family cruiser, manufactured by our company, is an excellent example of the type of craft now in demand. This staunch, compact boat costs less to buy and operate than a medium priced motor car, and can be purchased on similar terms.

Four can live aboard comfortably. Luxurious, full length berths invite restful sleep. The light, airy cabin has nearly 6 feet of head room and includes unusually complete equipment. Among her facilities are enclosed lavatory, convenient galley, ice box, a cabinet for cooking utensils, sink and running fresh water, a cup, glass, and dish rack, and ample clothes hanging space.

WITH NARY A CARE



The pilot of Knowlton K. Ames' 45 foot Robinson commuter appears to be quite free of worry as he and his craft bound over the lake. It is a single cabin boat, capable of doing 38 miles an hour.

shore. Admission will be free. The pier, with its two balconies, provides 6,000 feet, more than a mile, where spectators can be accommodated. Benches will be installed. These choice locations will be taken by early comers.

Thousands more, pedestrians and motorists, may see the speed drivers as they race around the buoys marking the course.

Prizes will be awarded in each race.

Thirteen events insure hundreds of entries, from the outboard motors to the 250 horse power racers, trim arrows of flight which skim over the surface at surprising speed.

Climax to Show.

The regatta is a fitting climax to the motor boat show now exhibiting at Navy pier. It is promoted in the interests of an industry which in the near future undoubtedly will make tremendous strides in Chicagoland. Lake Michigan and the innumerable small lakes and rivers of the hinterland are natural avenues of travel. Power boats soon will rival motor cars as vehicles for pleasure and business.

Entries for the marathon races and the speed events may be made at THE TRIBUNE'S booth at the motor boat show. The blank also is printed in this section and may be filled out and sent to the Motor Boat Editor, CHICAGO TRIBUNE. The blank will be printed in succeeding issues. Entries close May 20.

Four races for stock runabouts are scheduled. The divisions are created according to the horse power of the boats. The first of this division is for boats with 50 horse power or less. The other divisions are 50 to 125 horse power, 125 to 200 horse power, and over 200 horse power.

Raceabouts of 125 cubic inches also will have their chance to win a cup.

Five outboard races are on the program. Two of these are amateur events. The others are open to amateur and professional drivers.

Two outboard races, based on displacement, and an open handicap based on the advertised horse power of the manufacturers, complete the program.

The complete list of speed events for May 31 follows:

Stock runabouts, not over 50 h. p.
Stock runabouts, 50 to 125 h. p.
Stock runabouts, 125 to 200 h. p.

RECORD MARINE DISPLAY GROWS FROM MART IDEAS

Navy Pier Called Logical U. S. Boat Center.

BY HUBBARD H. ERICKSON,
[Manager Motor Boat Mart.]

Out of the idea of a Motor Boat Mart has grown the largest marine exposition ever held in the central west. Out of the plan for display of all types of water craft at one point has developed a barometer of Chicago's interest in boats as a sport, a mode of travel, and a means of recreation.

This second annual motor boat show has been made possible by the coöperation of nearly one hundred manufacturers who have shipped their mammoth and bulky exhibits to the Navy pier in the sound belief that the geographical location of this city establishes it as the logical boating center of the country.

The idea of a mart for boats is somewhat unique. It dates back to 1927, when a few craft were assembled at one point and displayed throughout the year. From that small showroom the mart was moved to the Navy pier, where it gained immediate and absolute assurance from the manufacturers.

Under the present plan of mart operation manufacturers from every division of the industry install their products at the pier, leave them in charge of a representative and enjoy the advantages of having every visitors inspect his line. It reduces the expense that would arise from separate showrooms. It affords the average manufacturer with a space where he might exhibit under the most satisfactory conditions.

If a certain yachtsman wishes to buy a cruiser, he may visit the mart and see there every type built by the industry. Should he buy the boat, he may select his motor from one on the floor. Thereafter he may look over the accessory exhibits and purchase such fittings, uniforms, dishes, flags, and hardware that he might need. On another section of the floor he will find dingies, outboard motors, life preservers, fire extinguishers, oars, and even stoves.

Sees Chicago as Boating Playground

BY F. T. KAINER.
[Secretary and Treasurer, Kainer & Co.]

Every indication points to the fact that Chicago's development as a boating center will be as phenomenal as its rise in commerce and industry. The fact that Chicagoans' interest in water sports and boat-mindedness is growing by leaps and bounds is evidenced by the comprehensive array of craft now on display at the motor boat show, Navy Pier.

Chicago's lake shore line also is gradually taking on definite form and character, affording small craft the necessary protection. The many harbors and islands now being made will make Chicago's water front one of the most interesting and beautiful in the world.

The marine industry has been just as active and progressive in developing along modern lines as has Chicago. Boats are designed now for greater speed and ease of operation; engines are improved to such an extent that they are as easy to operate as an automobile engine; refinements in the way of equipment and fittings set the modern boat apart until they are as trim and smartly appointed as an imported Parisian gown from Patou or Chanel. Milady will discover to her satisfaction that the modern marine runabout is as up to date as her car.

Wisconsin Boating Group Announces 1931 Officers

The Wisconsin Boating association, with headquarters at Milwaukee, announces the following officers and directors for the coming year:

J. A. Mahony, commodore; Charlie Steele, vice commodore, northern section; William Boynton, vice commodore, Oshkosh section; Mrs. Helen H. Raab, treasurer, and William Kramer, secretary.

1931 Seen as Small Boats' Biggest Year

No one year in the history of small boat racing has seen such sensational developments as 1930 brought forth, and the 1931 season promises to far surpass in speed records and mechanical innovations anything accomplished last year. This is the consensus of opinion gained from leaders of the outboard motor industry by James W. Mulroy, secretary of the National Outboard association.

"Fifty miles an hour with an outboard motor is an accomplished fact; safe, cheap and reliable boats and motors have been developed, electric starters are on the market and the noise problem promises to be a thing of the past; all these the result of small boat development within the last year," according to Mulroy.

Back to Old Time Favor.

For the first time since the development of the automobile, pleasure boating gives every indication of regaining the tremendous popularity which it enjoyed thirty years ago. This change is admittedly due to the sensational increase in the use and development of outboard motors.

"At the Chicago National Motor Boat show the public is able to view scores of new models of small boats and motors, all of which have been developed with a view of satisfying the average man's desire for pleasure boating. The spectacular racing hulls will, of course, still be very much in evidence, but boating has begun to develop in the same way that the automobile grew in popularity, with more emphasis being placed on durability, comfort and looks, and speed being taken as a matter of course," Mulroy says.

Set 169 Records.

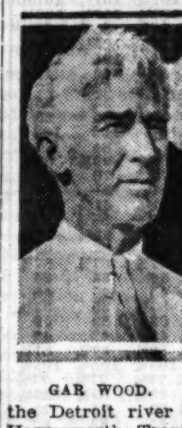
One hundred and sixty-nine speed records were established by outboard boats last year and it is a certainty that the coming boating season will see the old records shattered in nearly every instance.

Last September Ray Pregenzer Jr. of Antioch, Ill., established the remarkable record of 50.93 m. p. h. with his four-sixty motor. Now word comes from California that a sea horse motor has recently bettered 51 m. p. h., and there is a strong possibility that 55 m. p. h. will be reached and bettered within the next six months.

Mechanical starters, which did so much to revolutionize the automobile industry, should have the same effect on boating this year and should prove a boon to women and children, since the starting cord, like the old automobile crank, will be done away with entirely if desired. Also, the new motors are much quieter than those formerly used, and the question of adequate mufflers for boat motors seems to be definitely solved.

LATEST WOOD RUNABOUT IS A SPEEDY ONE

The new 28 foot Gar Wood runabout, powered with the famous twelve cylinder 425 horse power Gar Wood marine engine, is claimed by officials of the company to be the fastest stock runabout ever offered the boating public. This new model will be known as the 28-55, and is capable of speeds up to 55 miles an hour.



GAR WOOD.

A stock model of this boat, the first 28-55 built, won the free for all against all competition on the Detroit river during the 1930 Harmsworth Trophy races. Eugene Kettering, 23 year old son of Charles F. Kettering, president of General Motors Research corporation, piloted the boat. Second place also was won by a stock model 33-50 Wood runabout.

The twelve cylinder engine develops 425 horse power and drives a 20x38 wheel at 1,800 r. p. m. It has a bore and stroke of 5x7 inches, with a piston displacement of 1,650 cubic inches. It is a V-type, valve-in-head motor.

The starting motor, which is a special heavy duty design, will start the engine in the coldest weather.

1931 Predicted as Record Season in Lake Boat Sales

BY HENRY BURGER.
[President Burger Boat Company.]

Orders for boats now in hand and pending seem to verify the oft made prediction that the people on the great lakes would some day awake to a full appreciation of the glorious privileges afforded by their front door lakes and water ways.

HENRY C. BURGER.

Harbor development is fast removing one of the chief obstacles to the complete enjoyment of this exhilarating sport.

Our answer to the timid folk who love the water, but overestimate the hazards of cruising, is this: On Jan. 17, in spite of a raging blizzard and ice covered sea, we sailed our standard 46 foot cruiser from Manitowoc to Chicago. She is at navy pier now, with an open challenge to one and all to point out the slightest damage from her unusual trip.

We are facing a capacity season. Inquiries are literally pouring in by the hundreds from everywhere. They are being served by our dealers as rapidly as possible. This interest is significant, considering that ours are the largest yards on the great lakes devoted to building pleasure boats.

Vote to Spend $40,000 on Jackson Park Harbor

South Park Commissioners have voted to spend $40,000 in dredging out the outboard harbor at Jackson Park this spring. One hundred new boat wells will be installed in the harbor for outboard boats and small inboards.

Last year an outboard club was formed at the park by Commodore Ray Platt. The club grew so rapidly and the wells which were installed were so popular that the commissioners decided it would be well worth their while in enlarging the harbor this year. The club is now operating under the name of the Jackson Park Motor Boat club.

CHILE TO STAND BY $375,000,000 NITRATE COMBINE

President Ibanez Signs Merger Documents.

BY NORMAN A. INGREY.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

SANTIAGO, Chile, April 25.—President Ibanez has shattered the expectations of opponents of the $375,000,000 nitrate combine by appending his signature to the final documents and stating that his government would stand by the scheme and enforce its rationalization program. The American sponsored "Cosach" company, the biggest of its kind in the world, comes into being therefore with official blessing to take charge of the premier national industry.

British and other international nitrate interests, whose control is now superseded by American rivals, had been hoping that something would turn up at the last moment to save fifty year old investments, but the official announcement of the company's formation put an end to these hopes. The terms are a triumph of Chile-American coöperation in the face of European banking and diplomatic pressure to prevent the rationalization of an industry which had been fighting a losing battle against German and British artificial fertilizer competition since the war.

Plan Eventual Closure.

By agreement terms some 150 British and other foreign producing plants in northern Chile will come under American line administration, but their eventual closure is planned, as two modern $40,000,000 plants have been built in the Tocopilla area by American engineers capable of manufacturing as much as the rest put together and sufficient to supply the whole of the present world's demand for natural nitrate. Others will be built as market conditions improve.

London companies claim they are losing $150,000,000 by the merger deal, which reduces their control percentage from over 50 to under 15 per cent. The Chilean government retorts that after having made fabulous sums out of Chile's chief natural wealth these companies allowed foreign manufacturers of artificial nitrate to steal a march on them. By lack of scientific study and failure to modernize plant machinery Chilean nitrate lost its competitive capactiy in world markets. The government naturally turned "to those elements in the industry representing scientific development and progressive marketing."

American mining experts claimed that Chilean natural nitrate could compete on equal lines and retrieve lost markets if production was modernized. Chilean economists agreed and President Ibanez, to whom the problem was referred, threw his weight on the side of the reformists, and the new company, directed by American technicians and with 50 per cent government participation, came into being. The government is cutting all export taxes to give the new company a fair chance.

Out to Get Business.

Don Pablo Ramirez, chief Chilean nitrate delegate, who has been in charge of the financing arrangements, stated today: "Unless steps had been taken to prevent it the industry was doomed to disappear, throwing 100,000 men out of work, inflicting an annual loss of $25,000,000 on the national treasury and causing the northern pampas to return to their original state of uninhabited desert."

Don Pablo is now on his way to Paris to represent Chile in the international fertilizer conference, where, with cheaper produced nitrate statistics in his pocket, he will be able to bargain with continental manufacturers of the rival artificial products. His aim, he declared, is a pact which will secure generous Chilean participation in the world consuming markets.

Seek to Abandon Street Car Service in 3 Cities

Permission to discontinue street railway service in Hammond, Whiting and East Chicago was asked yesterday in a petition filed with the public service commission of Indiana by the Calumet Railways Inc., which serves those cities.

The commission is asked to approve immediate discontinuance of the operation of the company's street railway system and to cancel and rescind indeterminate permits under which it has been operated.

For many years operation of the street railway lines has resulted in a deficit each year, the petition states. The petition recites that loss through operation of the lines has aggregated $273,967 during the last five years and that the deficit in the first three months of this year has been more than 25 per cent greater than the loss in the corresponding period of 1930.

CORN, OATS AND RYE SLIP OFF TO LOW LEVELS

Wheat Gets Support, but Is Easier.

The New York and Chicago Board of Trade, and the principal grain and commodity exchanges in other cities will operate on daylight savings time beginning tomorrow. New York and Chicago banks also will conform. The Liverpool markets will follow the American exchanges. The Chicago Live Stock market and others throughout the country will continue to operate on standard time.

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

A wave of general liquidation engulfed the bulls in the grain markets yesterday and sent all deliveries of corn, oats, and rye crashing to new low levels for the season and for a number of years. Belated longs found support lacking when they tried to sell out and May corn dropped 2c, to 55⅝c, equaling the inside figure of 1922, while May oats broke to 26½c, a new low since 1901 when sales were made as low as 23c.

Routine news was ignored from the start with discouraged longs selling out and each dip uncovering a fresh lot of stop loss orders. Practically every bushel of coarse grain and rye held by speculative longs at the last showed a loss, and sentiment was extremely bearish. Buying against daily and weekly bids was a factor in checking the decline, although the sellers of the bids were in many instances forced to protect themselves on the way down.

Grains Lower for Week.

It is an axiom of the grain trade that bear markets culminate in a series of sharp breaks which normally results in strengthening the technical position to such an extent that sharp rallies follow, and any change in the character of the news after the liquidating period is completed is likely to result in a bull market. There is nothing in the present situation on any grain, as a majority of the trade see it, to result in more than a natural reaction, due to an oversold condition at the present time.

Liquidation has been on in grains the greater part of the week and while no new low levels were reached on wheat the finish was 1⅛@5½c lower as compared with the previous week with corn off 2¾@5c, oats 2½@4¾c, and rye 4⅝@5⅝c as compared with a week ago. Lard lost 30@32½c and bellies 70c for the week.

Wheat Receives Support.

When the action of the coarse grain markets was considered, wheat traders said the latter had given a good account of itself, although the new crop months closed 1⅝@1⅝c lower with July and September at 59⅞@60c, and December 63¼@63⅜c. July at the inside was down to 59⅝c and the present level is the lowest since 1896, although earlier in the season the nearby new crop month sold as low as 55½c. May wheat received aggressive support, presumably from the government agencies, and finished unchanged to ⅛c higher, at 81½@81⅝c. Winnipeg was 1⅝@1½c lower with July at 60⅛c, while Liverpool was ⅛@⅝d lower, July being 66⅜c. Buenos Aires lost ⅛@⅜c for the day.

Export demand for Canadian wheat at the seaboard was distinctly slow with sales of 200,000 to 300,000 bu in all positions. No action on the German import duty will be taken until sometime this week, with cables from abroad expressing the belief that it would be lowered, but no change was expected in other grains.

The first actual evidence of readjustment in the world's wheat situation was seen in a report from the International Institute of Agriculture at Rome in an estimate that Australia would seed only 13,500,000 acres for the crop which will be harvested late in 1931, and compared with 16,947,000 acres seeded last year.

Record Argentine Corn Crop.

At no time did the corn market show a pronounced tendency to rally and the lowest figures of the day and season were made shortly before the close with the finish at net losses of 1⅛@1⅞c. May being 55⅝@55½c, July 58@58⅛c, September 58⅛@58¼c, and December 51⅝@51¾c.

While current prices for corn are the lowest since 1922 they are still far above the inside figures of previous years. In 1921 May corn sold down to 50⅛c, or nearly 5c lower than on Friday, while the December at 51⅝c was 7c above the inside price established in 1921, made as the result of the post-war depression. Shipping demand was somewhat better, with sales of 72,000 bu.

Argentine will have a record corn crop this season, the first official report making the acreage 11,733,000 and the crop 372,000,000 bu. This compares with 237,000,000 bu harvested the previous year and with the previous report of 330,000,000 bu in 1913-'14.

Cash houses were fair buyers of oats at times, but the waves of liquidation which swept over the market carried everything before them, and the close was at the bottom with net losses of 1⅛@2c with May leading.

Weekly Debits Increase, Reserve Bank Reports

Debits to individual deposit account reported to the Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago for the week ended April 22 by 217 banks in thirty-eight leading clearing house cities in the seventh federal reserve district aggregate $1,323,075,000, an increase of 5.9 per cent compared with a week ago ($1,254,568,000). Compared with the corresponding week of last year ($1,580,234,000), a decrease of 16.0 per cent was shown.

Big Business Continually Grows Bigger

BY SCRUTATOR.

Mergers, extensive sale of securities, and the absorption of smaller concerns by big corporations are rapidly bringing about vast changes in the economic life of the nation.

Big business is becoming bigger. Industry is steadily becoming concentrated in fewer hands. The trend is unmistakable.

Just how far this trend has progressed is brought out by Gardiner C. Means of Columbia university in a recent issue of the American Economic Review.

His study is confined to nonfinancial corporations, that is, industrial concerns, excluding banks, insurance companies, and investment trusts.

Picks 200 Largest.

There were in the United States 302,993 such corporations in 1927, and their aggregate gross assets were $152,500,000,000. Mr. Means picked the 200 largest and found that they controlled gross assets of $67,165,000,000, or 44 per cent of all nonfinancial corporate wealth.

He then delves into earnings and finds that in 1927 the 200 largest corporations, each with an income of more than $4,000,000, received more than 40 per cent of the net income of all corporations. For convenience he chooses his 200 largest corporations from those whose stock is listed on the New York Stock exchange.

Going further, he estimates that between 35 and 45 per cent of all business wealth—excluding wealth of government, agriculture, and the professions—is controlled by the leading 200 companies.

The survey presents figures indicating that from 1909 to 1927 the gross assets of the 200 largest grew at the rate of 5.3 per cent per year, while the rate of growth for all corporations was only 3.5 per cent, and for corporations other than the largest 200 only 2 per cent.

Growth Even More Rapid.

From 1924 to 1927 the increase was even more rapid, the big companies going up 7.3 per cent per year, against a growth of 2.3 per cent for others than the largest 200.

"On the basis of gross assets," says Mr. Means, "the large corporations appear to have been growing between two and three times as fast as all other nonfinancial corporations."

If the indicated rates of growth of the large corporations and of national wealth continue, he opines that within twenty years virtually half of the national wealth will be owned by the 200 giant corporations.

The natural conclusion to be drawn from these figures is that a society in which production is governed by blind economic forces is being replaced by one in which production is under the ultimate control of a small group of men.

Whether the nation will benefit by this concentration of power depends largely upon the manner in which it is used. The experiment is not yet completed.

STATEMENT OF WHITNEY GETS TRUST APPROVAL

New York, April 25.—(AP)—Two of the largest fixed investment trusts today issued statements welcoming the attitude expressed by Richard Whitney, president of the New York Stock exchange, toward drawing the public's attention to "possible dangers connected with fixed investment trusts."

Mr. Whitney's statement was made in a speech in Philadelphia yesterday.

John Y. Robbins, president of Administrative and Research corporation, said his organization was forwarding a copy of Mr. Whitney's complete talk to all dealers handling corporate trust shares, a large fixed trust. In addition he said it had wired to the dealers a statement that it is in sympathy with Mr. Whitney's announcement and that it had been stressing this for three years.

"Some trusts on the market undoubtedly have provisions in their trust indentures that are not to the best interests of the investor," the statement said, "and some are actually dangerous from the taxation standpoint and otherwise. Also some historical charts are misleading. The sooner such practices are looked into and eliminated, the quicker the entire investment trust field will be benefited. Corporation trust shares welcomes such constructive action."

Distributors Group, incorporated, sponsors of North American Trust Shares, the largest of the fixed trusts, also welcomed the stock exchange attitude.

Cut Pierce-Arrow Motor, Florsheim Dividend Rates

Directors of Pierce-Arrow Motor Car company yesterday declared a dividend of 25 cents a share on the class A stock, compared with 50 cents quarterly previously paid. The regular quarterly payment of $1.50 on the preferred stock was authorized.

Directors of Florsheim Shoe company declared a quarterly dividend of 37½ cents a share on the class A stock, placing the issue on a $1.50 annual basis, against $3 previously, and a quarterly dividend of 18¾ cents a share on the class B stock, placing it on a 75 cent annual basis, against $1.50 previously.

Mr. Florsheim added that many economies and savings have been instituted during the last six months which will become fully operative during the last half of the company's fiscal year. He said that this, coupled with the slight improvement now apparent will, in his opinion, reflect earnings for the second six months more in keeping with the results of former years.

LONDON MARTS SHOW UPTURN; STERLING RISES

Liquidation Ends Suddenly.

BY SIDNEY CAVE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, April 25.—The London exchanges are creating a record for quick changes. After the wave of extreme pessimism, during the early part of the week, when bears started running wild and Wall street, the continent, and English provinces joined in a new bout of liquidation, a sudden and rapid change set in and liquidation ceased and a general recovery occurred in every department. The week's session closed with a brighter atmosphere than for a considerable time past.

The principal reason for the kaleidoscopic change was the improvement of the gold situation, notably in the sharp rises in the New York and Paris exchanges so far as London was concerned, the belief that Chancellor of the Exchequer Philip Snowden's budget on Monday will not be so terrible as the prophets have been forecasting, and the cessation in forced selling from overseas.

Attract Credit Balances.

Sterling now appears to be rising at a breathless speed, as indicated by the high money rates which are attracting here foreign unemployed credit balances. Both the New York and Paris exchanges are at present higher than they have been for a long time past. The dollar value of the sterling at 4.86 5-16 removes the possibility of New York competing with London for weekly arrivals of gold on the open market, which has long been the cause for anxiety here.

It is only three months ago since France was taking gold from London, yet not only is Paris at present giving up bullion to New York but should French exchange continue at its present rapid movement a return of the flow of gold from Paris to London is a decided probability. The foreign exchange market attributes its present favorable tendency to the American and French exchanges, principally to the reduction in short term money rates in New York. Consequently London money rates have become more attractive to New York bankers, the discount rate in London being more than 1 per cent higher than in New York, Amsterdam, and Switzerland and also above the Brussels rate.

Rate Has Long Life.

London's 3 per cent bank rate has now existed for nearly a year—an unusually long period. The government would probably welcome a reduction in the rate to level off nearer that ruling in such important centers as New York, Paris, and Amsterdam, but it is apparently considered that, if the discount rates are allowed to fall to what may be termed a natural level, foreign exchanges would immediately move against London and threaten a raid upon the gold reserve. Considering that the Bank of England's stock is still about $73,000,000 below the figure of a year ago, it appears likely that the market control will be retained until a minimum holding of $750,000,000 in coin and bullion has been reached.

Gilt-edged sections benefited from the end of the week improvement, sentiment indicating that investors were again seeking a haven of safety first in securities with a moderate amount of fresh buying. Despite the early American selling, Brazilian stocks finished the week cheerfully, the rally mainly following the improvement in milreis, but Argentine loans were dull. The industrial section of the market for trans-Atlantic favorites was considerably disturbed, with Wall street displaying only a little interest in international financial proposals.

FRANCE SHIPS GOLD

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

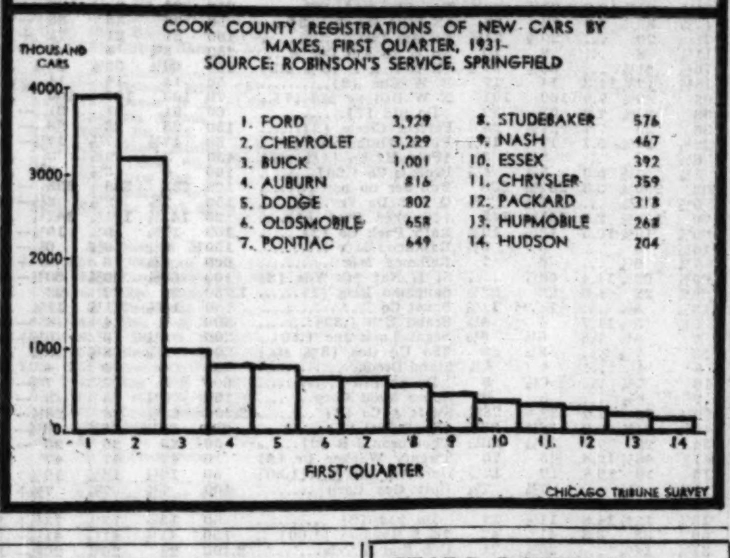
PARIS, April 25.—For the first time since the war France shipped gold to the United States this week. The departure of $3,500,000 gold on Wednesday, and a scheduled shipment within the next few days of $6,000,000 gold to the Guaranty Trust company did not excite the Paris financiers any, although they were the first shipments from France for many years.

According to opinion expressed in financial circles here the shipment Wednesday was merely an operation which had been arranged by dealers in international exchange who were profiting by the minimum fluctuation in exchange rates in selling gold to New York through banking establishments.

The transaction was purely private, and it was done now because of low overhead expenses. This gold movement was generally regarded as an indication of monetary wealth and a manifestation of stability, showing that the Bank of France officials realize that it was impossible to continue to be the creditors of the entire world.

The Paris market this week showed a rally for which conditions on the outside markets had not prepared traders under the circumstances. Wall street particuarly weighed heavily on the Paris bourse during midweek and a further decline on the Paris list was generally expected instead of a rally.

FORD AND CHEVROLET HELD LEAD IN NEW CAR SALES IN COOK COUNTY IN THE FIRST QUARTER



CHICAGO STOCK PRICES RESIST FRESH SELLING

Losses Are Moderate at the Close.

BY THOMAS FURLONG.

Fresh selling consequent upon the Pynchon suspension was met with support for the leading issues on the Chicago exchange yesterday. The first hour of trading saw an influx of outside liquidation followed by a professional turn and a decline in the selling.

It was stated in well informed circles that there was no truth to rumors which followed in the wake of Friday's insolvency. Anxiety over possible consequences were quieted by the reassuring statements by persons in touch with the situation.

Avert Serious Declines.

In isolated cases the declines here amounted to as much as 4 points, but such recessions were not in line with the general market. Losses in the main were kept within a moderate range. Several of the stocks in which Pynchon was active felt the pressure of liquidation, but the market sponsors of these issues were ready for such a development and serious declines were averted.

Associated Telephone Utilities shares again broke sharply and, as previously, recovered its lost ground. Middle West Utilities was active and well supported around 19. The four point drop in Jefferson Electric had little significance as far as the general market was concerned. The issue has been quiet recently and yesterday's trades represented only a few odd lot transactions.

In the semi-annual report of the Walgreen company mailed to stockholders yesterday President Charles R. Walgreen says that the company's experience suggests that the last three months of 1930 were the low point in the general retail business.

Notes Improvement.

"The first quarter of this year was on the whole somewhat better than the final months of last year. March of this year was the third largest month in sales which we have had, being exceeded only by December, 1929, and December, 1930, and this month looks at this date as though it would show larger sales than last month. Perhaps the moderate improvement noted is in part due to improved general conditions, and in part to the fact that we are now fairly and completely adjusted to present conditions. The second half of our fiscal year contains months which are typically among our best as to net earnings."

Equal to 80 Cents a Share.

The company is pursuing a moderate expansion program, he added. Earnings shown are approximately the same as reported in the preliminary statement. Net for the six months period was $855,894.

The earnings for the six month period are equivalent to 80 cents a share on 858,409 shares of common stock outstanding. Because of the change recently in the company's fiscal year direct comparison with the corresponding months of the preceding year cannot be made. The balance sheet as of March 31 showed current assets of $8,313,158 and current liabilities of $3,288,371.

SEARS, ROEBUCK & CO. SALES IN FOUR WEEKS TOTAL $28,714,667

Sales of the Sears-Roebuck Co., Chicago mail order and chain store concern, were the largest thus far this year in the fourth period of the company's thirteen month year. Furthermore, they registered the smallest comparative loss from 1930.

Sales for the four weeks ended April 23 totaled $28,714,667, compared with $30,495,295 for the corresponding period last year, a decline of $1,780,628, or 5.8 per cent. Sales thus far this year have totaled $98,745,934, compared with $110,114,879 a year ago, a decline of $11,368,945, or 10.3 per cent.

It was reported in La Salle street yesterday that profits of Sears-Roebuck for the first twelve weeks of this year were about $200,000 less than for the same period in 1930, whereas sales showed a decline of $9,588,000. Based on current indications, it was predicted that profits for the first half of 1931 will approximate those for the corresponding period in 1930.

COTTON SHIPPERS ASK ABOLITION OF FARM BOARD

New Orleans, La., April 25.—The American Cotton Shippers' association Friday adopted recommendations of its economics committee calling for abolition of the federal farm board, a readjustment of the federal tariff, and establishment of cotton demonstration stations for development of new uses and larger market outlets for American cotton.

The shippers sent a plea to President Hoover asking his aid in sounding the death knell of the federal farm board and guarding against any proposed substitute.

Holding the farm board responsible for loss of foreign cotton markets, the association appealed to the President to use his power "for the rehabilitation of our sorely distressed cotton industry."

They quoted a statement of the President in 1929 that "no governmental agency should engage in the buying and selling and price fixing of products, for such courses can only lead to bureaucracy and domination."

They said policies developed and put into effect by the farm board under the agricultural marketing act, "do place the government in business on a vast scale, at enormous cost to the federal treasury, and with great harm to our cotton industry as a whole."

The committee's recommendations were drawn from reports of its members, who have studied the cotton situation since the group was formed last November.

BOWMANVILLE AND COMMERCIAL BANKS MERGED

Announcement was made last night of the merger of the Commercial State Bank of Chicago, Lincoln and Lawrence avenues, with the Bowmanville National bank. Beginning tomorrow morning the two banks will be consolidated in the Bowmanville bank building at 4806 North Western avenue, the latter bank taking over the deposits and assets of the Commercial State.

Total resources of the combined banks will be around $6,000,000, it was stated. As of the March 25 bank call, total deposits of the Bowmanville were $4,436,000 and $1,250,000 for the Commercial State. E. M. Heidkamp is president of the Bowmanville National and Donald T. McClure is head of the other institution. Police last night guarded the transfer of cash and securities between the two banks.

Irving Trust in Charge of Pynchon & Co.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, April 25.—Following its appointment as receiver, the Irving Trust company today took charge of the affairs of Pynchon & Co., thirty-six-year-old financial house which was suspended by the New York Stock exchange on Friday because of its admitted inability to meet its obligations. The receivership appointment was made by Federal Judge John M. Woolsey.

Most of the firm's employés, numbering several hundred, will be released, the receiver retaining only a skeleton of the former organization to assist its own staff. In the meantime, partners of the firm have continued their conference with banking interests looking to the possible reorganization of the firm and its reinstatement to stock exchange membership when the lifting of the receivership can be arranged.

Year for Reinstatement.

Under the stock exchange's constitution, the firm has a year within which to apply for reinstatement. If application has not been made within a year and no extension of time has been obtained, the seat of the firm's floor member is disposed of by the committee on admissions. The procedure to be followed in seeking reinstatement is for an application to be made, the secretary of the exchange notifying the membership at least a week prior to admission. The applicant is required to furnish the committee a list of creditors, a statement of the amounts originally owing, and the nature of the settlement in each case. Provided satisfactory proof of settlement with all creditors is submitted, the applicant then must receive the vote of two-thirds of the committee. If he fails to receive such vote after three ballots he may appeal to the governing committee and that body may by affirmative vote of not less than twenty-five of its members grant the reinstatement.

Estimate Obligations.

No official information could be obtained today as to the extent of the firm's obligations, but they were understood to exceed $40,000,000. A great deal of the security collateral held on loans made to the firm has already been liquidated. Extensive blocks of stock were reported to have been sold today through various brokerage houses, and this accounted largely for the fresh weakness on the stock exchange. Stocks in which Pynchon & Co. were reputed to be interested sold at new lows for the year.

The stock pledged by the firm as collateral could not, of course, be identified, but interest centered in securities in which the firm is understood to have been interested.

FILE PETITION HERE

Involuntary bankruptcy proceedings against Pynchon & Co., brokers, at 112 West Adams street, declared insolvent Friday, were brought in the United States District court yesterday in behalf of three creditors, who charged that preferential payments had been made to other creditors. The action was brought by Cassels, Potter & Bentley for the Wood-Repp company; Schilder & Schmidt, and E. R. Goble, who listed claims aggregating $1,836. Federal Judge Carpenter set Monday for a hearing on the motion to appoint a receiver for the concern.

Dealers in Grain.

Pynchon & Co. have been among the heaviest traders in grain on the Chicago Board of Trade for years. They handled a large foreign, as well as domestic, business. While their open interest handled through their own house and cleared was said to be comparatively small they had a sufficient balance in the clearing house. They have always had a large trade in grains given in exchange for stock business with other brokerage houses. This interest is said to be quite large and is understood to have been largely liquidated Saturday.

Life Insurance Sales Drop in First Quarter

Hartford, Conn., April 25.—[Special.]—The volume of life insurance sold in the first quarter of 1931 was considerably below that of the same quarter in 1930. This comparison is made, however, to a period of inflated sales in life insurance. Although a year ago most industries were suffering losses, life insurance continued to show steady gains. The peak was reached in March, 1930, when the people of the United States purchased the largest volume of ordinary life insurance ever sold in a single month. This statement is based on figures compiled by the Life Insurance Sales Research Bureau at Hartford.

REPORT MORE GOLD EN ROUTE TO UNITED STATES

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, April 25.—Dispatches received in Wall street today indicated that $12,864,000 additional gold shipments are en route to this market, $10,364,000 from Argentina, and $2,500,000 from France, bringing the total now on its way from that country to $18,500,000. Gold stocks of the country were further increased yesterday by the arrival of $7,000,000 gold from Argentina, shipment of which had previously been announced.

The additional $2,500,000 reported on its way here from France could not be traced to any consignée and was consequently not authenticated. Dispatches from France stated that the steamship Europa had left Cherbourg with $15,000,000 gold on board consigned to this market. Previous announcements had been made that $12,500,000 was being sent on the Europa, $6,500,000 to Lazard Freres and $6,000,000 to the Guaranty Trust company. Neither of these institutions is expecting the additional $2,500,000 reported in the dispatches.

The shipment of $10,364,000 from Argentina is being sent by the Banco de la Nacion on the steamship American Legion. The shipment of $7,000,000 which arrived today was consigned $5,000,000 to the National City bank and $2,000,000 to the Chase National bank.

Believes Natural Gas Will Be Exhausted in 50 Years

Natural gas, the forerunner of the oil industry, will be an extinct enterprise in the next fifty years. At the present rate of consumption the deposits of natural gas now known will be exhausted by 1980, J. S. Blanchfield, chairman of the managing committee of the American Gas association, said yesterday in a meeting at the Stevens hotel.

BY FRED HARVEY.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, April 25.—Cautious traders continued to back out of the stock market today and values once more trended sharply downward. The finish found the averages flirting more earnestly with the lows of Dec. 16 last with numerous individual issues and at least one big important group, that is the rails, securely salted away below that dread level.

Except for a little flurry of buying in the first half hour there was little evidence of support in any quarter and this fact naturally had a depressing influence on speculative sentiment at large. There is no doubt that much of the day's selling as in other recent sessions can be checked up to the account of liquidation of investment stocks.

New Lows for Year.

Among the many new lows for the year established by the day's declines were Goodyear Tire, Westinghouse, National Distillers, Stewart Warner, American Radiator, U. S. Realty and Improvement, Mathieson Alkali, Fox Film, General Theaters Equipment, National Power, Standard Oil of N. J., and Julius Kayser.

Westinghouse was under heavy pressure from the very opening and hit a new low for the last four years. Other utilities were acutely weak and such issues as American Water Works, Power & Light, Electric Power & Light, Consolidated Gas, Peoples Gas, Public Service of New Jersey, and North American finished showing losses of from 2 to 3 points or more.

The rally in rails, which provided one of the bright spots of yesterday's trading, failed to hold and some of the sharpest dips of the day were to be found in that section. Atchison lost 6½ points, Union Pacific 5⅝, and Southern Railway 3½ points.

Amusement shares continued weak as a result of the break in Fox and General Theaters Equipment following the Pynchon & Co. collapse and both issues hit new lows for the year. Loew's, Warner Brothers, and Paramount were spineless.

Depresses Rubber Group.

The slump in Goodyear had a depressing effect on the entire rubber group and the oils were slippery as usual. One of the largest individual declines of the day was registered by Ingersoll Rand, which dropped more than 9 points. Auburn Auto lost 9⅝, American Bank Note 6½, and Johns Manville 5 points.

United States Steel wound up at 125⅝, off an even point from yesterday's close, and American Can finished at 114⅝, down 1⅝.

There was not much in the way of fresh news beyond the appearance of a few more quarterly and annual corporation statements. Interest seemed momentarily to shift to discussion of the probable showing which earnings of the U. S. Steel corporation for the March quarter will make on publication next Tuesday afternoon.

Stewart-Warner Loss for Quarter Is $331,756

The Stewart-Warner corporation yesterday reported a net loss of $331,756 after all charges for the quarter ended March 31, against a net profit of $656,010, or 50 cents a share on 1,298,919 shares of capital stock, in the first quarter of 1930. Directors took no action on the dividend, which was passed three months ago. The first quarter results show some improvement over the preceding quarter, when a loss of $721,171 was sustained.

Estimated receipts at Chicago Monday: Cattle, 17,000; hogs, 35,000; sheep, 25,000.

The meager supply of hogs on the week-end session sold readily at the recent sharp declines, sales showing losses of 40@60c compared with the previous Saturday's prices. The extreme top and general average prices were the same as Friday's prices at $7.35 and $6.85 respectively, but compare with a top of $8.25 and average of $7.75 at the high time 20 days ago.

Hardly enough hogs were on the market to test quotations and all buyers were eager for stock in view of the possibility of another short supply Monday. Previous sessions during the week were burdened with big receipts.

Hog futures slumped 25c on the week-end trade. Three loads of September heavy grades sold at $8.00. June light were offered at $8.25 and bid $7.50, while light for September were offered at $8.40 and bid $8.00.

Best Steers Sell Higher.

Cattle and lambs made a much better showing than hogs during the last week. Top steers soared to $10.25 on the mid-week bulge, while lambs on Wednesday's session were sold as high as $10.00. Top hogs for the week dropped to $7.85, while the general average for the entire week was lowest since February at $7.05. The increase in hog receipts, which were largest in four weeks, was attributable to the sudden change in weather.

Farmers took advantage of the recent warm spell and were too busy in the fields to market hogs. Supplies were hard to dispose of and daily holdovers ranged from 7,500 to 9,000. Movement of fresh pork has been very slow, although wholesale prices of pork loins have receded only slightly and are still above a month ago and only 1@2c below a year ago at this time.

The steady influx of all classes of cattle to Chicago swelled the week's total to 47,900, the largest since middle of last December. This total was larger than for any corresponding week in three years. Yet the general average price moved ahead 15c at $7.75, while the extreme top was only 15c under the highest point since April 6. Demand from almost all sources has switched to lighter weight steers and yearlings. The latter outsold weighty beeves by a big margin toward the end of the week.

Lambs Average $9.00.

Lambs averaged exactly the same as a week ago, despite the increase in offerings. However, the price at $9.00 compares with $9.45 a year ago and with $16.40 two years ago. Receipts at 96,600 were largest of the year and above any corresponding weekly total in a number of years. Support of the market was mostly on local account. Outsiders bought fewer than a week ago on the Chicago market. Lambs without fleece were few in numbers because of the big spread between shorn and wool lambs. Wool in the country carrys bids of 15@17c mostly. Only a few spring lambs have been on the market since the big slump which followed the Easter holidays.

Receipts for Monday are estimated at 17,000 cattle, 35,000 hogs, and 25,000 sheep, against 14,698 cattle, 52,914 hogs, and 32,108 sheep a week ago, and 24,188 cattle, 37,622 hogs, and 23,796 sheep the corresponding day a year ago. Next week's receipts are estimated at 45,000 cattle, 130,000 hogs, and 85,000 sheep, against 46,978 cattle, 129,502 hogs, and 91,423 sheep a year ago, and 43,841 cattle, 145,957 hogs, and 77,089 sheep two years ago.

VIENNA, April 25.—Austrian foreign imports during March, as compared with those of March a year ago, show a decrease of $8,000,000, equal to 23.2 per cent. Exports were off $7,500,000, or about 30 per cent.

CASH·GRAIN NEWS

There was a scattered foreign demand for Canadian wheat and barley, but the general inquiry was very disappointing and total sales of wheat in all positions were finally estimated at 200,000 to 300,000 bu.

Chicago handlers sold 3,000 bu wheat, 72,000 bu corn, 175,000 bu oats, 6,000 bu rye, and 2,000 bu barley to the domestic trade with 50,000 bu wheat and 60,000 bu oats sold to go to store. Purchases of 33,000 bu corn were made to arrive.

Milling demand for cash wheat was fair with the basis steady. Offerings were small. No. 1 red was ½@¾c and No. 1 hard and No. 1 northern ¾@1c over May, while No. 2 red was May price to ¼c over; No. 2 hard, ½@¾c over, and No. 2 northern, May price to ½c under.

Industries were the best buyers of cash corn in the sample market with the basis steady to ¼c lower, the poorer grades showing the easiness. No. 2 yellow was May price to ¼c over and No. 2 white 1c over. No. 3 white May price to 1c under. Discounts on other grades, as compared with May, follow: No. 2 mixed, ⅛@½c; No. 3 mixed, 2@2½c; yellow, ½@2¼; No. 4 mixed, 3@4c; yellow, 2½@4c; white, 2@3c; No. 5 mixed, 4@5c; yellow, 4c.

Shipping demand for cash oats was fairly active with the basis slightly firmer. No. 2 white was 1@1½c over and No. 3 white, ¼c under to ¼c over May.

Official receipts of grain at Chicago Friday: Wheat, 99 cars; corn, 117 cars; oats, 59 cars; barley, 11 cars.

COTTON FAIRLY SUPPORTED

Cotton trading was fairly active yesterday, all things considered, and losses comparatively small, although closing figures were the lowest of the day. It was said that farm work has been delayed by unfavorable weather in many sections during the week, which brought in a little new speculative buying, as well as covering by shorts. Liquidation of May contracts was a feature and is expected to continue for a few days more. This was the first delivery day notice for New Orleans May contracts, while in New York it will be next Tuesday.

Spinners' takings for the week of 276,000 bales were the largest in recent months. For the season to date the aggregate is 9,604,000 bales against 11,709,000 bales for the same time last year, and 13,184,000 bales two years ago. Reports from Manchester said the market there was quiet. The demand from China is disappointing. Dry goods trade is said to be fair.

Futures in Chicago closed 3@11 points lower; New Orleans was off 5@10 points, and New York 5@9 points, October being the lowest in all markets. A decline of 5 points was made in all markets, New York being 10.10c; New Orleans, 9.85c; Galveston, 10c, and Houston, 9.95c. Prices follow:

WORLD'S GRAIN MARKET NEWS

Sentiment in the grain trade at the close was bearish, despite the fact that prices are the lowest of the week on wheat and for the season on other grains. Traders in most instances said they do not like to press the bear side, yet they saw nothing on which to buy grains for a good advance. Those who had daily and weekly "bids" sold had to take on good sized lines at the last. It is said that the only help for the wheat situation is a severe crop damage in the near future and a decidedly large foreign demand.

Corn and oats specialists said liquidation by May holders had been drastic, yet it fails to induce buying other than profit taking by shorts.

"We believe that a break such as we had in wheat today will bring in increased export demand and act as a cushion against further declines," says S. C. Harris. "We are inclined to think that bearish sentiment is again being somewhat exaggerated and would not sell wheat on the breaks. There probably will be further liquidation of May corn contracts during the early part of the week, which is quite likely to bring about an additional irregular decline, but, when this is completed, we think that by next Friday December corn might be bought for a technical reaction." The low on December corn was 51⅝@51¾c.

"The general opinion is that there is still considerable corn back in the country, evidently in the hands of farmers who can hold it as reserve for their summer feeding requirements, as the pig crop is unusually large," says Charles D. Olson of J. E. Bennett & Co., who has just returned from the western grain dealers' convention at Des Moines. "Oats are all planted and up to a good stand with a decrease of 5 to 10 per cent in acreage. Old oats are pretty well cleaned up. Good rains all over the state the last few days have relieved the drought fear. Corn ground is all ready for planting, which has started on a small scale."

Management.

The success of any company depends upon its ability to earn money and earnings hinge chiefly on management.

There is too often a tendency among investors to overlook the importance of the human element in determining the merit of an investment.

It is a factor that cannot be measured by any mathematical formula or equation. It is known only by the results that it produces. If a corporation has shown a good record of earnings in the past and its balance sheet indicates a healthy financial condition the investor may reasonably conclude that the management has done its job adequately. If the company has fared better than the average concern in its industry, if it has made a more favorable showing than its competitors the reason is usually that it has been run by men who are exceptionally capable.

A good management may take a weak company and build it into a strong, going concern. Poor or inexperienced management sometimes wrecks even the soundest business.

In a period of depression a mere falling off in a company's earnings is not prima facie evidence of bad management. Results should be compared with those of other companies operating in the same field or producing similar products.

During a business slump many investors begin looking around for securities in which the human element is reduced to a minimum. This may explain the recent popularity of the fixed type of investment trust.

It should be remembered that even in a fixed trust management is ultimately the chief factor, for the assets of such a trust consist of securities of individual companies. The directors of the trust exercise their discretion in selecting the portfolio and in the more recently organized trusts more power is being given them in the matter of eliminating certain assets.

It is hard to overemphasize the importance of brains in business. Factories, stores, banks and railroads will not run themselves and one group of men frequently can produce or sell more and better goods with lower operating costs than another group.

LARD WELL SUPPORTED

Buying of lard, credited to eastern interests, took the bulk of the offerings from packers yesterday and scattered holders and closed the market 2½@5c higher, except on September, which was unchanged. There was a little easing from the extreme top, in sympathy with the break in grains. Liverpool lard was unchanged to 3d higher. Export clearances were 915,000 lbs. Hog supplies were small, but a good run is expected and the market is generally steady. Prices follow:

EUROPEANS GET CONCESSIONS IN CHINESE TRADE

American Merchants Eye Drift of Business.

BY JOHN POWELL.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

SHANGHAI, April 25. — American merchants in Shanghai, some 2,500 of them, who depend upon China's foreign trade for their livelihood, and American officials as well, are becoming apprehensive if not seriously alarmed at the apparent drift of Chinese business toward European concerns.

That there are sound grounds for their apprehension is shown by the fact that a large number of contracts recently have gone to European interests, including port development projects at Huluta, Haichow, and Chungshan, which have been awarded to a Dutch concern.

Contracts for the purchase of railway equipment running into the millions of dollars have been placed in Europe recently, most of this business going to British and Belgian factories, the materials including locomotives, freight and passenger cars, bridge steel, and rails. The only recent large contract for railway equipment which did not go to European interests was a contract for new engines and freight cars for the Shantung railway, which was awarded to Japanese factories in Dairen and Osaka.

British to Finish Road.

British interests also have received the concession for completing the Canton-Hankow railway, an important section of trackage about 250 miles in length, which will open up Hunan province, which contains important deposits of iron, coal, and what is considered the largest world supply of antimony. British plans are to divert this business and center the exports at their Hongkong colony off the south China coast.

It is also understood that Belgian interests will receive the concession for extending the Lung-Hai railway from Honan to Sianfu, capital of Shensi province. This railway, which is China's only east-west line, extends for some 600 miles across northern Kiangsu and Honan provinces and touches the seacoast at the new port of Haichow, on the northern Kiangsu coast. The western end touches the Yellow river at a point called Tungkwan, a fortified mountain pass that leads into China's great undeveloped northwest territories.

Pending contracts, most of which are already supposed to be tied up by German interests, include the construction of five projected state owned industries, including cotton and woolen mills, large salt and sugar refineries, and a chemical plant. Another state owned enterprise, possibly the largest of all, is a steel plant to be constructed at the port of Pukow, on the Yangtse, opposite Nanking. This plant will cost about $20,000,000 in American money and according to report in the Chinese papers most of the equipment is to be supplied by the British and Germans.

Big Reclamation Project.

A large reclamation scheme, known as the Huai valley development, involving the drainage of an extensive rice growing area in northern Kiangsu and Anhwei provinces, will, according to report, go to the British, as they have had engineers in the district making surveys.

Although the United States was the first country to recognize the Nanking government and agree to Chinese tariff autonomy, American participation in the Nationalist government's reconstruction plans has been most meager. Strictly speaking, only one job, the construction of a radio station at Shanghai, has gone to American interests, and even here it is said that two-thirds of the equipment for new radio installations in Nanking and elsewhere has gone to French and German interests.

American firms have supplied a considerable number of new airplanes and amphibians for mail and passenger services which the Chinese government has established along the Yangtse and between the Yangtze and north China, but non-American interests, particularly the Germans, are said to have sold more machines.

Use Indemnity Funds.

The surrendered Boxer indemnities have largely been responsible for much of China's recent business going to European interests. The total indemnity assessed against China as a result of the Boxer uprising in 1900 amounted to about $350,000,000, of which the American portion was about $25,000,000.

In 1908 President Roosevelt surrendered the American portion for educational purposes, as a result of which altruistic action several hundred Chinese boys and girls have been educated in American colleges and universities. The various European nations and Japan, however, sat tight and only took action recently, and in each case specified that the money had to be used for purchasing machinery in Europe. As a result Britain alone will be able to finance more than $50,000,000 worth of machinery sales to China in the immediate future. France, Belgium, Italy, and other countries will get similar plums, the ultimate effect being that European firms have the bulge on China's new reconstruction, with American firms left out in the cold.

The Germans lost their portion of the Boxer indemnity when China joined in the world war on the side of the allies, but despite this the Germans have done well in China since the war, getting a large share of the new machinery orders. The Chinese allege there is a political motive back of this, due to the fact that the Germans trade in China without "extraterritorial rights," the other powers, particularly the United States, hanging on to its treaty which will not expire until 1933.

Stand head and shoulders above the crowd.
True, everybody doesn't know more than one language. But really outstanding people . . . those who have more personality . . . those who seem and are more interesting, usually know more than one language. Whether it be French, Spanish, German or Italian, a knowledge of any one of these languages gives you a certain distinction that makes you stand out from the masses . . . head and shoulders above the crowd. Now you can learn a language by interesting conversation . . . by talking the language and hearing it spoken. Every lesson is a fascinating hour when you learn by the famous Berlitz Conversational Method. Be our guest at a free demonstration. Then only can you appreciate how easy and enjoyable language mastery has been made. Call, write, or phone Harrison 0392.

SALESMEN

When we advertise for a salesman, this doesn't mean we'll take on every Tom, Dick, and Harry who applies; we select our men; they usually stay with us, and they usually make a very good living.

Come in and see us [1] if you want to look at a real job; [2] if you are an outdoor, aggressive, cheerful sort of fellow; [3] if you like selling, but do NOT like companies which manage to keep up business volume only by maintaining a large turnover in salesmen every week and month.

With us you are not expected to canvass your maiden aunt and grandparents; we give you real leads; we give you complete training on the way to turn these leads into profitable commissions; we put back of you all the resources of our 44 years of business history; that is why you can produce sales with Harmon consistently, steadily, and in large figures.

If this is the sort of opportunity you want to measure yourself up against, come in Monday morning to 140 S. Dearborn, Room 207, and ask for MR. ZENT.
HARMON NATIONAL REALTY TRUST.

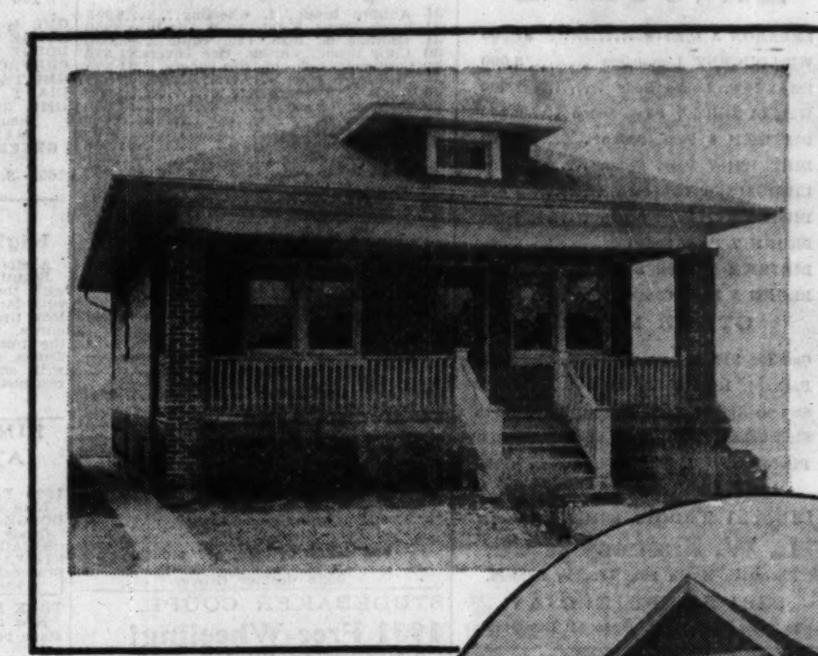
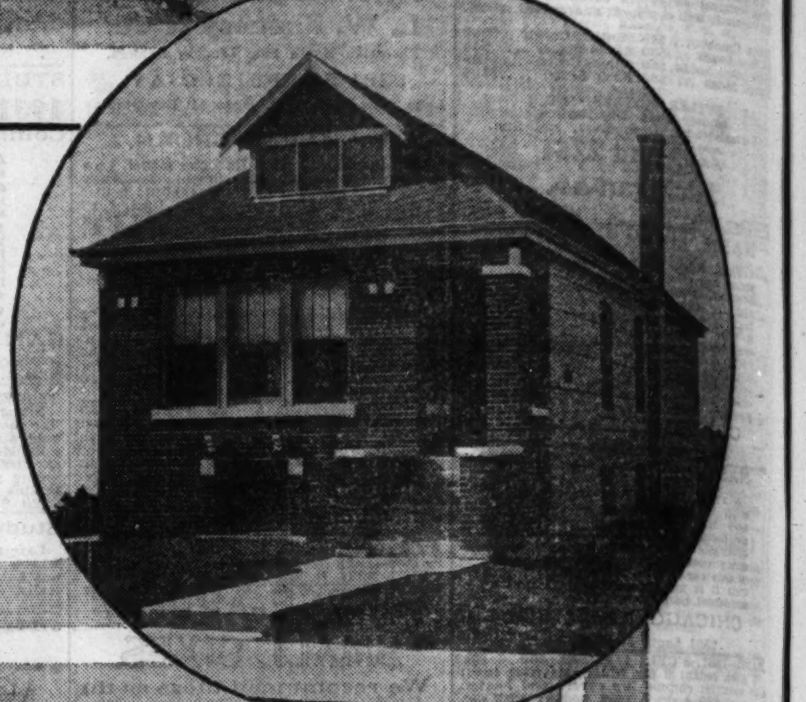
Happiness can be bought!



For a full description of this attractive brick home on the South Side turn to the Tribune Want Ad section. Advertised by Frank De Lugach, owner, it is only one of a large number of houses from which you can choose a home that exactly suits your needs. $7,450.



Here's a five room brick bungalow in Austin, listed in today's Tribune Want Ads. Advertised by C. W. Burgmann Company, it is only one of a large selection of houses offered today. Priced at $7,750.

TEN HOMES that will make TEN FAMILIES HAPPY

This comfortable, substantial bungalow in Villa Park is one of a large number of moderately priced homes advertised today in Tribune Want Ads. Containing five rooms, it is listed by Henry J. Kramer, owner, at $7,950.

MONEY won't buy everything. But money will buy the happiness that a home can bring to you and your family. This page shows you how small the cost of that happiness now can be.

Here are ten houses, taken at random from those advertised in Tribune Want Ads today. The buildings are attractive, the locations desirable and the prices moderate. When you turn to Tribune Want Ads you'll find these things true of practically all the houses offered there.

Start thinking over the advantages of owning a home. Think of the pride you can take in your own place, the increased room your family will have, the feeling of permanence a home can give you. Remember that the costs of furnishing and keeping up a home are lower now than they have been for years—that this is a good time to buy!

Builders and owners make you good offers now. See them today! And make it a daily habit to read the Real Estate columns of the Tribune Want Ad Section.

This substantial six room Oak Park residence, offered by F. C. Pilgrim & Company, is one of a large variety that you'll find in today's Tribune Want Ads. $18,500.

You'll find a complete description of this attractive colonial home in Evanston, and many others, in today's Tribune Want Ads. This one is listed by John F. Hahn, Inc., at $16,500.

Built substantially of brick and frame, with eight rooms, this house, located on valuable land on the South Side, is one of a large number advertised in Tribune Want Ads today. The Hyde Park Investment Company lists it at $10,500.

SPRING DECREES OF THE PARISIAN CZARS OF FASHION

COTTON LACE, as in this Norman Hartnell afternoon dress in pale pink with a hem of pink net, will be smart this summer. The peplum, which makes a point of the slim hipline, descends in cascading ruffles at the side of the skirt, meeting the wide ruffle at the bottom.

JEANNE LANVIN shrinks the Japanese kimono to bolero size, stripes it with silver spangles, and makes it the smartest of evening jackets. The frock has the new square decollete, Lanvin's pet horizontal wide tucks and sunburst godets, making the approved summer night silhouette.

AN INFORMAL EVENING FROCK from Jean Patou, made of stiff black faille silk, has for relieving details a ruffled fichu of Patou's new green and a green bouquet at the bust. The daytime decollete makes this model suitable for wear during daylight as well as after.

$1.00 size of Ambrosia Cream

$1.00 size Ambrosia Tightener

with purchase of $1.00 bottle of Ambrosia Cleanser and new 100-page book on skin care (original price, $1.00; special copy with offer, 50¢)

YOU PAY ONLY $1.50 FOR ALL FOUR ITEMS

EXPLAINING to women at New York test clinic, effect of different beauty treatments on skin. Diagrams show pores, the first clogged with dirt, untouched by greasy cleanser; the second, to which doctor points, has all dirt removed by liquid cleansing, preventing blackheads and blemishes.

There's a thrilling new beauty treatment ready for you in the stores today. While this offer lasts it costs only $1.50 for four items. Brings you a medically-sound beauty method that risks no chance of disappointment, for results have already been tested and proven by 789 skin examinations made by a great New York doctor!

To get this complete new beauty treatment you buy a $1.00 bottle of Ambrosia, the pore-deep cleanser, and 50¢ book on skin beauty, "New Faces for Old." You get Free a $1.00 bottle of Ambrosia Cream, the utterly new colloidal cream that nourishes skin; also Free a $1.00 bottle of Ambrosia Tightener, the aromatic purple astringent that closes large pores, makes oily skin normal. You pay only $1.50 for all four.

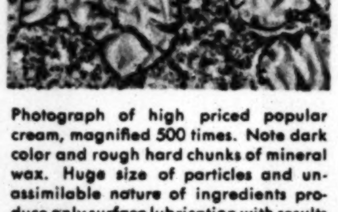
WOMEN: HERE IS WHAT YOU GET—

AMBROSIA CLEANSER, the pore-deep liquid solvent. Pure, sunlit liquid cleanser created by a French chemist. Quicker and easier to use than either soap or cleansing cream. No grease to get in your hair; nothing to wipe away. Leaves skin clean, refreshed, youthfully smooth. Get new, larger $1.00 bottle in this offer.

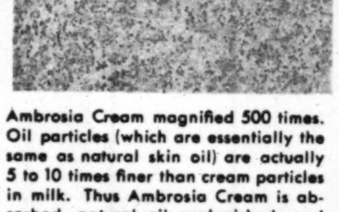
AMBROSIA CREAM—nourishes, enriches, makes dry skin smooth. This white, colloidal fluid combines for the first time a blend essentially the same as natural skin oil. Oil particles in Ambrosia Cream are 5 times finer than cream particles in milk. Thus it penetrates, making skin smooth as baby's cheek. Absolute 8-hour softening effect on dry skin. $1.00 bottle FREE with purchase of offer.

AMBROSIA TIGHTENER. Perfected according to doctor's directions, this aromatic purple astringent closes large pores, makes oily skin normal, tones flabby skin. For further results read doctor's treatments included with book. $1.00 bottle of Tightener FREE with purchase of introductory Ambrosia offer pictured above.

"NEW FACES FOR OLD," 100-page Beauty book. What did the Greeks know about beauty that we have rediscovered? How can beauty treatments increase personality, according to psychologists? Read answers, together with other new beauty facts in this amazing book. Tells how doctor treats each skin type and correct directions for special skin problems. First edition published by Covici, Friede sold for $1.00. Special edition in this offer only 50¢.



Photograph of high priced popular cream, magnified 500 times. Note dark color and rough hard chunks of mineral wax. Huge size of particles and unassimilable nature of ingredients produce only surface lubrication with results that are temporary and disappointing.



Ambrosia Cream magnified 500 times. Oil particles (which are essentially the same as natural skin oil) are actually 5 to 10 times finer than cream particles in milk. Thus Ambrosia Cream is absorbed, natural oil replenished, and skin becomes smooth as baby's cheek!

SUPPLY LIMITED .... OBTAIN AT ONCE!

We've priced these remarkable packages at only $1.50 to introduce the new Ambrosia products to you ... have twice increased the supply to accommodate the demand. We cannot afford to increase it again. Soon no more Ambrosia products will be available free. Make sure you secure these new, medically-sound beauty products at the low introductory price of $1.50. A.D.S. Milk of Magnesia is "Hospital-Tested". The contents of each bottle is in every way an exact duplicate of the original formula. It is the Milk of Magnesia whose strength and quality, per spoonful, never varies.

When leading hospitals specify and use A.D.S. Milk of Magnesia, it is conclusive proof you are receiving the best quality for home use, when you choose A.D.S.

Because of its absolute uniformity and accuracy, A.D.S. Milk of Magnesia will prove most efficient for you and your family to take.

There Is No Safer Product for Household Use Than A.D.S. MILK OF MAGNESIA

BANKS' AFFIDAVIT

Test Gives New Facts
on SKIN CARE

How sensational test revealed 3 New beauty aids equal in quality to salon products selling at 2 to 8 times more! What these facts mean to women . . .

"... we have tested these 3 products in direct comparison with similar products of the expensive lines bearing famous 'individual' names.

"We find them equal and in 3 cases superior in quality to these famous 'individual' name products which sell at prices from 2 to 8 times more than they do."

(Signed) Henry W. Banks, 3d
Loomis, Stump & Banks
Consulting Chemists

Thus for the first time in the history of the cosmetic industry you are able to buy products of salon quality or better at the same price you now pay for ordinary creams and lotions.

Hinds Cleansing Cream

A remarkable cleansing cream that actually changes from a solid to a liquid on contact with skin heat.

The moment you apply, it melts, penetrates and cleanses pores of dirt, dust, make-up.

This new cleansing cream liquefies from 2 to 7 times faster than any other popular priced liquefying or so-called "liquefying" cleansing cream. Chemists have proved this. You get Hinds Cleansing Cream in 40¢ and 65¢ sizes.

Hinds Toning Cleanser

Toning Cleanser brings you a new way of pore refining scientists have been working on for 3 years.

You accomplish this by means of a liquid which is both a cleanser and a solvent. Hinds Toning Cleanser it is called.

Used after cleansing cream it removes all traces of grease, dirt, pore residue. Relieved of this residue pores shrink back to normal size.

Hinds Texture Cream

It's a new-type skin softener.

A light delicate cream, you apply at night . . . it is utterly unlike "greasy" softening creams. Hence you retire with face smooth and lovely.

No need to smooth towel over pillow for fear of grease on linen.

Absorbed rapidly by skin, this scientifically compounded cream works through night, counteracting tight, drawn feeling of skin, scaliness, dryness. Hinds Texture Cream 40¢ and 65¢.

The After Dinner Talkers

By W. E. Hill

[Copyright: 1931: By The Chicago Tribune.]

The gossip test. "You do think she's good looking? Well, I don't. O, I suppose she's a sweet little woman and all that, but I never in all my life saw such a hard, battered, dissipated face on a human being!" (Just two lovely dinner guests who have sequestered themselves in the bathroom for a nice cozy chat on the edge of the bath tub.)

The heavy economic authority. The big business man is telling the dinner guests, in more words than we care to put down here in cold type, all about the wheat situation, what's wrong with the farmers, and how prosperity is bound to return.

The young parents. Junior's father and mother are very anxious about his well being whenever they go out to dinner and are fearful lest Cora, the nurse, will set fire to the apartment or drop him down the elevator shaft or something; and so, naturally, after dinner there is a great deal of talk about "hadn't you better call up and see if he is all right, Harold? You never know what might happen!" (Junior's parents have had a pretty trying evening. They had to listen to a long narrative about the loss of a cherished pivot tooth from their host when they were simply wild to tell about what Junior said to Florence, the cook.)

The wife of the anecdote fiend. "Go ahead and tell it to them," says the bored little wife, "if you think it's funny, George. I don't care."

The political talkers. These three dinner guests are having the nicest kind of a discussion, all about politics and civil government and vice investigations and police upheavals, etc. "My dear," the center of the trio is saying, "it seems terrible, in a way, that those corrupt policemen should be removed from the force. Think of the harm they can do in private life, where there's no one to watch them!"

The literary lady. "And do tell me," inquires the lady who loves a good biography, "what you've been reading lately." The young man pitted against her won't be of much use.

The quiet hour. Mr. Valentine was the life of the party after the cocktails and all during dinner, teasing, cajoling, telling riddles and giving imitations, but now the Martinis have worn off and he's gone quiet and introspective.

The hostess. You'd swear she was deeply engrossed in hearing about the Russian five year plan, but truth to tell she's wondering if it's time for the extra help to leave, and if so, hadn't she best go and pay her her money.

The DISTINGUISHED Set among cigars

Perhaps you smoke cigars after luncheon, after dinner, during the evening—but not as an all-day diet. Probably the reason is that you haven't met Van Dyck—the 16-hour cigar. It is an ideal companion from eight in the morning until midnight—your 16 active hours. Mild all through, its fine tobaccos are so mellow you can light one Van Dyck on the end of another, right around the clock. That's why we call it "The 16-Hour Cigar".

STAGE AND SCREEN

IF THIS DOG SHOULD GET LOST, Eleanor Hayden, who plays the heroine of "The Ninth Guest," would be more than disturbed. The brisk and barking Spitzenberghund is so smart, she swears, that he knows all her lines and prompts her if she misses a cue. (Reick photo.)

CALL THEM THE FOREMOST PLAYERS OF THE AMERICAN STAGE and you probably would be right. They are Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne, stars of the Theater guild's production of "Elizabeth the Queen." They are married, and thus far in their conjugal career no playwright has been able to part them. (Parry photo.)

for only

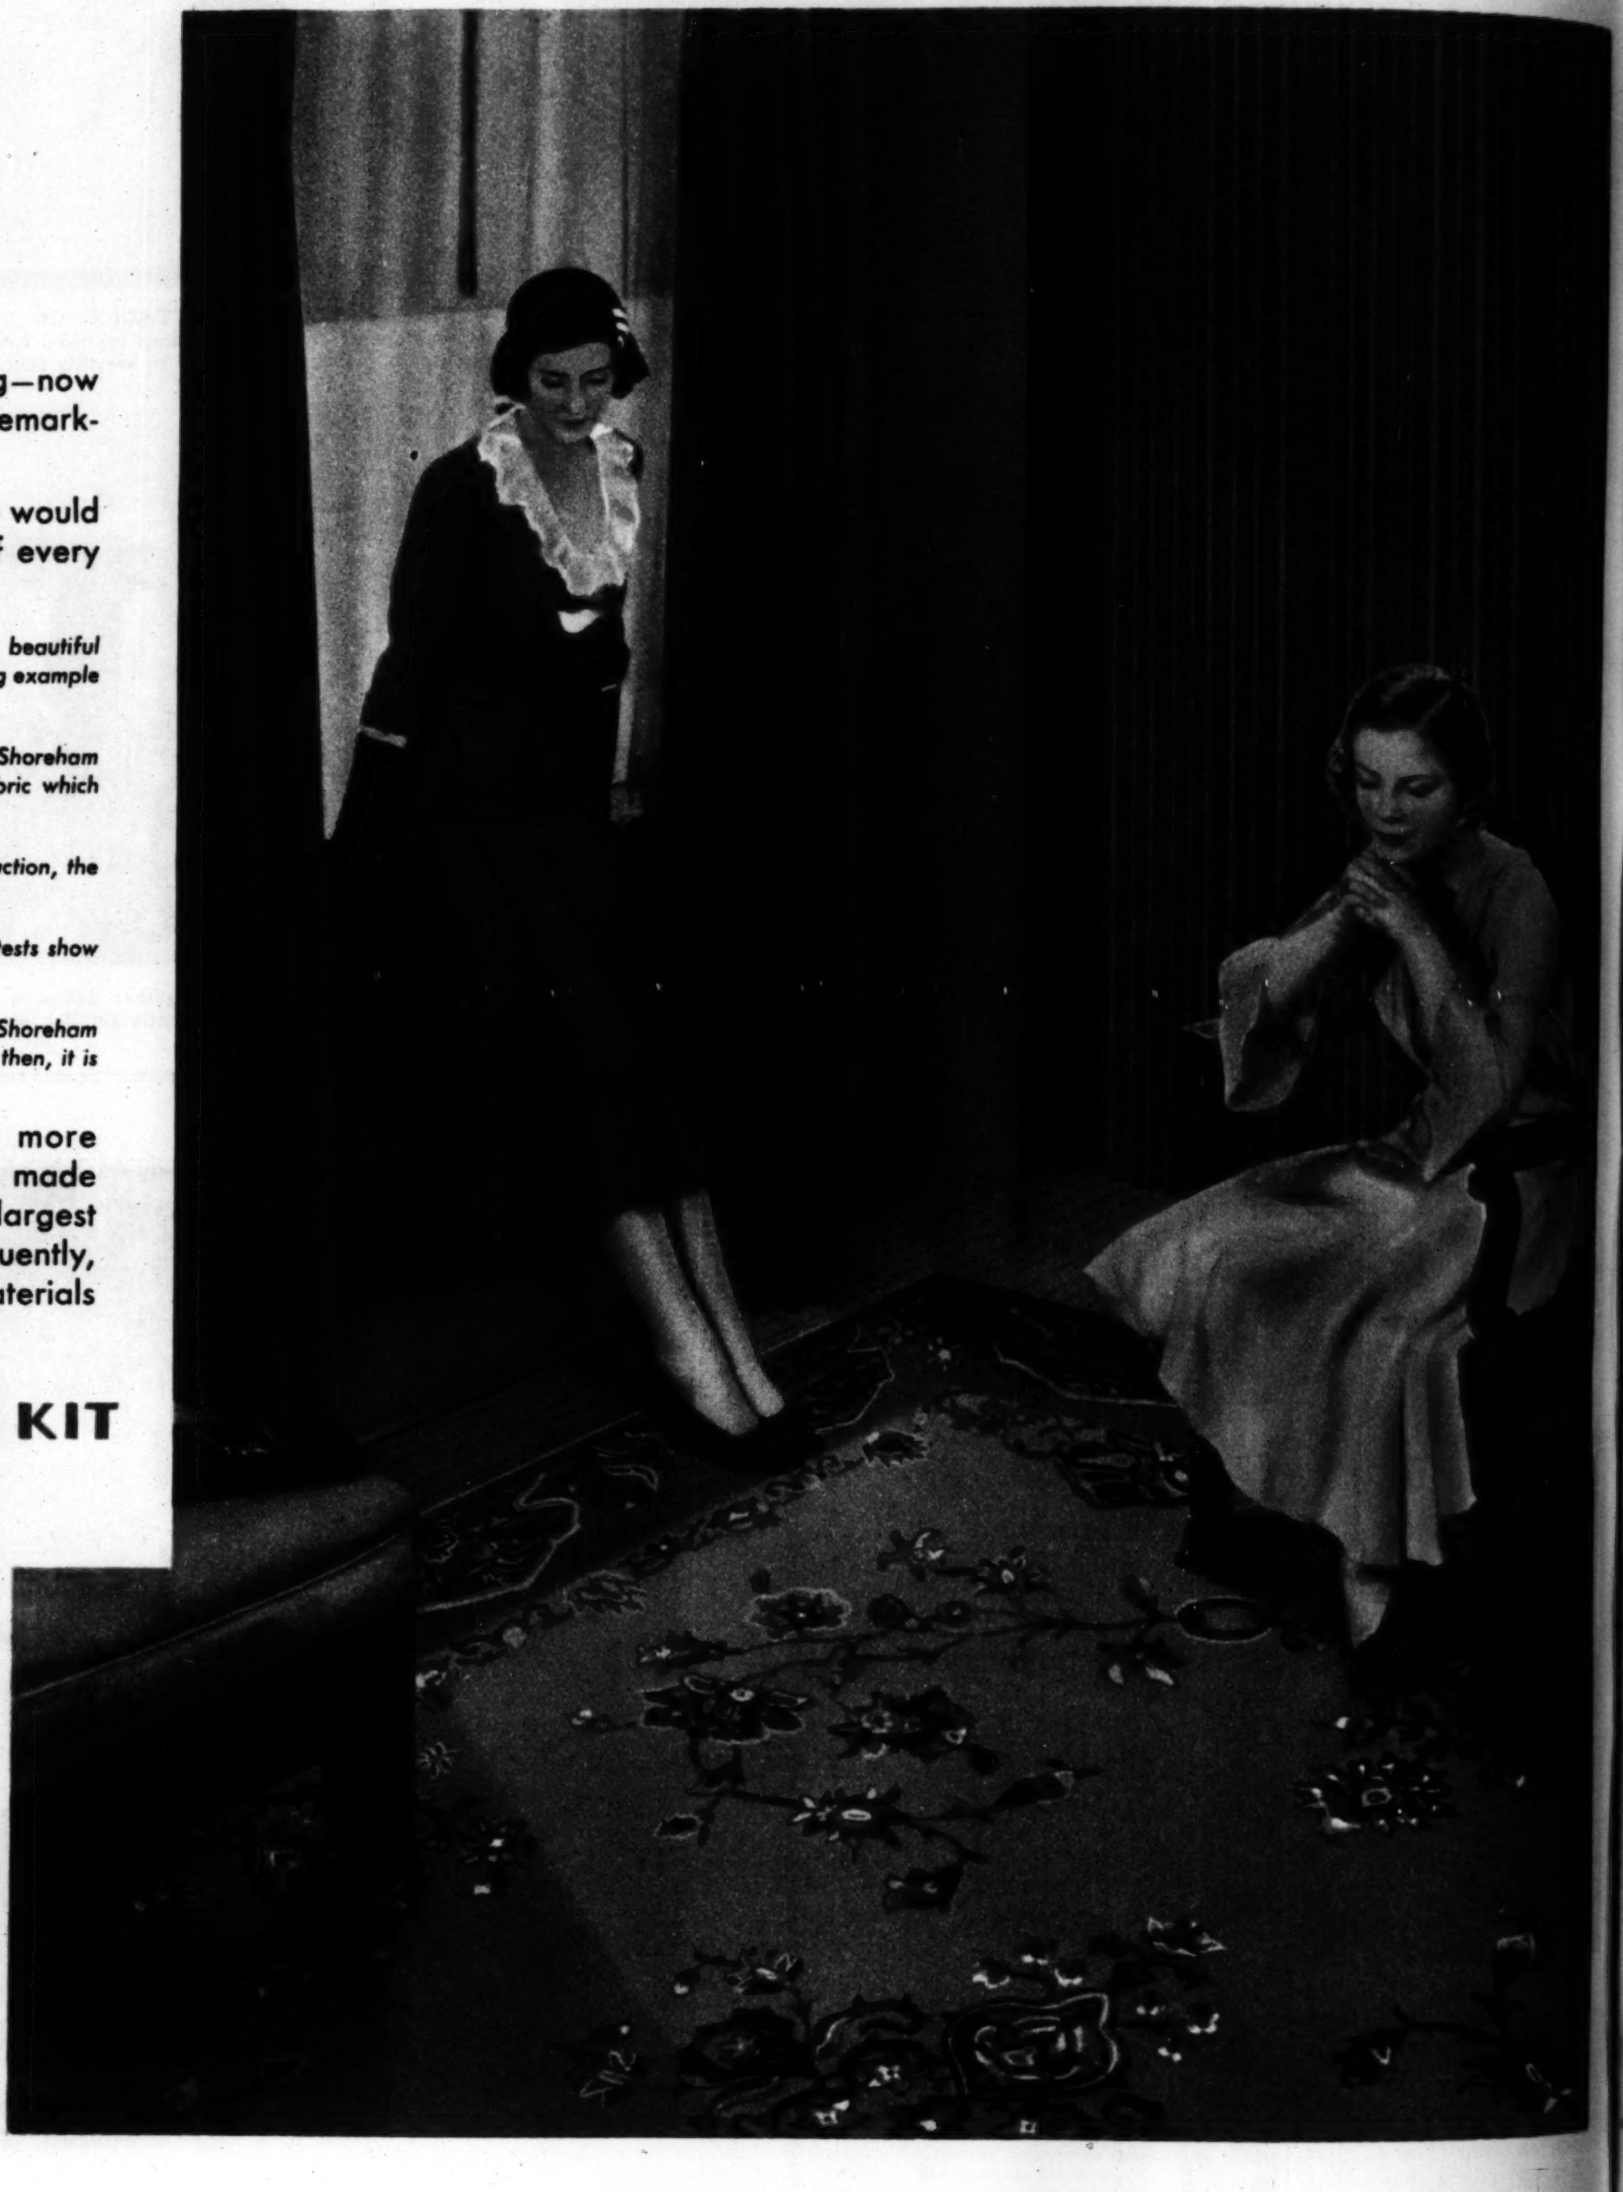
(9' x 12' size)



The rug is the Shoreham—Alexander Smith's new five-star rug—now introduced by Chicago department and furniture stores at the remarkable price of $49.50.

Ask yourself what it is you want in a rug. List all the points you would insist upon if you did not have to consider the cost. Now see if every one of your requirements isn't covered in the five stars below:

★ RICH COLORINGS. The pure, long staple wool from which the grounds of Shoreham Rugs are woven is dyed before it is spun. This imparts a superior finish to the fabric which greatly enriches the color effect.

★ DEEP, LUXURIOUS PILE. Made by the finest method of Axminster construction, the Shoreham has a deep, closely-woven pile, soft to the tread and sound-absorbing.

★ PRE-TESTED WEARING QUALITY. Scuffing, pounding and abrasion tests show that the Shoreham fabric will withstand a generation of household wear.

★ GUARANTEED SATISFACTION. The Alexander Smith trade-mark on the Shoreham Rug appeared on rugs your grandmother—or great grandmother bought. Now, as then, it is a guarantee of satisfaction and honest value to every purchaser.

When you compare the Shoreham, point by point, with more expensive rugs, you will wonder how such a fine rug can be made for only $49.50. The answer is simple. We are the world's largest manufacturers of Axminster, Velvet and Tapestry rugs. Consequently, we are able to effect huge savings in our purchases of raw materials and economies in production.

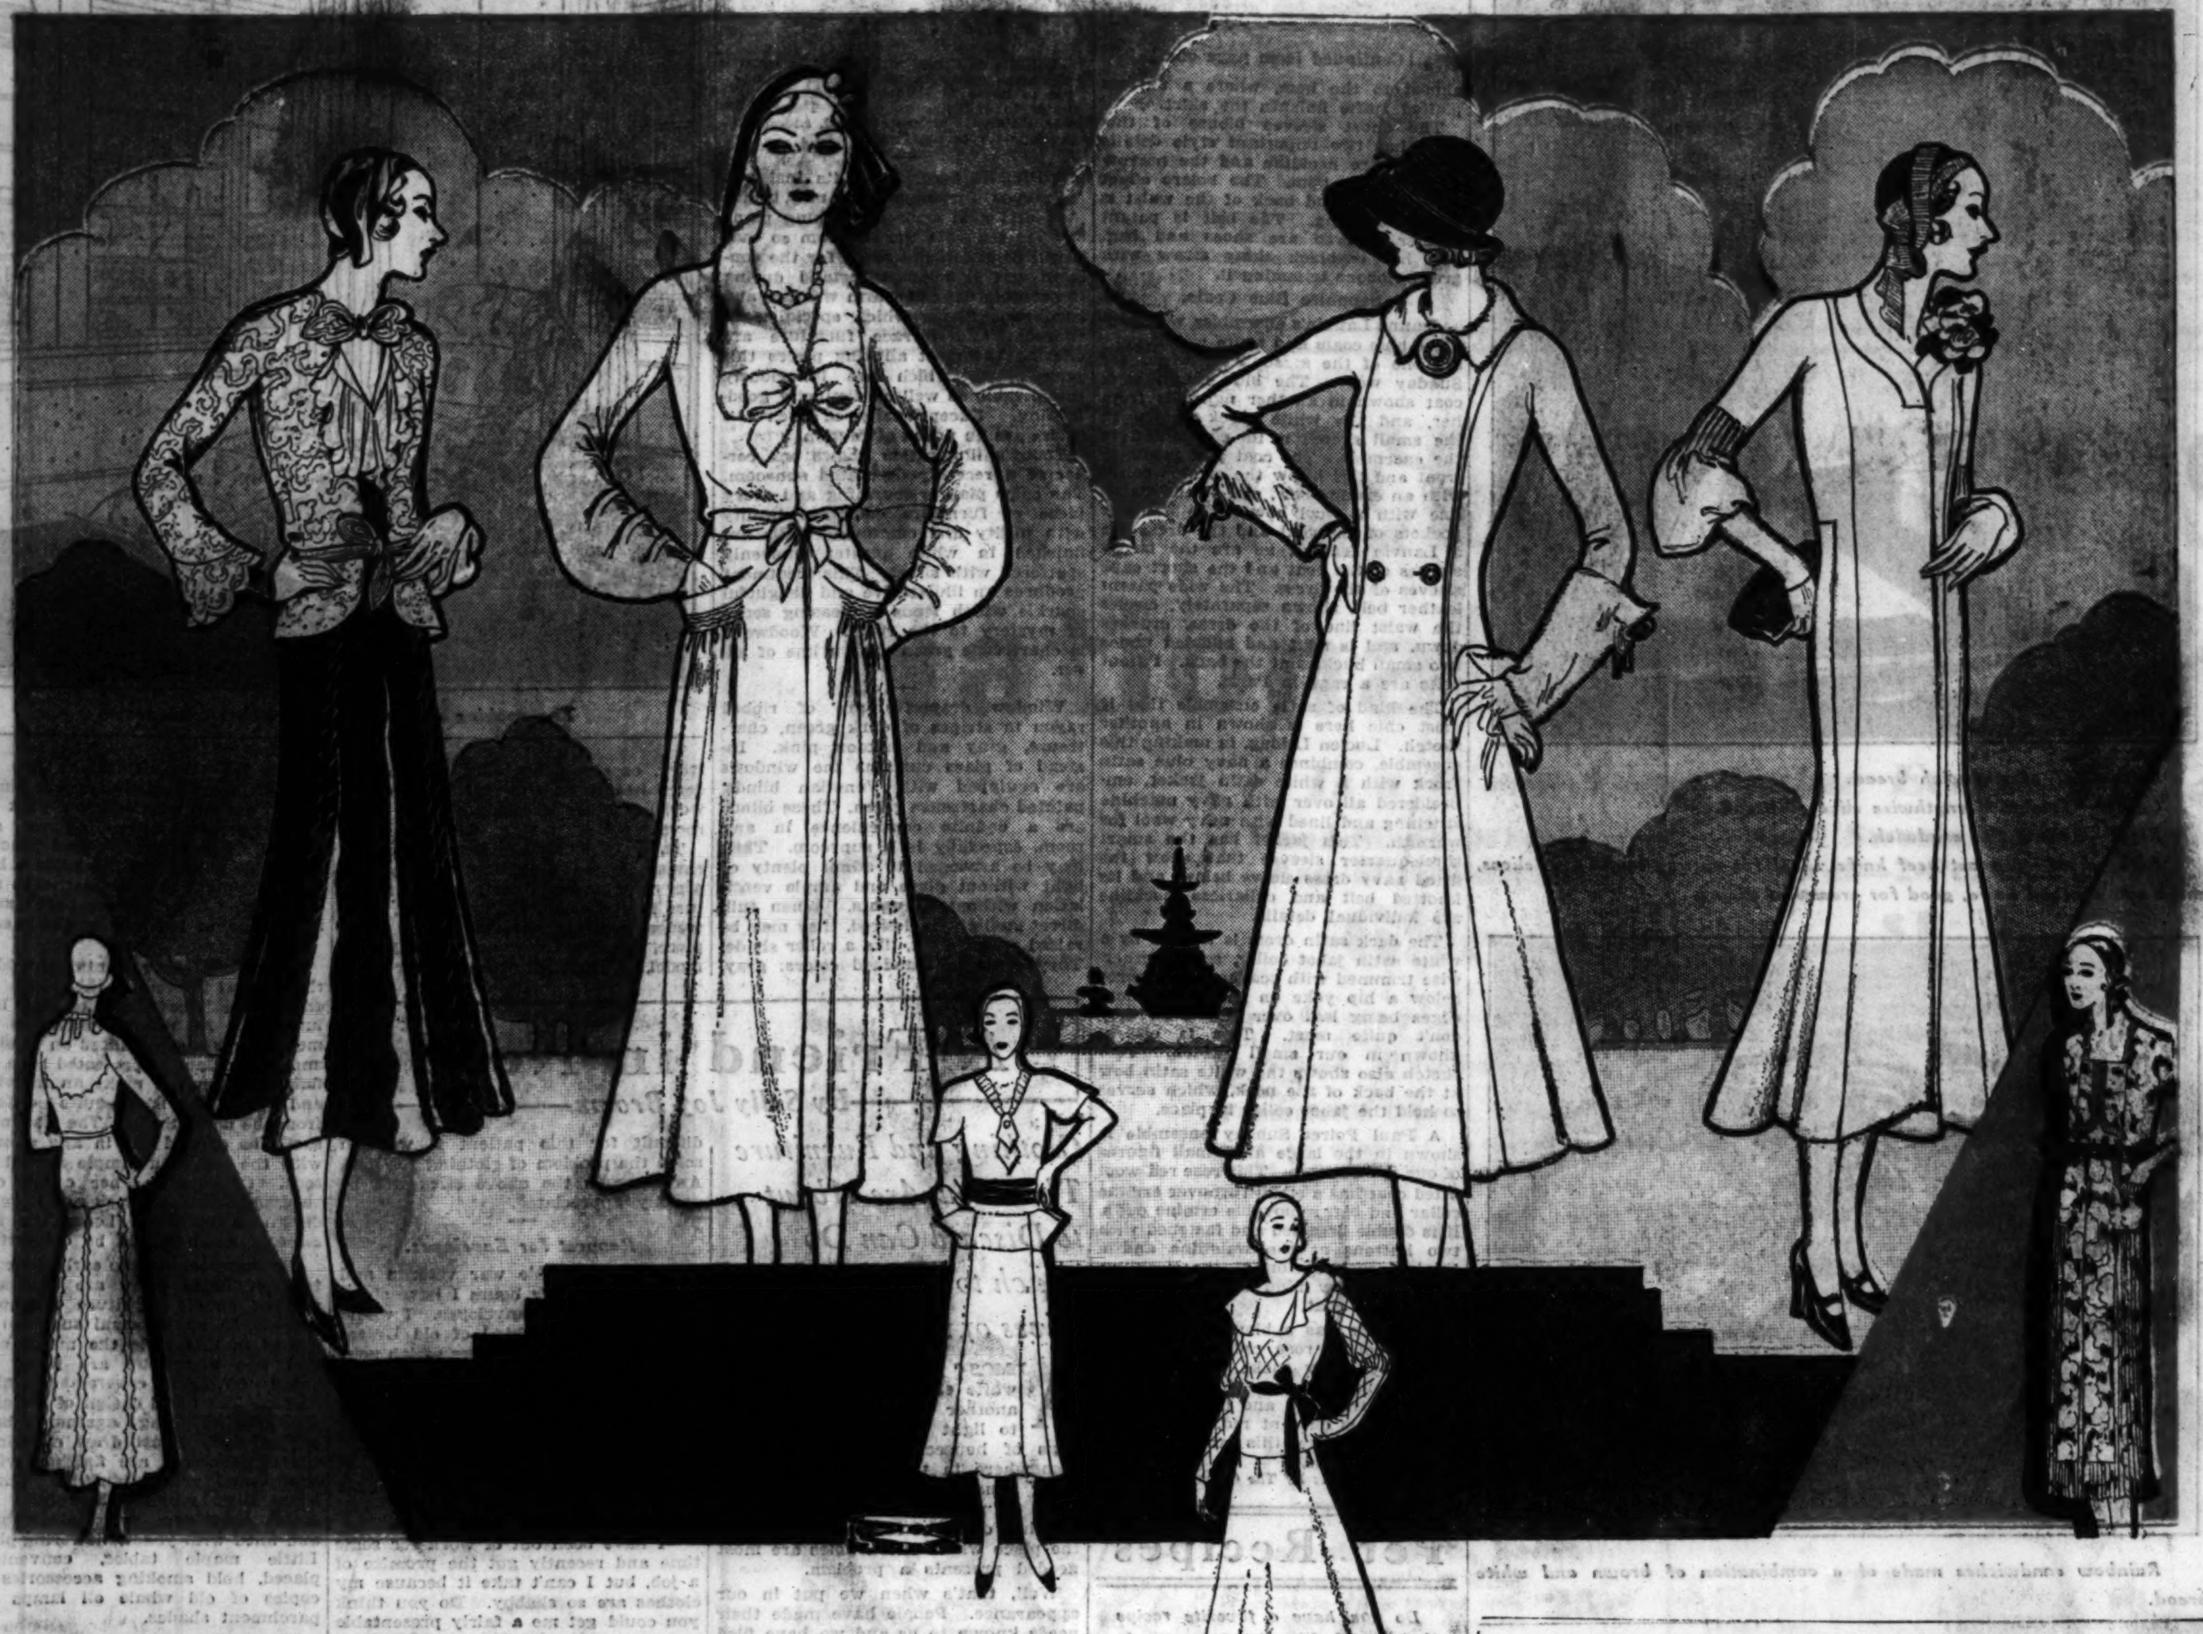
SUNDAY ENSEMBLES WITH A FRENCH ACCENT



Lucien Lelong signs this satin ensemble. The navy satin frock is trimmed with scalloped edges and has a white Abbé collar. The white satin jacket is stitched with navy blue.

This sapphire blue coat is tied together by an ermine and a cloth bow. The pockets and sleeves are special to Jeanne Lanvin, as are the same details on the white wool dress. Notice the split, two-buckle patent leather belt. Shown second.

Poiret fastens this rose-red wool coat with three buttons, and adds further interest in the detachable ermine cuffs and collar. The dress has a skirt and bertha to match the coat, while the blouse is made of wool net. The sash is dark red velvet ribbon. Sketched third.

This Patou ensemble shows the new way of the plain wool coat with the printed crêpe frock. The sleeves of this green coat are Patou's pet, and the low side flares are a feature. The narrow plaited ruffles on the frock are chic. Belt, flower, bag, and shoes are of patent leather. Shown last.

New Sandwich Will Delight Clever Hostess

Many Other Tempting Combinations Offered.

By Meta Given.

THE fan sandwich recipe which appears in this article is a brand new one as far as the form of the sandwich is concerned. The materials of which the sandwich is made are not new.

Which leads to the question, "Just what is meant by a new sandwich?" Any hostess can create new sandwiches if she has an experimental nature and an artistic sense. All that is necessary is to vary one or more of the ingredients. One may vary the kind of bread, the shape and size of the slices, and the method of putting the slices together. White, whole wheat, graham and rye bread, rolls, biscuits, cream puffs and pancakes are now used as sandwich breads. Only the white, graham, and rye, however, can be cut into thin slices and rolled. The texture of whole wheat is such that the slices break when rolled. It can be used, however, in making loaf and ribbon sandwiches.

Numerous variations of white bread are now in vogue such as nut, orange, limpa, cocoa, fruit, olive and cheese. All of these breads are delicious in flavor and offer unlimited possibilities in sandwich making.

Bread Variations.

Nut breads may be of the yeast or baking powder variety. Orange bread is a yeast bread flavored with orange juice. A little grated orange rind is often added to heighten the flavor. Eggs are used in the dough to intensify the orange color. This bread is delicious with cheese fillings. Limpa bread is a Swedish variety made of graham flour and flavored with grated orange rind and fennel seed. It is delightful made into just plain bread and butter folds. Olive bread is made by adding finely chopped green olives to plain graham yeast bread or baking powder nut bread. Olive bread blends especially well with meat fillings. Cheese bread, a yeast bread containing grated American or cream cheese, is especially good with fruit fillings. Cocoa bread is made from plain white bread yeast dough by adding cocoa and more sugar. Cocoa bread is excellent with nut fillings. All of these fancy breads call for the simpler fillings.

The butter used in sandwiches may be modified in numerous ways. Plain butter is the most common spread. Mayonnaise may be combined with butter, cream cheese with butter, or mayonnaise with cream cheese. Butter may be blended with different fruit juices or fruit pulps, with vegetables, fish, poultry or meat pastes, herbs and the perfume of flowers. The few recipes for flavored butters which follow should suggest other possibilities.

Cut in Fancy Shapes.

Cutting sandwiches into different geometrical shapes or using fancy cutters also provide interesting assortments. The rolled sandwiches may be made tiny and served whole. Or they may be made large and sliced and these slices may be left whole or cut in halves to obtain rainbows. The spread and filled bread may be laid up like layer cake for loaf, ribbon, or club sandwiches. Two or three layers of plain or toasted bread may be spread, filled, layed together, and then cut into such fancy shapes as hearts, triangles, fingers, diamonds, spades, clubs, and rings, cut with a doughnut cutter.

This method of cutting the fancy shapes out of square or oblong slices of bread that have been spread and filled is of course wasteful of butter and filling. A more economical way is to cut the shapes out of the bread. Such fillings as thin slices of roast meat and fowl and tomato and lettuce leaves may also be cut into fancy shapes. It is more difficult, however, to spread butter on the fancy cut sandwiches than on the ordinary slice of bread.

Garnishes Are Important.

Then the matter of garnishes is of great importance. Garnishing any food calls for all of the art and sense of fitness within us. The garnishing material should be firm and as crisp as possible to give the sandwich its greatest appetite appeal. Tomatoes make beautiful salad garnishes, sliced, cut in tulip shapes, or quartered. Only red ripe, solid thick fleshed tomatoes should be chosen. Tomato tulips are particularly attractive. To make these, leave the skin on the tomato and cut a thick lengthwise slice from the side. Cut the thin edge of the slice in points and the base off square to resemble a tulip. Lay this tulip skin side of tomato up and square side of tulip against the sandwich.

Pickles are also excellent garnishes. An interesting and pretty garnish is the octopus, which is made out of a thin slice of a good sized dill pickle. Beginning at the stem end of the pickle slice cut thin strips, leaving the strips intact at the blossom end of the pickle slice and braid these strips loosely together that they may simulate the legs of an octopus. Another pretty and edible garnish made of pickle is to slice a small or medium pickle into thin slices, leaving the slice intact at the round end, then lay the pickle on the sandwich plate and spread out the slices in a fan shape.

Olives, green, ripe, and stuffed, are always a pleasing garnish. They may be left whole, the stuffed ones may be sliced, and the ripe ones may be cut into fanciful shapes to decorate the tops of the sandwich. Beets are not desirable for garnishes, because they color bread in a disagreeable way.

Small fruits, such as berries, whole or sliced, white seeded grapes, candied or maraschino cherries, or the green and red colored grapes that are put up in bottles make attractive garnishes. Slices, half slices, halves, and quarters of hard cooked eggs are also pleasing decorations. Radish roses, hearts of celery, sprigs of parsley, watercress, and leaves from the hearts of lettuce are always beautiful.

Rainbow Sandwiches.

Trim the top crust off a sandwich loaf of bread. Then cut slices a little less than ¼ an inch thick. Remove the crusts so that the width of the

Modern Parenthood Furnishes Theme for Interesting Play

By Gladys Huntington Bevans.

THERE is a play running in New York just now that I hope many fathers and mothers in other parts of the country will have a chance to see. It is called "Tomorrow and Tomorrow." It was written by Philip Barry, who, besides making good plays at which you have a grand time, always has something interesting to say.

This last play, besides being excellent "theater," interested me especially because it dealt with something that I have never seen on the stage before. But first let me tell you a little about the story, in case you haven't seen it.

The action centers around a young wife and her husband, who are, like all Barry's people, the kind you'd enjoy having for friends—not heroes nor villains, neurotics nor criminals. They care for each other, and the wife, especially, has longed passionately for years to have a child. In order not to spoil the plot, I'll skip details and simply say briefly that there is an interval of about seven years covered by an intermission and we next see the pair as the father and mother of a son about 6 years old in whom their hearts are centered.

Here, then, is where you—if you have children and love them and are interested in them—will sit up and take notice. For at last we have a playwright who knows something about children and has put that something on the stage. Here, at last, are stage parents who are so convincing that we forget they are acting. Here, at last, we see in terrifically gripping but quiet drama a study of a child and a father and a mother—a delicate study that is sensitive and modern and fraught with love. Barry has children—and knows them.

In this act, then, the young mother and father are discussing the boy, who has been ill, after a fall from a horse, with an unaccountable fever. He is in his room, not well enough to go out, and the discussion turns chiefly on the boy's riding. The father is an enthusiastic horseman and wants his son to ride to hounds and jump and show a daring horsemanship. The boy doesn't, and because he stopped his horse before a jump his father is bitterly disappointed in him and thinks him cowardly.

The mother refutes this interpretation of his act. She tries to make the father see that the boy is not innately the hunter or the sportsman. He is courageous enough, but not in that way. He loves animals and does not want to hunt them. He is outdoors about the farm and woods constantly and is afraid of nothing. He can skate and swim, loves sports, and is strong and capable.

Father Can't Understand.

The father simply can't grasp the idea.

"And he can't even read, and his arithmetic is nil," suggests the father, though not in those words.

Then, on the heels of this, follows the mother's description of what their son can do, what he has learned that is not classroom knowledge—a fascinating description of an education that develops the boy in mind and body and feeling—an education that means so much more to him than the three R's, which will come in due time. As the wife talks, she also tries very gently to convey to her husband the fact that the boy senses his father's lack of sympathy with his interests and his temperament, that he dreads being urged on to deeds of daring in the saddle, and that he feels his father's contempt of his lack of prowess and is afraid of it. She ends by begging him not to have the boy ride so soon again after the accident from which he has been slow in recovering—to wait until he's older.

Of course, the answer to this is the sportsman's answer—that he must ride immediately after an accident or his nerve as a horseman will be broken. He ends his statement with the words that he fears his son is yellow.

Fear Causes Collapse.

A moment after the little chap, evidently having overheard, enters in his riding clothes—pale and with a bandage still on his head. He looks tense and dogged and ill as he tightens a strap on his ankle while he murmurs, "I'll show him—I'll show him," and dashes out into the garden.

His absence unnoted, his mother and father come back into the room and in a short time what you have expected to happen happens. The father is sent for by the groom, and when he returns he is carrying the unconscious boy in his arms. Another terrible fall! is their instant thought. But his stunned parents are told that he mounted and rode and jumped as he had never done before—then collapsed. There was no fall, nor is there any apparent injury.

The next scene opens several days later. The dialogue reveals that the boy can't be raised from a coma into which he has fallen and his condition is almost hopeless. He doesn't even recognize his mother. A noted physician, who has worked intensively with children, has been called and has been in attendance in the house for all this time, but has made no progress. There is, he says, absolutely no physiological reason for the boy's condition.

Finally he sends the father out on a pretext and expresses to the mother

CHIN CHIN

by Kathleen McLaughlin

YOU can't fool those south siders, much. Better than half the folks who mailed in answers to Mrs. Leonard Bridges' conundrum of last Sunday live in that section of town. And most of 'em recognized—or guessed—that Drexel boulevard was the street she described as "named after an aristocratic eastern family, patterned after the Champs Elysées," etc. Though a few did stub their pens and hazard some pretty wild ones, such as Belmont avenue and even the Midway plaisance. Anybody know the Midway family?

Right away Emily Martin demands that the class answer another. To-wit: "Which street was named for a soldier killed at Fort Dearborn, who was so brave the Indians divided his heart among them, believing it would make them great warriors? Afterwards it became such an infamous neighborhood merchants tried to have the name of the gallant hero removed from it, but the move was defeated and the street cleaned up instead."

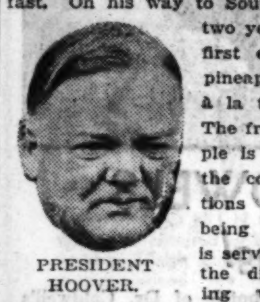
When President Hoover talked too fast. On his way to South America two years ago he first encountered pineapple served à la the tropics. The fresh pineapple is broken off the core in sections instead of being sliced, and is served in bowls, the diners picking up each wedge of the fruit and gedunking it in suger before eating. It is a noted delicacy, but the then President Elect surveyed the process with open disfavor.



PRESIDENT HOOVER.

"Hmmph! That's no way to eat pineapple," he said to the group around the table. "I won't have any."

"But you haven't even tried it," protested Mrs. Hoover, "and it's marvelous." The rest chimed in, and Mr. Hoover was persuaded to sample his dish. He ate in silence.

Presently it was observed that not only had the last scrap of his pineapple vanished, but that he was casting longing eyes at the neglected serving of the officer beside him. Recognizing that the President Elect wanted more and hated to ask for it, the officer stealthily proffered his own dish. Whereupon Mr. Hoover refused, but sheepishly ordered a second helping for himself.

Tsk! Tsk! Tsk! Last week we meant to show you a picture of that enchanting, and energetic little person, Mrs. Mary B. Breckenridge, founder of the Frontier Nursing service in the Kentucky mountains. Instead, the likness of her New York City cousin, Miss Mary Marion Breckenridge, bobbed up off the presses. We hope it's right this time.

MRS. BRECKENRIDGE.

Incidentally it was Mary Marvin Breckenridge who deserted her debutante activities in Gotham to journey into the mountains and film, personally, the moving picture "The Forgotten Frontier," which has been shown around Chicago recently. She devoted a year to acquiring the necessary knowledge and technique. In addition, she is one of several expert horsewomen among New York society buds who spend some time each year in the hill towns acting as couriers to parties of visitors for weeks at a time.

Back in the days when former United States Senator Jim Reed was booming Al Smith for president, he greeted visitors to his Atlantic hotel room with a handshake and an invitation to "have a cigar." The proffered box contained panetelas bearing the campaign slogan, "All for Al and Al for All." And our most consistent contributor, Shamus O'Slattery, admits to being only one of several Chicagoans who still cherish the butts of those smokes.

The county building was holding its sides last week. Confidentially, here's what happened: The previous Saturday Thomas D. Nash, attorney for County Treasurer Joseph B. Finesse Is Large Ingredient in Putting on the New Make-Up

By Antoinette Donnelly.

THE makeup vogue of the moment, if you would be in on the last word, is to concentrate on eyes and lips and let the cheeks go begging a bit. Not that it's a wise vogue for all women—but what vogue is, my sisters? If your cheek has a washed out look, don't scorn that little reddy helper that's done right by you in seasons past, no matter what the new voguers say or do.

After all, this new vogue stuff has to be taken with a dash of good sense combined with just enough humor to see a body safely through a crucial style. Take those bonnets the new vogue would have perched on the spine of one of our back brain cells. Take 'em, I says—and I for one don't care where you take 'em to. Only don't expect me to try to locate the rear cell for their perching.

Ditto, if I meet a washed out day, nobody's going to order me to let my cheek go forth blazoning the fact to a hard, cruel world. Not while there's a blush left in the old rouge pot.

Always we 'uns who've seen a few tough springs and falls must try to remember that new vogues are either started by glamorously fresh young things or designed for them. Again, I'm thinking of those bonnets that do wicked things to faces that have seen, lived, and suffered.

But, to get back to makeup. Anyway, there's no law agin us trying out the lip and eye concentration. You may find it swell. If you have beautifully cared for, young skin, you no doubt will be able to expose a nude cheek. Or, again, you may pat on your foundation cream on the cheek, choose a devastating powder tone to brush it over with, and with lips bright and eyes shadowed be a most stunning version of a hitherto cheek-redded damsel. As I say, we might just as well try everything—for you never can tell just how we'll turn out.

Ivory Powders.

It's no news to you now, of course, that the tans acquired with powders and rouges and sun tan lotions have completely lost favor in popular fancy. The smooth, golden tone that only a sun, a wind, and a seaside beach imparts is all that remains in favor of a much pursued recent vogue. Instead of the imitation Palm Beach bronze, gold or copper, makeup swings back to match the feminine mode in dress and perilously near the old fashioned pink and white complexion. But not quite.

There's no sale revival on white powder, except as a powder to blend with other tones. But even here it's ivory rather than white that gets invited to most blending parties. These ivory powders appear in several shades of ivoriness. And are perfect for use on certain camellia skinned beauties who can well afford to concentrate on eyes and lips for additional stunning effect.

Sometimes this ivory powder is blended with rose, sometimes with lavender, or orchid, as it is called more frequently now, and sometimes with pink. For a light touch of color in ivory, it may be mixed with what is known as faint blush pink.

Frank Lipsticks.

We hear more about the "naturalism" movement in lip tinting than we see in practice. Nothing about a lady's makeup conforms as little to her natural coloring as is seen in her lip treatment. So, the rule here might just as well be adopted to be frank and aboveboard with lipstick coloring, but get it a good shade and concentrate on a fine lip shaping and a smooth, even job.

Lola Montez, a siren of the eighties, wrote this, which may amuse you, too: "There is no man who does not shrink back in disgust from the idea of kissing a pair of painted lips." Our boys must either be made of braver stuff than those of Lola's day or the lip painting is better. Anyway, from reports, shrinking back in disgust just isn't one of our current males' popular pastimes.

So there's no good reason for trying to conceal the lipstick application. Only be careful about that daytime color chosen. Some of the purplish reds and tangerine shades are just too bad when they get on the wrong pair of lips. Brave as our boys are, there is a limit to testing their bravery. And a vitally important thing in lipstick choosing is the color effect on the teeth. It can be awfully yellowing to them, you know. So don't choose your lipstick with your mouth shut.

Eye makeup is growing apace and chiefly in [illegible]. Those bluish, greenish, and silvery gray shadow pastes are lovely worn with the right pair of eyes. And the trick of shading the lashes, too, with the blue of the lid paste may be a most beguiling one—for evening wear only, however. It's most effective on the platinum blond girl, sprung into recent favor. She, chiefly, is requested to offer a cheek to the world that holds no more coloring than a delicate blush.

Eyes Require Finesse.

I guess blonds of all types require the firmest hand of makeup restraint or their blond cause is lost. To be a fetching blond [even with a blond's wholesale reputation for fetchingness] the appeal should always be a soft, subtle, moonlight-night sort of one, if you know what I mean. Yet blonds too frequently misjudge the value of their [to men] contrasting femininity and in order to be noticed, or to be more striking, as they may put it or feel it, go in heavily for cheek rouge and eyebrow marking, eyelid shadowing, and eyelash tinting.

The bluish, greenish, and grayish eye pastes help reduce the number of blond offenders, and those clever ones who refuse a dark brown or black pencil and mascara brush reduce the number of offenders just that much more. The bleached and tinted blonds have the most difficulty, apparently, in keeping the eye attuned to nice makeup shades.

The accelerated hair coloring casts a different tint over the skin and in order to rectify this the temptation is to pile on more and more rouge, getting so often a heavy, painty look. The eye probably deceives here, as the nose does with perfume, sometimes. Anyway, it's just a little tip that should be acted on to prevent any look of commonness, or cheapness.

Paris Snapshots

Vionnet's long evening coats, made variously of crêpe marocain, crêpe georgette or chiffon, are the smartest evening wraps of the summer season. They're furless.

The newest Paris hat is close fitting, has a narrow, turned-up brim, and this descends in a triangular point over the forehead to the right of the eyebrow, leaving the left half of the brow nude. Agnès created it.

There's an Argentine revue in Paris that is setting a new slipper style. The high heeled pump à la Argentine has bands from the sides that meet over the instep and tie in a floppy bow, like an artist's necktie.

Evening handkerchiefs of chiffon are getting bigger and bigger. The newest ones are printed with dollar-size polka dots and were introduced by Vionnet.

Costume necklaces this spring run to cable-cord size and proportions. They're usually made of small porcelain beads in pastel colors. Vionnet makes hers of long beads like tiny match sticks, with a round bead in contrasting color for the head. These are sewed like porcupine quills to a cord.

By Bettina Bedwell.

PARIS.—[Special.]—Sunday chic is getting a lot of concentrated attention from the style source. Paris is just some place to go away from on the first day of every week in spring. Everybody puts on the best the clothes closet offers for daytime and hies off, if it's no farther than the so-called gates of Paris, to Longchamps and Auteuil, where races are giving all comers a chance to lose money and sport chic clothes.

Over the landscape of a Sunday there hangs a blue haze, shot through with spots of vivid red, green or yellow, for it's a blue springtime, girls, and blue in all its tones is the color the majority of smart racegoers prefer. They jazz it up with yellow, red and other gay but not gaudy tones, or they purify it with white details.

After blue comes green as the smart choice for the Sunday ensemble, and you wear whatever shade of nature's vernal symphony you and your complexion prefer. Vionnet's lovely currant red velveteen coats, worn with light beige or rose frocks, are distinguished color contrasts to the usual. Black and white holds its own for the Lord's day ensemble. Some of the smartest ensembles are in this classic combination. Wine brown with light red, with white and with yellow or pastel blue is a costume color scheme proved chic by the fashionable wearing thereof.

Long Coats Are Smart.

The number of long coats worn with one piece dresses around about Paris this spring is astonishing, considering the supreme importance given to the jacket and dress ensemble at the February fashion shows. Lots of jacket ensembles are seen wherever fashion gathers, but the long coat is going strong just the same. Ensemble coats seen on French soil are fitted or straight, belted or streamline, crossed in front, or barely meeting. They wear most of their novelty on their sleeves. Cape sleeves, long and short, are beginning to appear, and will doubtless be more numerous when the weather becomes gentler, as the French so charmingly put it. At the present time sleeves that puff a bit at, above or below the elbows are adorning heaps of smart coats. Straight sleeves have important cuffs to make them different, and three-quarter length sleeves are already being extensively worn. By the way, black, brown, white or navy blue gloves in six, eight, ten and twelve button lengths wrinkle along the lower arm whether sleeves are long or short.

Most of the ensemble coats that are Paris indorsed are of plain material, but printed frocks are out early when the frost hasn't completely gotten out of the soil, and many Sunday ensembles have checked, striped, dotted, flowered, or otherwise printed silk dresses. Chanel's printed chiffon frocks with plain wool coats are out at the races every Sunday. Patou's printed georgette dresses with plain wool coats are just as numerous.

Dark frocks with pale coats and pale or white frocks with dark coats or jackets are right in style in these parts. Satin frocks with jackets or coats of self-material or wool are real runners. The veil thin wool dress is quite as fashionable for a Sunday in spring as anything in silk, and many ladies of undeniable distinction wear it. Some dresses match their coats and others contrast. There's no rule about this at all. Suit yourself on the color question.

The Fur Scarf Again.

The collarless coat being fashion's darling, fur scarfs are rampant. Fox scarfs in silver or red variants of this luxury animal are much worn. Vionnet's astrakhan ascot scarfs and those of velveteen are worn by great ladies. Pony and broadtail scarfs are chic also. Many fashionables, in love with the trim neckline of the collarless coat, decorate it only with a flower and if they shiver it's nobody's business.

Patou puts big patent leather flowers on the shoulders of many of his collarless coats, like the black and white one shown in our last sketch. Nothing else is supposed to be worn at the coat neckline. Observe the silhouette of this bright green ribbed wool coat. It is Patou's new line, flared from above the knees to the hem at the sides only, and with sleeves having a superimposed puff at the elbows, topped by tucks.

This coat, worn with the printed triple georgette frock, shown in the small figure, makes an ultra smart Sunday ensemble much worn around Paris. The dress has green and beige flowers on a black ground, and, like the coat, is flared at the sides only, this being done by fine plaits from the hip yoke. The yoke extends in double panels down the front and back slice is perfectly uniform. The trimmed slice should be about 3½ or 3¾ inches wide, and 19 or 20 inches long. Spread the entire slice with butter or with butter and mayonnaise. Spread one-third of the slice with a mixture of grated carrots, another third with finely chopped cabbage mixed with sour cream dressing and the last third with a pounded fish or chicken salad mixture. Prepare a similar slice of graham bread, but reverse the position of the vegetable and meat fillings. Lay this graham slice on the white slice of bread. Carefully roll these double slices up, keeping the roll tight. Wrap in a damp cloth until ready for use.

When ready to serve, slice the rolls as you would a jelly roll. This roll is about 3½ inches in diameter. Cut these circular slices into halves and arrange these semi-circular slices overlapping each other. The effect is that of the rainbow. If care is used in putting on the fillings the color effect is beautiful and the sandwiches are as delicious as they appear.

Fan Sandwiches.

This brand new recipe for fan sandwiches has never been published before. The fans are made of three triangular slices of bread of different sizes. The largest triangle is naturally the base of the sandwich; it should not be larger than four inches one way and three inches the other. The triangles can be made by cutting oblong slices of bread [3x4 inches] diagonally across.

A good filling for the large buttered or mayonnaised triangles of bread is caviar. The next triangle should be smaller, not larger than 3x3 inches. This triangle may be spread with finely chopped green onions or chives mixed with sour cream dressing. The top triangle should be about 1½x2½ inches. A good filling for the top triangle is chopped yolk of hard cooked eggs mixed with just enough mayonnaise to hold it together. Lay these three triangles together, keeping two sides of the triangles plumb. In this way there is an effect of a fan spread out with a band of caviar showing along one edge of the bottom triangle, a band of green vegetable on the second, and a triangle of yellow egg yolks in full view on top. This sandwich is attractively colored and the flavor combines well with egg yolks.

Another combination for these fan sandwiches follows: On the large bottom triangle spread red currant jelly; on the second, cream cheese, and on the last, cream cheese mixed with finely chopped green maraschino cherries or green colored grapes that are put up in bottles for decorating desserts, sandwiches, and salads.

Still another combination is cream cheese for the bottom triangle, chopped nuts for the second and finely chopped olives for the top.

Still another is green capers chopped fine and mixed with mayonnaise for the first, grated carrot for the second, and finely chopped cabbage for the last layer. This last one is a health [brown and white bread] sandwich because the filling is entirely of vegetables. A sweet sandwich made in this fan shape may use red currant jelly for the bottom triangle, cheese rarebit for the second, and apple butter for the top triangle.

Blinis.

This is one of Mr. Arnold Shircliffe's favorites. They require fine buckwheat cakes just off the griddle with a delicate, spongy texture, and cakes with fine flavor are the only kind with which to make blinis. After making cakes, spread one hot cake quickly with caviar, then spread just a little thick, sour cream over caviar. This cream should be so thick that it is almost hard. Whipping cream that is allowed to sour serves the purpose. This is an unusual open sandwich canape and is sure to appeal to those who have a sophisticated taste for caviar. Blinis should be about the size of a silver dollar and made the last minute. An ideal way to serve caviar and blinis is from a tea table. Arrange a can of imported caviar in a large bowl, surrounded by finely crushed ice, bowl to be placed on a silver tray, underlined with doily or napkin, and around bowl on tray arrange a glass dish or nappy of sour cream, one of chopped yolks of hard boiled eggs, one of finely chopped whites, and one of finely chopped onions. The blinis can be kept warm in a chafing dish. The hostess can serve the blinis and guests help themselves to caviar, cream, etc., as they desire. These items are to be served and eaten while standing, and if possible in a separate room, just before dinner. It is sort of an hors d'œuvre, shoeing horn, comer on, an appetizing introduction to the rest of the show, and when served with its equal in the form of a liquid these two become real headliners.

Spanish Sandwiches.

Cut white bread about ⅜ inch thick. Toast, trim off the crusts, and spread lightly with butter. Lay sardines that have been skinned and boned on the toast, then sprinkle finely chopped green olives and a teaspoon of lemon juice over the sardines. Add a lettuce leaf that fits the sandwich and cover with another slice of buttered toast. Serve on a lettuce leaf at once.

Fried Tomato Toast Sandwiches.

Dip slices of ripe tomato into beaten egg and fry to a golden brown in hot butter. Sprinkle lightly with salt and pepper. Have thin slices of white bread toasted and lightly spread with a mixture of butter and cream cheese and lay on slices of tomato. Sprinkle tomato with finely chopped green peppers. Cover with a lettuce leaf and another slice of toast spread with butter. Trim off the crusts neatly with a very sharp knife, cut diagonally to form triangles, and serve at once with a stuffed olive.

Fried Green Pepper Sandwiches.

Remove seeds from a large green pepper and cut into thin rings. Dip the pepper rings into beaten eggs and fry to a golden brown in either butter or olive oil. Remove from fat and drain on absorbent paper and sprinkle lightly with salt. Place between slices of buttered whole wheat bread or toasted white bread. Trim crusts off neatly, cut diagonally. Garnish with a radish rose and serve at once.

Chicken Club Sandwiches.

For each sandwich toast three thin slices of white bread. Spread lightly with butter. On slice No. 1 place a crisp lettuce leaf that has been spread with mayonnaise dressing or dipped in French dressing. On this place slices from the breast of cold roast chicken. Cover this with slice of toast No. 2. On this place slices of crisp broiled bacon and on the bacon thin slices of ripe tomato. Spread very lightly with mayonnaise and cover with slice of toast No. 3. Press firmly together and trim off the crusts neatly with a sharp knife. Cut diagonally, garnish the top with slices of dill pickle and a lilied radish.

Cream Cheese and Prune Sandwiches.

Two thin slices of white bread (¼ of an inch) are required for each sandwich. Toast and spread with cream cheese. On top of the cheese spread prunes that have been cooked, sweetened, and chopped fine. Over the prunes spread currant jelly (the entire thickness of the filling should not be thicker than ¼ of an inch). Cover with another slice of toast, trim off crusts, and cut the sandwich in three strips. Garnish each strip with a strip of candied orange peel. Serve at once, because these sandwiches are excellent while they are hot, but have nothing to recommend them when they are cold.

Fancy Fruit Flavored Butters.

[Spreads for Fancy Tea Sandwiches.]

Put ¼ of a pound of butter in a small mixing bowl and let stand at kitchen temperature until the butter softens. Then cream until it is smooth and will spread like mayonnaise. Place the mixing bowl containing the butter in chipped ice and add 1 tablespoon of orange juice, 1 teaspoon of lemon juice and 1½ teaspoons powdered sugar. Stir until well blended and all the moisture has been incorporated in the butter. One-half teaspoon of grated orange peel may be added if a pronounced orange flavor is desired. Any other fruit juice may be incorporated in butter by this method. Raspberry juice is especially good. The pulp and juice of ripe fine flavored strawberries, as well as prunes combined with butter, makes an excellent spread, too. These fruit flavored butters soften more rapidly than ordinary butter, so they must be kept in the refrigerator or in a bowl surrounded by chipped ice until ready for use. They may be spread on the bread an hour or so before time for serving, but the quicker that they are served the better.

Flower Scented Butters.

Let the butter soften at room temperature and cream until plastic and smooth. Place a layer of rose petals, violets, nasturtiums or clover (either white or red) in the bottom of a crock or refrigerator dish. Cover with perforated wax paper and on this place the butter. Cover with another piece of perforated wax paper, place more petals on top of the paper. Leave an air space all around the butter so that the perfume of the flowers may have a chance to be absorbed. Cover the dish tightly and set in the icebox for several hours. Spread scented butter on fancy tea sandwiches, garnish with flowers of the same kind that have been used to scent the butter and serve at once. Remember that this perfume volatilizes rapidly in open air.

Vegetable Butters.

Watercress, the tender central leaves of raw spinach, endive, and tender dandelions, lettuce, chives, mint, and parsley may be finely chopped and worked into creamed butter. All of these vegetable butters are improved with the addition of a little lemon juice. The endive and dandelion give a slightly bitter taste that is very pleasing to some. This bitterness may be toned down to please all if lettuce is combined with the endive and dandelion in equal portions. These butters make excellent spreads for fancy sandwiches, but care should be taken when using these vegetable butters in combination with other fillings for it is easy to obtain a clash in flavors that is not pleasing. Desirable, harmonious flavors will result if one uses the proper combinations. For example, the chives butter goes well with a cottage cheese and ground nut filling. The mint butter is appropriate with a lamb filling. The parsley will go well with any meat filling. The cress is also good with meat and tomato with cucumber. The spinach and dandelion combine with lettuce and mayonnaise. A little experimentation will enable any housewife to figure out many fillings individual in character.

Taxpayers not to pay their tax bills at present.

Mr. McDonough held firm against all argument. So in the cool, gray dawn, the matter still unsettled, the group freshened up a bit, had breakfast and went to church. As the service proceeded and the sermon was reached, the Chicago nabobs were considerably startled to hear the priest launch a quotation credited to Matthew, as follows:

"He was a tax gatherer, a most contemptible creature——"

Outside the church a little later Mr. McDonough faced his colleagues with fresh resolution and the ultimatum: "That settles it. I'm not issuing any statement."

What Chicago young man, when he heard that Mayor Jimmy Walker buys his suits thirty at a time on an annual order, wrote the New York Beau Brummel plaintively suggesting that he could use a few of the castoffs, and still waits for a reply?

Chicago hotel managers looked askance at Bob Hickey, says Bob, when the Sells-Floto man called to request that they permit the European star, called "The Great Peters," to practice his feat from the top floor of one of the hostelries. The stunt consists in Peters leaping some 75 feet with his neck in a hangman's noose, and the rope dangling from a point above. It sounded incredible to the hotel landlords, who shook their heads when requested to lend a room and a window.

"Heck, no," exclaimed the most vehement. "That's been tried here before—and it didn't work."

Maybe it's worthy of note that the theater has contributed another to the collection of cosmetic jars and bottles on milady's dressing table. The latest beauty aid is a faintly scented paste similar to cold cream, which effectually disguises scars and other facial blemishes.

The short sleeved blouse of this dress has two important style details—its square neckline and the narrow plaited ruffle trim. The bolero effect at the front and back of the waist is also interesting. The belt is patent leather and so are shoes and bag. The hat is black shiny straw with green ribbons trimming it.

Sapphire Blue Coats.

Jeanne Lanvin's ensembles with sapphire blue coats and white wool frocks are one of the season's successes for Sunday wear. The blue rough wool coat shown in another figure is from her, and the white frock shown in the small sketch is its companion to the ensemble. The coat just meets in front and ties below the ermine collar with an ermine bow, and at the waistline with a wool bow. The hanging pockets of the coat and the dress are a Lanvin feature, as are the baggy sleeves of the coat and the short cape sleeves of the dress. The wide patent leather belt, shown separately, circles the waist line of the dress, crushes down, and is split and buckled under two small buckles at the back. Patent belts are a rage in Paris.

The kind of satin ensemble that is most chic here is shown in another sketch. Lucien Lelong, in making this ensemble, combines a navy blue satin frock with a white satin jacket, embroidered all over with navy machine stitching and lined with navy wool for warmth. This jacket has the smart three-quarter sleeves that show the fitted navy dress sleeve below, and its knotted belt and collarless neckline are individual details.

A Paul Poiret Sunday ensemble is shown in the large and small figures of our third sketch. This rose red wool fitted coat has a small turnover ermine collar and big, removable ermine cuffs. It is double breasted and fastened with two buttons at the waistline and a single larger button at the neckline. This is a new kind of redingote, or coachman's coat.

The dress has a blouse of diamond mesh wool in rose red, with sleeves puffed by elbow tucks. The tied on bertha collar and the skirt are of wool to match the coat, and the velvet ribbon girdle is currant red. Velvet ribbon girdles like this are much in fashion in Paris.

Decorating the Sun Room

—By WillElla de Campi—

Gay Colors, Airy Draperies and Venetian Blinds Can Bring Spring Into the House.

WillElla de Campi will be glad to assist the home maker in any problem pertaining to home furnishings. Address your letter to WillElla de Campi, The Tribune, Chicago. Inclose stamped, addressed envelope for personal reply.

SPRING fever, with its insistent urge for something new, bright and gay, finds us making plans to renovate the sunroom so that it will be cheerfully ready for the constant use it must withstand during the coming days of warm weather and sunshine. Shops which specialize in sunroom and terrace furniture are offering the most alluring pieces this year—pieces which are luxuriously comfortable as well as distinctly good-looking. Exceptionally moderate prices are an added attraction.

Today's illustration shows one corner of a recently decorated sunroom. The color plan is charming and every piece of furniture combines beauty with utility and comfort. Walls are finished in white plaster unevenly spattered with silver. This treatment produces an illustrative and delightful sparkle which lends a pleasing sense of mystery to the room. Woodwork is chartreuse green with a line of silver.

Window draperies are of ribbed rayon in stripes of dark green, chartreuse, gray and salmon pink. Instead of glass curtains the windows are equipped with Venetian blinds, painted chartreuse green. These blinds are a definite convenience in any room, especially in a sunroom. They may be arranged to admit plenty of light without glare and ample ventilation without draughts. When full, direct sunlight is desired, they may be raised out of sight, like a roller shade. They come in standard colors: gray, ivory, or green, but they may be ordered in any tone to match the woodwork or other decorative notes in a room.

The luxuriously comfortable rocking chaise longue illustrated is made of peel cane, as are other pieces of furniture in the room. It is painted chartreuse, with touches of black. This piece, copied from an old Chinese model, is perfectly balanced for comfort and safety. Cushions are covered with sunfast linen, showing a flower design with salmon pink and green predominating on a gray ground. The attractive and practical iron table with glass top holds a luxuriant ivy plant in an underneath ring, leaving the top clear for books, smoking things, or tea tray as the case be.

An unusual floor treatment adds to the general interest of this room. The entire floor is covered with plain black linoleum. At regular intervals geometric figures are painted on in silver, and the surface is protected by a wax finish. Doesn't it make an individual and effective floor—quite different from the usual thing? The plan might easily be carried out in any sunroom with the aid of a simple stencil pattern. Of course, other colors could be used instead of black and silver. A design in black on henna, or ivory on soft green would be delightful.

For sunrooms in the early American type of home there are fascinating sets of simple furniture finished in maple. In an informal sunroom furnished in this style the maple settee and two armchairs are fitted with boxed cushions covered in glazed chintz. The floral design of the chintz shows to advantage against a brown background. Short draw curtains of the same chintz are finished with a brown and yellow binding. Window baskets of white oak splints with metal containers are stained brown and filled with yellow flowering plants. Little maple tables, conveniently placed, hold smoking accessories and copies of old whale oil lamps with parchment shades.

The wall is painted yellow so that it blends beautifully with the maple furniture and brown chintz. A brown and yellow braided rug almost completely covers the floor.

The rocking chaise longue is chartreuse green.

A Friend in Need

—By Sally Joy Brown—

Clothing and Furniture That You Are About to Discard Can Do Much to Brighten the Lives of the Poor.

ALMOST every household has a white elephant of one sort or another which is sure to come to light during these hectic days of housecleaning and moving. Somewhere in the city there is another household where these articles could be put to good use. Probably this has occurred to you but locating the place where the articles are most needed presents a problem.

Well, that's when we put in our appearance. People have made their needs known to us and we have filed away their names for the day when we'd be able to supply them. In these files are requests for all the articles you will be discarding. Clothing of all description and sizes is in great demand. Baby carriages, high chairs, and cribs; furniture, rugs, curtains, and draperies; books and magazines; musical instruments; scraps for making patchwork quilts; worn hosiery for making rugs; invalid needs—wheel chairs, crutches, and all the accessories which contribute to the shut-in's comfort; sewing machines; radio sets—these and many others number among the articles which have been requested.

No matter what you are discarding, I should be extremely grateful if you would consult me before relegating it to the ash heap. If there is any service or wear left in the pieces you no longer want we can distribute them among the poor and needy.

As soon as your housecleaning or your plans for moving get under way won't you take inventory of the articles you will have to give and let me know what they are. I shall be happy to put you in touch with some deserving person who will be pleased and grateful to receive your gift.

In Need of Clothing.

"I am a patient in this sanitarium and will be able to leave here soon. I shall need clothing then and since I have no family or relatives to appeal to, I am coming to you. If you get me a suit, size 38; shoes, size 6, and shirts, size 15, I will be very grateful to you. C. W."

Beginning life again will be less difficult for this patient if we can solve the problem of clothing for him. Anything in the above sizes will be greatly appreciated.

Request for Envelopes.

"I am a disable war veteran and to pass the weary hours I have started a collection of envelopes. I would like to have any kind of old United States or foreign envelopes which your readers do not want to keep. J. S."

Have you any interesting postmarks to pass on to this collector? This should be a most engaging pastime for one who cannot indulge in more strenuous amusements.

Job Depends on Clothes.

"I have been out of work for some time and recently got the promise of a job, but I can't take it because my clothes are so shabby. Do you think you could get me a fairly presentable suit of clothes, size 40? "W. M."

Presentable clothing would mean a job and the end of this young man's troubles. Have you a suit to give in his size?

Parenthood Is the Theme of Modern Play

Child, Forced Into Wrong Pattern, Collapses.

his belief that the boy's condition is the result of fear of his father—not of his lack of love, for he adores the boy—but of his father's pressure on him and his father's opinion of him. He says that the boy shows distress even in his coma while his father is in the room. And he announces flatly that they must manage to keep the father out or he can do nothing.

Then he goes on to talk most absorbingly about his theory of the effects of deep fears and other emotional states on the body—and how successfully he has put his theory to the test. It is an interesting play.

The father is kept out of the room and finally the physician, by the use of the great skill that he has developed, which is heightened by his love of children, brings the boy to consciousness and we are thrilled to hear him call in a normal voice, "Mother." This all happens off stage, of course. After this all is well with the boy; the father through grief has gained a real insight into the boy's nature, and the other threads of the story are drawn together.

Helpful to Parents.

I wish every father and mother could see this play: those who know children and are in sympathy with the new psychology—those who want to know more—and last those who scoff at it all and think that child nature is a simple and elementary thing—merely to be taught to be good and to be punished if bad.

For child nature is just as complex as adult human nature. The more we know of children the more we realize that we must deal with fundamentals, not just surface indications.

Two or three vitally important themes in the study of children's inner life are convincingly played upon in this drama. There is, for one thing, the theme of continuous or chronic fear and the harm it can do to a child, to the point of having a physiologically destructive effect upon him.

Then there is the theme of education and how it should discard the traditional dry-as-dust, should be concerned with vital things, and should be adapted to each child, to develop him—his very self. And, last, there is the theme that no parent can make his own pattern for a child, for what he is to be, for how he is to develop, for the man he is to become—and then fit and squeeze and mold the child to suit the pattern. The child's pattern is designed for him by nature, God, Destiny, a Divine Hand—call it what you will—and he must grow true to that.

Powdered Glass Trims New Gowns

PARIS.—(AP)—Powdered glass is a novel trimming used in the sparkling evening mode.

Velvet evening wraps are bordered in ten inch bands of colored glass, arranged in conventional designs.

Things looked black for their romance ... until she ended 'B.O.' (Body Odor)

SHE sometimes shudders even yet to think how nearly she lost him. If it hadn't been for her sister-in-law's frank words about "B.O."—body odor—and how to overcome it, this new admirer might have drifted out of her life as other men had done.

But, thanks to Lifebuoy's sure protection, "B.O." no longer steals away her charm. The one and only man calls every night! Next month they'll be married.

Frankness the best policy

"B.O." is an unpleasant subject. But it's far more unpleasant to ignore it entirely and risk offending. We all perspire. Summer and winter alike, pores are constantly giving off odor-causing waste—a quart daily. We're seldom aware of this ever-present odor in ourselves. But how quickly others notice and resent it!

Why run this risk when the most delightful of toilet soaps will keep you safe? You'll revel in Lifebuoy's rich, creamy lather—quickly learn to love its pleasant, extra-clean scent that vanishes as you rinse. No fear of "B.O." now. Lifebuoy's abundant, gently antiseptic lather purifies pores—removes every trace of odor.

Solving complexion problems

When complexions lose their clear freshness—grow dull, cloudy, unattractive—clogged pores are usually the cause. Try this simple nightly treatment. Massage Lifebuoy's pure, bland, pore-purifying lather well into the skin. Then rinse away. Pores are gently freed of clogged impurities, toned and stimulated back to normal fineness. Dull complexions quickly freshen—glow with healthy radiance.

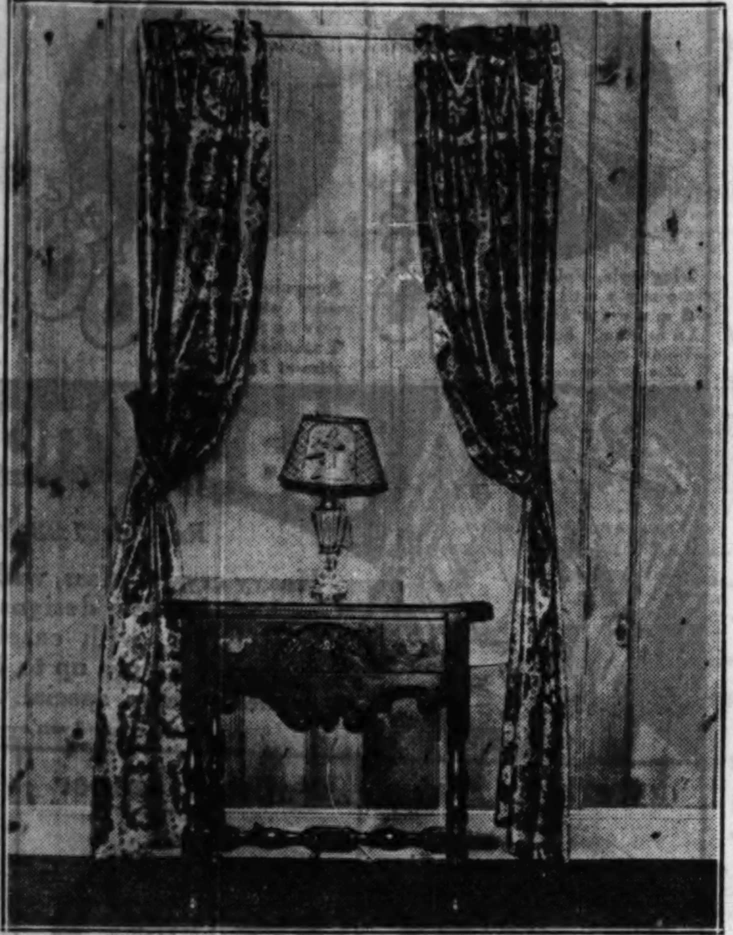
Dining Room Furniture

By Edith Weigle

Maple Is an Ideal Choice for the Breakfast Room, or for the Informal Dining Room of the Small Apartment or Country Cottage.



This group is especially designed for the small room.

A table with an historic interest.

DINING ROOM furniture, for which Chicago stores are showing more attractive designs this season than ever, is a fairly recent adjunct to the home. In fact, authorities say the dining room is less than 200 years old. Chippendale made no mention of dining rooms or even of dining tables in his famous "The Gentleman and Cabinet Maker's Director," published in 1754. It is known that there were no such things as dining rooms in Queen Anne's time, either, nor in the medieval England of earlier monarchs. Occupants of the huge old houses dined in the great halls around long, heavy tables, probably set near the roaring fires on the hearth, for high were the ceilings in the old days and drafty the floors. Men ate with their fingers [and ladies did, too] and threw the bones and an occasional titbit to the dogs that sat expectantly near. Tankards of ale clanked on the bare boards and wine flowed freely.

Later, tables made in several sections were pushed together at meal times and the family sat down to dinner in the hall. And still later, as the 18th century was drawing to a close, Sheraton makes mention of furniture for a "dining parlour," probably the first dining room as we now know it.

In colonial days in this country the huge kitchen, with its enormous fireplace, was used as a dining room [and living room, too], and the trestle table was the most popular. In the federal era, when the country was more prosperous, all the fine houses had dining rooms.

Isn't it odd that now, in so-called modern times, we are showing a decided tendency to revert to the dining customs of medieval England, and in our two by four city apartments sit down to dinner at a table placed in the living room? Of course, those who are not cramped for space still boast a "real" dining room, but I am alluding to the folding toothbrush type of apartment that is as common a sight in the city as are straps on a street car.

The furniture shown today was designed with the small home in mind. There is a simplicity and delicacy of line about the table, chairs and the corner cupboard that make them admirably suited for the room of limited proportions. The wood is maple and the table is in the manner of Duncan Phyfe, while the sideboard and corner cabinet are in Sheraton style. All work well together to make a complete unit. This set was seen at the American Furniture Mart.

Isn't the open cupboard attractive, with its four shelves for pewter, china or glass, and its lower closed space for linen? If you prefer something more formal, then the corner cabinet ought to please you, with its glass lattice work doors and its three interesting finials.

Also at the Furniture Mart was the unusual little maple table which may be used as a server in the dining room or as a table or console in the living room. Placed before a window that had gayly colored chintz draperies, in a room with pine paneling, it was seen against a perfect background.

The interesting point about the table is that it has real historical value. It is called the Old Ironsides table because the eagle ornament that embellishes the single drawer is carved from timber taken from the Orlop deck of the famous old U. S. S. Constitution during its reconditioning at the Boston navy yard.

The manufacturers of this table bought all the timber from the above mentioned deck and incoporated it in these tables. The eagle, centered in a half circle between two stars in the drawer, is modeled from the stern design of an old clipper ship.

The wood is solid maple enriched with an antique, mellowed, hand rubbed finish and is one of the most interesting little pieces I have run across in a long time.

On the table is one of the popular glass lamps made of an old glass oil lamp wired for electricity and fitted with a quaint parchment shade on which a print from Godey's Lady Book is mounted. Lamps similar to this one in white, amber and green were being sold recently at a Chicago department store for less than two dollars each—a record breaker.

Spring Costumes Emphasize Use of Contrasting Color

PARIS.—(AP)—The color combinations milady wears this spring will make or mar her smartness.

Brown and yellow, green and crimson, gray and sapphire—these are the tints which brighten a mode devoted to unusual color combinations instead of striking silhouettes.

The monotone color scheme has been tossed into the discard for a combination which contrasts coats and frocks, blouses and skirts, or dresses and accessories.

Brown coats are worn with brick red or leaf green frocks, brown hats, gloves, and belts. Brown suits are finished with lemon yellow, leaf green, or beige and copper striped blouses and chocolate hued accessories.

The woman whose suit is navy blue may choose white accessories or a blouse of lemon yellow, while the debutante with a new dark blue wool coat may wear a pastel blue or maize yellow frock, with hat and shoes of dark blue. Geranium red, combined with pearl gray, is another favorite combination for navy.

Light green ensembles are worn with dark green chapeaux and accessories, while leaf green frocks may be worn with black or wood brown coats, hats, and bags.

Dark or black accessories are generally used on light gowns or ensembles, while livid touches are used as a contrast for black.

Women Use Bare Feet in English Brickmaking

Only a few women keep alive the old tradition of brickmaking in Worcestershire, England. The bricks are formed and pressed by workers in bare feet, using their body as a weight.

Miss Blanche Boisvert and Miss Beulah A. Fairall are the first women ever to be apprenticed in the government printing office in Washington, D. C.

Beulah Costello, age 22, of Gary, Ind., is the only woman boxer, promoter and manager of the middle west. She teaches her charges, in addition to occupying the rôle of manager. She challenges any woman boxer in the world.

BEAUTY QUERY ANSWERS

What's your beauty ill? Too fat? Too thin? Shy on hair? Oily hair, oily skin, freckles, pimples, or blackheads? Flat chested or flat footed? Write to me. I have a tonic, a diet, or a set of exercises for what ails you, and you're welcome to them and to all the advice I can give you. If you wish a personal reply send a stamped, addressed envelope. Address Antoinette Donnelly, The Tribune.

SUE M.: YOU MAY ADD THE necessary fifteen pounds if you will follow my weight gaining instructions. Send a stamped, addressed envelope for the booklet.

MRS. ED K.: SUPERFLUOUS hair on the face may be bleached with peroxide of hydrogen. For removal of hair on the legs a depilatory may be used. After the use of a depilatory it is well to apply a soothing lotion or cream. My leaflet on superfluous hair may be had for a stamped, addressed envelope.

MISS P. S.: WHERE THE SOLES of the feet perspire try astringent treatment. Stockings must be changed twice a day and two pairs of shoes should be in alternate use—the idle pair dusted with boracic acid powder. Soaking the feet in salt water will be found helpful. My booklet on perspiration may be had for a stamped, addressed envelope.

JOSEPHINE S.: CHAPPED HANDS result from the lack of fat in the skin. Grease the hands with a bland fat—vaseline, lanolin, or cold cream. Equal parts of glycerin and spirits of camphor make an excellent lotion for keeping the hands soft and white.

F. B.: TO PROMOTE THE growth of your eyelashes, use this tonic: Yellow vaseline, 2 ounces; oil of rosemary, 15 drops; and oil of lavender, 15 drops. Mix thoroughly and apply with a tiny brush.

L. R.: EXERCISE IS THE MOST effective means for reducing the legs, but it must be done systematically and vigorously. Send along a stamped, addressed envelope for illustrated exercises.

LOVE QUERY ANSWERS

Metes Out Justice.

"Dear Miss Blake: I have been going with a girl for about five months. Now I find she has been lying to me, and I want to give her the gate. TOMMY."

Acquaint her with the facts, Tommy, that she may know her disregard for the truth has cost her your friendship.

Selfish Young Man.

Dear Miss Blake: I have known a certain young man for several years. He comes to my home but never takes me out. Do you think he is selfish?

"QUEEN OF DIAMONDS."

Yes, it is selfish to take up a girl's time, to spend pleasant evenings at her home, and never to make any return.

Don't Be Gullible.

"Dear Miss Blake: My boy friend goes with another girl off and on, but tells me alone and in front of every one that he loves me. BABE."

I should take his declaration with the proverbial grain of salt and give it credence only when he is no longer attracted to the other girl, Babe.

Run for Dear Life.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a girl 19 years old. My sweetheart is 40. He has accepted my bonus and yet he wants me to save up money for our future marriage. DOT."

He's looking for some one to support him, Dot. You'd beter run for dear life before he separates you from any more of your money.

Not Guilty.

"Dear Miss Blake: Just another question of age. I have become fond of a young lady who is a few months past 17. I have not quite reached my 21st birthday. Am I robbing the cradle? PAUL."

There's no cradle robbing there, Paul. In so far as age is concerned you are well suited to each other.

THE PENALTY of GRAY HAIR

Gray hair—age—slipping. All these unpleasant ideas seem to go together. Yet, it is not at all necessary. Gray Hair often comes to a young head and people who have it are neither old nor incapable. But how often you hear people say, "Why, she has gray hair!" and—she is on the shelf.

This penalty need no longer handicap the woman who uses Canute Water. This is a clear, spring-like water, of wonderful properties which actually restores hair to its original girlhood color. No complicated "color plan"; no danger of getting brunette shade when your hair is blonde. Not only the one kind but the one bottle is enough. It really is surprising what successful, youthifying results it gives.

Apply Canute Water yourself, in the privacy of your own home. Many women in town are doing the same thing; they simply do not mention it. You need not mention it either. Just buy a bottle from any good druggist—and get rid of the "age-penalty" in gray hair. Canute Water is so safe, scientific and sure that your dealer knows it will satisfy you; if not, he will refund your money. Sold and recommended by Boston Store, The Fair, Owl or Walgreen's, or your own druggist—The Canute Co., Milwaukee, Wis.

AH! Pain Stops

Ingrown Nail Turns Right Out!

A few drops of "Outgro" in the crevice of the ingrowing nail reduces inflammation and pain and so toughens the tender, sensitive skin underneath the toe nail, that it can not penetrate the flesh, and the nail turns naturally outward almost over night.

"Outgro" is a harmless antiseptic manufactured for chiropodists. However, anyone can buy from the drug store a tiny bottle containing directions.

Central States Conference of Y. W. C. A. Workers Held Here

By the Rev. John Evans.

[Further church news will be found in the Metropolitan Section.]

MORE than 350 Young Women's Christian association workers from fourteen of the central states will attend a three day regional conference, beginning Tuesday, at the Hotel Sherman. Miss Anna V. Rice, national secretary of the Y. W. C. A., will lead discussions each morning dealing with various problems the association is facing today.

MISS ANNA V. RICE.

Mrs. C. W. Gilkey, the wife of the dean of the University of Chicago chapel, is the national president of the association and will deliver the closing address of the conference. Mrs. Gilkey declared that the importance of the third word in the name of the association is shown in the fact that Miss Rice, the leader of the conference, holds a degree in theology from Hartford Theological seminary and was a special student in that subject at Cambridge and Edinburgh.

Among Miss Rice's subjects for conference discussion will be the moral responsibility for unemployment and also world fellowship and understanding between the nations. Miss Rice will appeal for a wider use of volunteer workers in local associations. Her plan, announced by Mrs. Gilkey, calls for the development of such workers who will give free time to work with girls.

Other speakers announced for the conference include Miss Jane Addams of Hull house and Mrs. John F. Finley, the wife of Dr. John F. Finley, one of the editors of the New York Times.

The Rt. Rev. Edward F. Hoban, D. D., bishop of Rockford, will pontificate at the solemn mass to be celebrated for the National Federation of Catholic Alumni, at the Holy Name cathedral today at 12 o'clock, noon. The delegates to the convention in Chicago will attend the mass.

The sermon will be preached by the Very Rev. J. W. Donahue, superior general of the Holy Cross fathers. The Very Rev. F. J. Corcoran, D. D., president of De Paul university, will be assistant priest, with the Very Rev. Robert Kelley, president of Loyola university, as deacon, and the Very Rev. Zachary Maher of Los Angeles as subdeacon.

The music for the mass will be rendered by the Holy Name cathedral men's choir and boy choristers, directed by the Rev. Edwin V. Hoover, and the Quigley seminary plain chant choir, under the direction of the Rev. Peter Cameron. The solemn pontifical mass celebrated by Bishop Hoban at the cathedral, at 12 o'clock, noon, daylight savings time, today inaugurates the new Sunday schedule at the cathedral, according to which the Sunday masses will be at 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10 and 11 a. m. [low masses] and 12 o'clock noon, solemn mass, with special music by the cathedral choirs and the boy choristers.

Dr. Mordecai Johnson, colored, president of Howard university in Washington, D. C., will be the speaker before the Chicago Sunday Evening club tonight at Orchestra hall. Carroll H. Sudler and Dr. Rolland W. Schloerb of the Hyde Park Baptist church will take part in the program. At 7 o'clock the Jubilee singers of Armour & Co. will give a program of Negro music, religious, spirituals and folk songs.

Dr. Johnson is one of the younger leaders of his race in education, art and religion. He holds degrees from Harvard and the University of Chicago. His subject will be "The Burning Bush."

The late Booker T. Washington and Robert R. Moton of Tuskegee, other famous colored leaders, have been invited to speak from this platform in the past. Dr. Johnson makes his first appearance there next Sunday.

Produces Clear Coffee.

Save all the egg shells and use them with a pinch of salt to clear your coffee. They are better than the whole egg, as the egg curdles, and it is the skin in the shell that does the work, not the egg. E. T.

Malted Milk Substitute.

Malted milk shakes are to me nectar, but in these hard times paying out 15 cents for a drink seems an extravagance, so I have found something to take its place.

A can of condensed milk costs only a few cents. One-half of this quantity mixed with an equal amount of water makes a nice drink, richer than ordinary milk and a satisfactory substitute for malted milk.

By using less water it is possible to make it as rich as one likes and still save at least half of the price of a malted milk. A. H.

Passengers Pay Gas Bill.

A neighbor calls every morning for three young ladies who work in his office, drives them to work in his car, and brings them back at night. He charges them a fare, and this pays for the gas. His own transportation is free, as he does not have to go out of his way to pick up his passengers. H. S.

Prolongs Life of Hose.

My pet economy is wearing silk gloves when putting on silk hose, thereby preventing snags and tears from rough hands and nails. I keep a pair of inexpensive gloves in my hose box and it takes no time at all to slip them on and off. E. C. S.

Don't Squeeze Blackheads—Dissolve Them

Squeezing out blackheads makes large, ugly pores. The safe and sane way to get rid of these blemishes is to dissolve them. Get two ounces of Calonite powder from your drug store, sprinkle a little on a hot, wet cloth, rub over the blackheads, and every one, big or little, will disappear at once.

For Scalp Troubles.

you will find the new liquid Calonite a positive relief. It dissolves away dandruff and all scalp impurities, leaving the pores clean. Your hair soon regains new life and beauty. Try it tonight!

WEEK-END WIVES

by FAITH BALDWIN

The Story in Resume:

Lola Davis is a $25 a week stenographer for an insurance company. Kenneth Hayes is a salesman for a public utilities corporation. Following their wedding they settle in a tiny apartment and Lola continues her work at the office. Her pay is raised; Ken's is reduced. Their changed financial status has an unhappy effect on their relation to each other. Peter Acton calls on Lola's boss, Jameson, and Lola is impressed by his looks and manner. He displays an interest in her. When she tells Ken about him, they quarrel. Ken gets into a scrape, loses his job, and, after several months of idleness, takes a clerkship in a drug store. Lola is offered a job in St. Louis with Mr. Jameson at $75 a week. She thinks that of course Ken will go with her, but he is firm in his refusal. She decides to go without him.

INSTALLMENT XI.

Go West, Young Woman!

LOLA told herself desperately: "I can't go through with it. But I can't back out of it now. I've got to go through with it."

There was no one who could make up her mind for her. Agnes had had her say, and Connie. Howard, hanging about her when she came home with his awkward, "Aw, Sis, what's all the shootin' for? You're kidding, aren't you?" was less than a help. Ken, with his superimposed control and his estranged eyes, was some one she had never known. Acton was out of the question. He would tell her to live her own life, and that, she was shrewd enough to surmise, because of reasons of his own. If Ken would only tell her he needed her, beg her not to go, perhaps, perhaps she would reconsider. She said as much to Agnes, and Agnes replied:

"He won't. Do they ever really need us, I wonder?"

Perhaps Agnes was right; perhaps Ken didn't need her. Perhaps Ken was right. Perhaps, the way marriages went nowadays, men and women didn't need one another, not basically. Or, rather, perhaps men needed only the sort of women who stayed at home and absorbed themselves in their husbands and families. But that wasn't fair. They couldn't, she still insisted, have married on that basis. In order to marry at all they had had to work out this fifty-fifty arrangement. Only it hadn't been fifty-fifty after all. Perhaps nothing was; perhaps no scales balanced as evenly under the weight of human emotions and frailties.

But St. Louis meant her chance. She clung to that. If Ken had been generous—she called it "broadminded"—they might have gone out together and made a new life for themselves; discovered, together, a new adventure. She kept on telling herself that had their positions been reversed Ken would have not only demanded, he would have expected her to go with him, whether or not his ambitions took him to the south pole or the orient. "Pack our bags. We're leaving on the midnight." Something like that.

There were a few weeks left before she would have to go. She went about her work mechanically. Jameson looked at her often, a fold between his eyebrows. Not as alert, not as eager, not as happy hearted as she had been. Was it the coming change? The wrench? He didn't, of course, approve of it personally. But he couldn't run his share of the business on his personal theories, approvals, and disapprovals. She was the best secretary he'd ever had; she was executive, too, and to be trusted. But the snap had gone out of her work. Was he, perhaps, making a mistake in selecting her to go with the rest of the staff? The men he was taking were unmarried, and the other girl, Jennie Jones, the typist, from the medical section. Yes, the snap had gone from Lola's work. Come to think of it, it hadn't been very apparent since her marriage. But her work was good, thorough, and painstaking.

Acton dropped in at the office one day when Jameson was out. He generally managed to arrive when Jameson was out. In the outer office Dorothy and Gladys exchanged glances. In the inner office Acton, sitting on the edge of Jameson's desk, said persuasively:

"Come out to lunch? No? Why not?"

"There's so much to do," she answered evasively. "Mr. Hobart—that's the man who'll carry on here in Mr. Jameson's absence—has asked me to go over the routine with him and his secretary. There isn't enough time really to do all that should be done. I'm staying late evenings."

She was standing by the desk. Her bright hair was tumbled about her colorless face. Her eyes were strained and the lines of cheek and chin chiseled to over-slenderness. Acton jumped down and before she realized the import of his gesture took her abruptly into his arms.

At the Crossroads

"Give over, Lola," said Acton, blue eyes blazing. "You're not happy about going away. Not happy about staying here. Forget this nonsense. Marry me and let me take you away from all of this dusty, drab existence."

"It isn't." She freed herself gently. "Please don't, Peter. I—I like my work. I'm happy in it. Besides—" she made a miserable failure of smiling—"besides I'm already married."

"It isn't a life term nowadays," he told her. "Well, think it over. I'll come to St. Louis to see you, you know. You can't really keep me away. And I'll keep on asking you."

"It's not fair," she said, breathless.

He smiled at her from the doorway. "Perhaps not, darling," he said, "but I can't stop to think about justice now."

After he had gone she sat down at Jameson's desk and put her head in her hands. It seemed to her that she was standing at a crossroads where four paths met. One path led to Acton—there was no love ahead on it, but there was ease and, perhaps, peace of mind and a certain weary surrender; and one road led to Ken, to all their common memories and their common hopes and their common misunderstandings; and one road led to St. Louis, and to work and to the fulfillment of ambitions; and the fourth road was dark; she could not see down it.

Her mother wired briefly that she was coming home, leaving Mr. Davis out in Hollywood for a time longer.

"I'm sorry," Lola told her, meeting her alone. "I—you shouldn't have come on. It shortens your time with Millie."

"Millie's all right," Mrs. Davis said in naïve astonishment. "She can take care of herself. But I didn't come home to talk about Millie. I came home to talk about you. You don't really mean that you're going to St. Louis and leave Ken to shift for himself?"

"Why doesn't he come with me then?" Lola evaded.

"It isn't a man's place," Mrs. Davis declared, "to go traipsing all over the country because his wife changes her job. You know it isn't, Lola Hayes! What do you expect him to do while you're gone? How long will you be gone, anyway?"

Lola said, "I don't know." She didn't. She knew, however, that Jameson considered that the job might be permanent.

She said, trying to believe it: "Ken will join me. He's pretty sore at me now. But he'll get over it."

"He's working here," her mother reminded her.

"That job doesn't matter."

"After all the trouble your father went to? Lola, jobs aren't to be picked up in the street. Ken might go to St. Louis and not find anything to do."

"That's happened right here," Lola reminded her in her turn.

"I don't like it," said Mrs. Davis helplessly. "I don't like it at all."

Her eyes filled. Lola put her arm about her.

"Please don't. Here, take my handkerchief. Tell me about Millie and the picture she's working on. Is she well? Happy?"

Mrs. Davis talked about Millie the rest of the way home. "She sent you a letter. I have it—here. Where is it? I'm sure I put it in my handbag."

She searched frantically and finally produced Millie's letter and put it into Lola's hands. She had said: "Millie, you write her—try and persuade her not to be so foolish." But Millie had written something else.

"If you don't care for Ken," wrote Millie, "and are set on getting away from him, this is as easy a way out as any other, I suppose. I take it you've thought it over. I'd like to tell you to come on out to me and break into the pictures. You're good looking and carry yourself well, you have a swell figure, and a good speaking voice. But it isn't even as easy as it used to be."

No Control

At home, after Howard's noisy greetings, which he tried so hard to make casual and couldn't, quite, Mrs. Davis shooed him out of the room and regarded her daughter and son-in-law gravely.

"I want to talk to you. Ken, do you approve of Lola's going to St. Louis?"

"I haven't," Ken answered sullenly, "anything to say about it. She doesn't care whether I approve or not."

"I knew you didn't!" Mrs. Davis said exultantly. "It's all nonsense! Tell her she can't go! I have no control of her any more. She's married. I'm only her mother. But you are her husband."

"Hardly that," Ken modified smoothly. Mrs. Davis looked at him, puzzled. Lola raised her hand in a gesture of hopelessness and dropped it to her lap.

"I mean," Ken went on, "I haven't any control over her either. Being a girl's husband nowadays gives a fellow damned few rights."

"Marriage is marriage," said Mrs. Davis severely.

Lola said wearily:

"Mother, please, we aren't getting anywhere. I've asked Ken if he'd come with me and make our home out there, where my work will be. He won't. He thinks more of his man's pride than he does of me, that's all. But he only remembers it at times convenient to him. Other times he doesn't care."

Ken said furiously:

"Speak up, can't you? No use talking like a crossword puzzle. You mean that I lolled about at home and didn't break my neck looking for a job, and let you support me? Well, that was true enough. I might as well have the game as the name, I thought. Most fellows don't like their wives working; after a while they get used to it; then, maybe, they count on it some. Who's to blame? Answer that!"

Lola did not reply. Mrs. Davis said after a moment:

"Ken's right in a way, Lola."

Lola jumped to her feet.

"Every one," she said, "seems to be against me. It isn't like you," she cried childishly, turning on her mother, "to take Ken's part that way."

"It's only what I think right, dear," her mother said. She added, "Children, isn't there some way you can settle this without every one getting angry and without fighting and everything?"

She seemed younger than both of them in that moment. Ken replied evenly:

"There's one way, of course. Lola can get a divorce——"

"Ken!" That was Mrs. Davis, going white. "Ken," she said. "Lola? Divorce? With her upbringing? Her principles? Are you out of your mind?"

Lola asked a little wildly:

"Do you hate me that much, Ken?"

"I don't hate you." His gray eyes met hers intently. "I love you. Damit, you know that. But, what other way out is there?"

Lola said nothing. Peter Acton talked of divorce—but that didn't matter; he had been divorced before; he took such things casually. She didn't. When Acton spoke of divorce, in connection with herself, it hadn't sounded real. But this was Ken speaking.

She said, dully: "I married to have it last."

"Of course, you did," her mother said hastily. "Ken didn't mean that. Did you, Ken? He was angry—worried. Lola, give up this crazy idea—you must."

She was going to cry. She mustn't cry. I can't, said Lola to herself. She turned and ran out of the room, and upstairs, colliding with Howard on the way, murmuring something, anything, from a throat which was choking. She held her hand to it. "Jehosophat," murmured Howard, looking after her.

"I'll Make Out"

She reached her room. Flung herself across the bed. Downstairs her mother looked at Ken. Ken flushed, shuffled his feet uneasily. "You've upset her," Mrs. Davis told him unnecessarily and with severity. She went over to where he was sitting, hands lax between his knees. She touched him on the shoulder. "Go upstairs, Ken," urged Mrs. Davis, "and make it up with her. There's a good boy."

"O, all right," he said, after a moment. He rose, hands thrust now into his pockets and looked down at his mother-in-law. He liked her. She was a peach. But she didn't understand. This, that was between Lola and himself, went deeper somehow than jobs and St. Louis and talk of divorce.

He turned and went from the room. Mrs. Davis sat down in a chair, limply. She said to herself—it will be all right now. Children! She smiled. Howard came in, tiptoeing exaggeratedly. "Hey, ma, what's up?" he began. "I met Lola on the stairs. She all but knocked me down. Now I meet Ken at the door. He knocks me down, too. What do they think I am," grumbled Howard, "one of those what-you-may-call-it toys—hit it a kick and it bobs up again?"

"Don't be silly. They were in a hurry——"

"I'll say they were!" Howard agreed, heartily.

"Come here. Sit down. Millie sent some of her new pictures. I want to show you—Millie's little apartment," began Mrs. Davis cozily.

Howard resigned himself to an evening of Millie.

Upstairs, Ken sat on the edge of the bed and tried to draw Lola into his arms.

"I'm sorry. I didn't mean that. About divorce. Of course, I didn't. Please forgive me, Lola."

She permitted herself to be taken into his embrace. It was comforting; it was safe; it was something so far removed from these last weeks of torture and hurt and anger and indecision. She said, sighing, her heart heavy: "I won't go to St. Louis, Ken."

"You won't? Say, that's great! That's my own girl——" He broke off.

She said, anxiously, her heart curiously empty and yet clouded with melancholy: "What's the matter, Ken? What do you want now?"

"I want you to go," he answered incredibly.

She sat up in the circle of his arms, pushed back the heavy, curling hair from her wet eyes. She said, flushing, eyes burning with eagerness, with hope: "You mean you'll come with me? O, Ken, that would be wonderful!"

He stared at her.

"No, I didn't mean that," he began uncomfortably. A half sob escaped her. All the newly awakened radiance left her face. He said urgently: "See, it means that much to you, doesn't it? Look here, Lola. We've been going at this wrong. I won't come. You know why not. But you needn't stay here. I'm not going to spend the rest of my life having you tell me how much you gave up—on my account."

"I wouldn't, I wouldn't ever," she told him, hurt. She thought of what Acton had said. Funny, she thought further, irrelevantly, how men's minds work alike. The minds of quite different types of men, even. Acton had said that she would only make Ken miserable by reminding him what she had sacrificed. Even if she didn't remind him. And Ken was saying it now.

"I know you wouldn't, perhaps. Except when we had a row or something; or things didn't go right. Or you were tired. But if you never opened your head to me about it again, I'd know. You said to me, this was your chance. All right, Lola. Take it. I won't stand in your way."

A Compromise

"O. O," she gasped, trying to break through the wall of what she considered his misunderstanding. "You can't see—you don't understand. I don't want to go without you, Ken."

He said stubbornly: "You'll have to. You go. I'll stay here. It will be all right. I'll make out," he said.

Perhaps he was unconsciously wistful; perhaps not. In that moment she loved him terribly and hated him cruelly for making her feel as she was forced to feel—hard, selfish, demanding—the person in fault, the one on whose shoulders the onus of all blame must rest.

She drew away from him. Out on the river a great boat whistled, a deep, eerie sound. Some one was laughing, down in the street. She said: "You make me feel—rotten. Putting it up to me. All of it. But where does it get us, Ken?" she asked him.

"Here." He took her back again, her head against his shoulder. He said: "I'm not very good at explaining things. But everything's been wrong somehow. We've been living, like you said once, under each other's feet. Haven't we? Too close. And maybe, too far away. I don't know. Perhaps if we do separate for a while, like this, we'll see clearer. See what's important. Damned if I know what's important now. I don't want to go on living the way we have been living, any more than you do, Lola. Take the job. I'll stay here. Maybe we can find out what's wrong and what matters. We won't be all sort of cluttered up with each other. You see," said Ken, trying so hard to find the words, "I get sore and ugly; and you get peeved and tired. And then we make up. And I kiss you and I forget all that's happened. And it isn't fair. I mean afterward—we are just where we were before. We haven't cleaned up anything. I can't see us going on forever quarreling about things—and making up. There must be more to it than that. There's got to be if it means anything—our marriage, I mean. So—perhaps, if we aren't together for a while——?"

"Good-by," he said gruffly, "don't take any wooden money."

Sauce for the Goose

She spoke, after a long pause: "I understand. I didn't think you did. Ken, will you promise me something? Will you promise me that—if things go wrong here—and you need me, you'll come out—to St. Louis?" she asked.

"I don't know. Perhaps. I'd rather," said Ken, "that you came back. If you found you needed me. That we needed each other. If you found out what matters most, after all. If you don't, well, we can make it permanent and unanimous after a while, I guess," he told her.

She told him, holding him with her small, strong hands: "It all comes back to this. Your pride or whatever it is. You won't give me a promise. But you'll ask me to give one. I have to be the one to go; and the one to come back. Isn't that right?"

"I suppose so. I will promise, though," he told her, his cheek against the silky, fragrant hair, "I will. I promise I'll come out. If I can't stand it. But it will be to bring you back. I won't come out to loaf around and let you feed me while I beat the pavements for jobs. I'll make good here first," said Ken. "God, I've got to make good!"

It was, after all, a sort of compromise. She sighed. She said, "All right, Ken."

Later they went downstairs and told Mrs. Davis that it was all right; but drowned her complacent joy in consternation by explaining. Lola must have her way. And Ken would have his. A temporary separation, then, in order to think things over.

Mrs. Davis shook her head; added to her arguments. It was late that night when she said, surrendering and beaten: "I haven't any call to tell you what to do or what not to do. When your father hears this, Lola, I don't know what he'll say. Ken, you'll live on here, with us?"

"No, Mother Davis," he smiled at her. "No, Jake's got a place of his own now. A room—I'll bunk in with him. He wants me to."

Lola thought—he's been talking this over—with Jake. With Garry, perhaps. And others. She was amazed at the dart of anger which went through her. She told herself, not that it matters. I talked it over with Agnes and Connie, didn't I? And with Peter. Fifty-fifty, said Lola to herself, trying to believe it. Sauce for the goose, sauce for the gander——

Ken was saying, over Mrs. Davis' expostulations: "But I'll come around often. You know I will. And I'll expect to get a free meal now and then. Don't think you're rid of me that easily. Not with the sort of pie you make!"

"But why won't you?" began Mrs. Davis.

"I can't, Mother Davis. Better this way."

Wild horses couldn't have dragged from him the public admission that he could not endure to be in the Davis house, with Lola gone; could not bear the room which they had shared together—alone.

But upstairs he said something of this to Lola, awkwardly, anxiously: "I hope I didn't hurt her—get her sore at me. But it would be pretty damned hard, Lola, with you not here. Better I go with Jake. We'll make out."

"Of course," she agreed, "if you'd rather. But you'll eat crazy things and drink too much and catch cold. O, Ken."

She hadn't thought of those things before. Of such possibilities of disaster. Or rather she had thought of them all along during their life together in a mechanical, routine, irritable, responsible sort of way. Now that she would no longer be able to urge, nag, advise, beg, she thought of them clearly, as detached from herself—as possibilities out of her reach to remedy.

"I'll be all right," he said again. "Don't you worry. Think of yourself. You'll have to. You won't have me to crab about rubbers and ice cream cone lunches and working too hard, you know."

Before she slept she said: "I have your promise? I didn't ask you to promise anything else. About other women."

He told her: "No one matters but you, Lola. I haven't asked you anything about—other men. You'll meet men. I'd rather not think about it."

The Departure

They left it at that. During the rest of her time at home, during the feverish, hectic time of saying good-by to people, of packing, of getting Jenny Jones, whom she knew slightly, over to meet the family and of planning with her what they would do and how manage—for they had decided, wisely enough—to manage together—during the time of getting the office straightened out and of trying to straighten herself out, she and Ken were on, outwardly, excellent terms. Not only outwardly. They were loving each other secretly, afraid to say how much; afraid of what was ahead; afraid of sorrow—afraid of everything. But they were walking delicately as Agag, as carefully as strangers. Trying to make a joke of it. Trying to make it all natural and right and expected. Trying to keep on keeping on. "It's just," they told people, "temporary separation." "I'll be going out and fetching her home again, soon," Ken told his skeptical friends. "Ken will join me, after a while," Lola told hers.

"I'd a darned sight rather not go to the station with you," he told her, when the time approached.

"Ken, please! What will people say?"

"Well, have it your own way," he said.

Acton phoned her: "Shall I come see you off?"

"Please, no! What will people say?" she found herself asking again.

"It's not what they'll say but what they'll think! You don't want me, then?"

"I'd rather not. You see, my family——" she slurred and hesitated.

"I understand," said Acton.

He sent over a medley of books. Books in gay wrappers, stuck in a charming suede bag with handles. A cushion, also, in suede, for her head. Candy, nuts. Giddy foreign magazines, all packed in the suede bag and tied with ribbons. His card attached.

Ken said: "Must have set him back something!"

In a way he was glad she was going, after all. Acton, thought Ken, would have to quit hanging around and would forget her. Or would he? Could a man, once having known her, forget her? Ken thought not. He glowered at the books and the candy and the ribbons.

At the station they crowded around her. Connie and Louis. Agnes; her mother, Howard, and some of the people from the office, "seeing the gang off." Ken stood a little to one side. He thought—pretty picture I'm making! He wondered—are they laughing at me? He thought they probably are, and damit, I don't blame them!

She kissed him. "I'll wire when I have an address. You have the office address, all right?"

"Sure——"

"Ken, you promised——"

"You, too, baby," he said.

"I know." She whispered: "I do love you, Ken."

He kissed her briefly, but hard. A hard pressure. Enough. Couldn't say more now. They'd said good-by, last night. She'd cried—in his arms. "Good-by," he said gruffly, "don't take any wooden money."

The train pulled out.

Jenny, red headed, straight and slim, was chattering. Jenny's folks had come to see her off. All she had. A married sister and her husband. Jenny said: "Gee, isn't it exciting? What do you suppose St. Louis will be like anyway, Lola?" Jenny's eyes were big as saucers. St. Louis, from Jenny's expression, might have been peopled with Indians. Lola said, "I don't know, Jenny."

Jenny shot her a shrewd, brown eyed look.

"Feeling pretty low? You'll feel better when we get settled. I hear there's work to be done," said Jenny, with mock melodrama. "Nice of Mr. Jameson to find us that place to live. When we get our bearings maybe we could get a little apartment or something—I'd like that. I'm a good cook," said Jenny. "And say, Lola, I know a fellow in St. Louis—an automobile salesman. I met him when he was up for the auto show. I'll give him a buzz. Gee, won't he fall over backward when he finds I'm in his town. He'll take us out."

Lola said, mechanically: "I won't feel much like going out."

"Gosh, you can't live like a nun!" said Jenny in frank astonishment. "About the apartment. It would be nice, wouldn't it? And if Ken came to see you? You don't mind if I call him Ken? Gee, Lola, he's a knockout. You must be pretty darned sure of yourself to leave that all alone and unguarded in a big city!" Jenny rattled on.

Frightened

Lola closed her eyes and leaned back against the hot plush of the seat. Ken? Ken who wouldn't eat right and who'd drink too much, perhaps, and who was careless about bare feet and overcoats and catching cold. Her heart felt as if a tight band was around it. A band which, strangely enough, constricted her throat.

"All right?" asked Jameson, stopping beside them.

"Fine," said Jenny, "just dandy, Mr. Jameson." Lola smiled. "All right," she said.

Wonder if Mr. Jameson's wife minded his going away? But she was in Europe. And by the time he got back again, for good, she'd be home. Anyway, wives didn't have much to say. Not wives who didn't have to take care of themselves.

Twice on the trip she had wires from Acton. Silly wires, cheerful and amusing. "Ken?" asked Jenny. "Well, of course," said Lola, folding the yellow slips and tucking them into her bag.

She couldn't sleep. The train rolled, a little. Everything creaked. She lay in the upper berth and listened to Jenny, sleeping audibly in the lower. Every one seemed to sleep audily on trains. Her sheets were right and her pillows, and the berth was comfortable. The car gave to the speed of the engine. Cinders rattled on the roof. They whistled, going over a trestle or something. She wished she had taken the lower berth, after all. She would have liked to have looked out of a window at the houses they passed, at the stretches of country, wrapped in sleep. Cinders rattled again, the whole car creaked. More whistles. They were slowing up—they were entering a station. People were running along the platform. She heard voices. It was lonely and strange to her. She looked out into the car, at the swinging green curtains before the berths. The porter passed by in his white coat. Lola lay down again.

No, she couldn't sleep. Ken? She was frightened. Why had she come? How had she dared? But it was her chance. Her chance. She must hold on to that. Presently, she slept, wet cheek against the pillow.

Mr. Jameson took them to the boarding house. A pleasant one, on a side street, with a German landlady, who, obese and friendly and accented, made them welcome and showed them their second story room, with windows on the back, showed them proudly the twin beds and the shiny new furniture. It was, she said, her best room.

"Sehr gemuetlich, nicht?" inquired the landlady—"comfortable, ain't?"

A Letter from Ken

They agreed with her, and went about their unpacking. Tidies on the chairs. Little china ornaments on dresser and bureau. Plush. Everything spotless. The counterpanes, heavy, with knitted lace. Bolsters.

One of the clerks whom Jameson had brought with him and who was also living at the boarding house took them to the office the next day. He had come from St. Louis originally. Happy-go-lucky town, he said.

The office was housed in a great business building of noble proportions. Lola said to Jenny: "I'll be glad to get to work."

In a week she knew her way around. In a week she had accustomed herself to the heavy, hearty breakfasts and dinners, to a drug store lunch. It wasn't, after all, so different from any other city. In a week she had had five letters from her mother, a postal from Howard, a wire from Millie, an air mail note from her father, and two short letters from Ken. "I'm all right," said Ken. "I miss you like the devil."

In two weeks she had been to a number of the many parks. She had been to the movies with Jenny, her automobile salesman, and a friend of his. She had spent a Saturday afternoon alone, exploring the old Walnut street cathedral, wandering through the Broadway courthouse to look at the frescoes by Wimar. She had gone to a matinée by herself; she had walked along the narrow streets of the old French settlement. And had begun to know something of the town.

During her third week Ken wrote her that he had given up his job and gone to work in a garage. He'd seen, he added, her father, who had just returned.

Ken in a garage? She couldn't imagine it. She said so. She wrote him by air mail. "I can't understand it," she said.

He replied that he was, as she knew, a good mechanic. He wanted to be better. He was taking a night course. He and Jake had big schemes. Jake was dickering with some one to get hold of a gasoline station near Fourth avenue. He wanted to go in with him. "I want," wrote Ken, more truly than he knew, "to be my own boss. Nothing in this working for another fellow. If I can get some money saved and go in, after a while, as partner, it will be swell."

No word of coming out? No word to urge her back. He wrote a poor letter. Slangy and expressive enough, yet it told her very little. She wrote to her mother, "Is Ken all right?" she wanted to know. And Mrs. Davis replied, "Yes. We don't see much of Ken any more, though."

Connie, writing, didn't either. She'd had him up to dinner once. All he could talk about was cars and the gas station.

"I Don't Love You"

Lola had been away for four weeks and the office was sufficiently organized to permit Jameson to return to New York, planning to come out for several days every other week for a time and leaving the force in the capable hands of a younger man, Mannering, when Acton arrived without heralding.

He came straight to the office.

"Lafayette, we are here!" he announced.

She was glad to see him; gladder than she had realized she could be. She jumped to her feet and gave him both hands. "Peter!" she cried, astonished.

"In person. When do you close?"

She looked at the clock.

"Half an hour."

"I'll go to my hotel and clean up. Where are you staying?"

She told him. He wrote down the address. "I'll pick you up about six," he told her.

He was there for a brief week-end. He said the second evening that they dined together:

"Like it as much as you thought you would?"

"Better. I've more work to do," she confessed. "Mr. Mannering lets me run the office pretty much, you know. Yes, I like it."

"Lola," he leaned across the table, "Lola, aren't you about ready to give it up and listen to me?"

"I do listen to you. Most of the time," she told him, laughing.

"You know what I mean. I am beginning to think," said Acton, "that I am wasting my time. Look here, Lola. In the early spring I have a chance to go along as excess baggage on an expedition into Tibet. I'm helping finance it. And if I can make myself useful they'll take me with them. It's up to you whether I go or stay," said Peter.

"How long," she asked, startled, "would you be gone?"

"A couple of years. I'm fed up with doing nothing. I'm—if you say the wrong word I'll resign from all the board and directorships and start out to look at nature in the very raw. If you say the right word, I'll stay on here," he told her.

She shook her head:

"I don't love you, Peter."

"You would. I swear you would! I'd make you. I'd make you happy," he told her eagerly, blue eyes on her own, lean face intent.

"I don't," said Lola, "think much about happiness any more."

She missed him when he went back. But was relieved to have him go. Gradually she was making contacts. Jenny's automobile salesman, Frank Lansing, took it upon himself to show the girls the town, and to introduce them to his particular circle. Frank made his friends in circles allegedly "artistic." Through him Lola met a number of people, very different in type from the people she had known. She was busy every moment of the day and Jenny was having the time of her life. She was glad, once the wrench was over to be away from the folks.

"Mary kept too eagle an eye on me," she told Lola, "not that I was doing anything I shouldn't. But if she'd looked long enough I might have, out of stubbornness. I like this town. It has it all over New York. Easy going. Doesn't give a darn. Doesn't mind if Cleveland grows faster. Likes itself the way it is. I'm glad I came," said Jenny.

After Christmas they moved to a small apartment. Lola didn't like to think about Christmas. There were wires from home, boxes of presents, letters, and she and Jenny and Lansing shared the tree of friends of his. But it was a dismal season just the same. She was glad to plunge into flat hunting and finding.

They took a furnished apartment and in February Mrs. Davis wrote her that Ken was very sick.

PORTRAIT OF AN ACTOR

By Achmed Abdullah

With Only One Role Imperfect, He Rose to the Height of His Career and Retired—and Then Amid Hollywood Surroundings Put the Finishing Touch to His Art.

PERHAPS it was three hundred years ago, though perhaps no more than thirty.

But once upon a time—believe it or not—there lived a generation of New Yorkers who wore corsets and dickies and feather boas and scarlet flannel underwear; who celebrated the Fourth noisily and rather homicidically; who went in for fretwork and Turkish corners and phrenology and tandem bicycles; who spoke in awed accents about the doings of the Four Hundred; who broke into gales of laughter when the red nosed burlesque comedian mentioned Oshkosh or Oskaloosa; who believed in the Melting Pot and had never heard about the Nordic race; who considered lipstick and rouge the sure enough trademarks of the demi-monde; who breakfasted on beefsteak and fried potatoes and cared not a tinker's curse for calories and vitamins; who, in spite of the foregoing, were proud of their sophistication, yet were at heart earthily and bucolically small town American, with wheat straws behind their ears and galluses across their shoulders.

If you belong to this generation you will remember many things.

You will remember wooden cigar store Indians. You will remember vintage champagne at five dollars a bottle and two martinis for a quarter. You will remember the sensation of the Flatiron building soaring to the stupendous height of twenty-odd stories. You will remember nightingales trilling in Central park. You will remember labor unions being a danger to the republic or, in case you belonged to the opposing political persuasion, John D. being a danger to the same republic. You will remember Teddy Roosevelt's Rough Riders. You will remember singing "A Hot Time in the Old Town Tonight."

You will remember the Gibson Girl. You will remember "Diamond" Jim Brady and "Gentleman" Jim Corbett. You will remember a young Lillian Russell, a young Leslie Carter, a young David Belasco, and a slightly less young Sarah Bernhardt. And doubtless, you will remember Lionel McDermott and—having split your brand new gloves applauding her in "Under Two Flags"—his wife, Loretta.

Auburn haired you will remember her, and violet eyed and long limbed and slender and of a quite amazing loveliness. A charming comedienne, serenely aware of her own fine, histrionic gifts; adored and petted by public and critics; although always willing, indeed eager, to admit that she was a mere tyro compared to her husband, who towered like a beacon above the tumult and glitter of Broadway and the Roaring Forties.

Lionel McDermott as King Richard, as M. Beaucaire, as Sherlock Holmes, as Tartuffe, as Rosmer, as the Gay Lord Quex, and in many a suave, half forgotten Pinero problem play . . . for over four decades, in almost any rôle he had chosen, running an arrogant scale from tragedy to light comedy, he had created theatrical history; had finally retired, nine years earlier, on his sixty-third birthday.

So, craving sunshine and flowers, he had gone to Hollywood, to a pretty little stucco villa on the crest of a hill with the twinkling lights of Los Angeles at his feet, to live there on the modest competence which he had acquired.

He had not retired because of his age. For, at the time, he had been hale and vigorous in mind and body.

He had retired because, having reached the pinnacle of his profession, there had seemed nothing left to strive for, to achieve. The theater—he had explained to his wife, who had agreed, as she had ever agreed with him in all matters—had ceased to spell to him either desire or ambition, either an indulgence or a high hope. Even his vanity had been sated; and the nightly enthusiasm of parquet and gallery, the savage roar and thunder, like the surf beat of a stormy sea, had no longer bewitched him with its potent lure and urge.

Altar of Sacrifice

Suddenly, one evening, listening to his own deep, vibrant, metallic voice rolling out across the proscenium into the audience, seeing below him the smear of tense, white faces, the realization had come to him that, by dint of his trying to conquer the theater, the theater had conquered him. On its stony, pitiless altar he had sacrificed everything and everybody—including his wife—including himself—including his unborn children.

Yes. It had robbed him; sucked him dry.

For, to be the perfect artist, the perfect actor, to attain real truth mated to real beauty, he had digged beneath the flimsy trappings and panoplies, the flummery and mummery, the mascara and powder and grease paint, the hollow, meretricious glamour and pomp and circumstance of the theater, and had bored down to the raw, pulsing fundamentals of life. Calmly detached, he had studied, like a surgeon, the unarmored beatings of the human heart—his own and others'. He had scrutinized all emotions; had dissected them; had reduced them to the touch of definite and constructive thought; had then mirrored them on the stage, season after season, with unsurpassed realism even in romantic rôles.

Vicariously, or in his own mind and body, he had run the gamut of all thrills—except that of death.

He had been afraid of death since he could remember.

Not with a coward's fear. But because the grave meant to him ultimate, irretrievable failure.

Indeed, the critics, vying with each other in lauding his every intonation and gesture, had usually tempered their praise when commenting on his death scenes. And one of them, more outspoken than the rest in his review of Cyrano de Bergerac, had expressed his wish that Lionel McDermott "would cut out the sob stuff when giving up the ghost."

But in all other rôles throughout his career he had portrayed faithfully and brilliantly what he had seen and felt and experienced.

Impersonally, he had analyzed the hearts of men. Thus, too, he had analyzed the hearts of women; had therefore chosen his love affairs deliberately, seeing them through to the inevitable end with ruthless precision, placing their emotions and his own reactions to these emotions as offerings before the painted, grinning, cruel idols of the stage.

The women in the case had left neither light nor shadow upon his soul. Promptly, once the chapter was finished, in tragic regret or futile, sordid recrimination, he had forgotten them. He had forgotten their first names; had forgotten the color of their eyes; had even forgotten their perfume—to pass on, serene and unruffled, to the next experience, the next experiment in human reactions.

Gallery of Women

There had been, for instance, the wife of a Pittsburgh steel millionaire, used as a model in a Pinero play; blond, blue eyed, petite, her curves frustrated at the expense of her healthy appetite—"the regulation baby doll type," McDermott had classified her—and in her small features a vaguely pathetic appeal which had meant nothing in particular; the sort of woman who said her prayers before, instead of after, breaking the seventh commandment.

There had been a lean and athletic lady of Mayflower antecedents—"the cream of the Back bay, though slightly soured," had been his sardonic comment—who had gone in for spats and corona-coronas and old fashioned whisky cocktails and mannish tweeds.

There had been a notorious New Orleans courtezan who had considered the male of the species an adversary with whom, if the terms were favorable, she would sign a strictly temporary trade pact and who, ultimately, had committed suicide because of a red haired gigolo's unfaithfulness.

There had been a Knickerbocker society matron of ripe and rather excessive beauty; a woman of forty-three against whose withering patronage not even the most authentic talent had been secure and who, in her lover's arms, at the very moment of sweeping, swooning passion, had somehow managed to broaden her vowels and to round out her periods with dignity and stately magnificence.

Other women. More than a few.

Women ranging all the way from Park avenue to Paducah, from the peerage to the beerage, from the Almanac de Gotha to the Almanac de Ghetto.

And only once his wife had made a jealous scene.

Echoes of a Promise

"Lionel," she had told him one evening in his dressing room, "I'm going to leave you."

He had been sitting before his mirror, busy with grease paint and powder.

"What's that?" he had demanded, without turning.

"It's Reno for you and me—if you catch my drift."

"May I inquire how many martinis you had before dinner?"

"Not a one."

"Then—what's the idea?"

"You don't love me."

"Crazy—aren't you? Why—I love you with all my heart. I've never loved anybody else."

"How can you say such a thing, Lionel?"

"It's the truth."

"The truth—with all those women popping in and out of your life?"

"Mostly out. That's just it, my dear. They do not matter a peanut's worth." He had laughed; had continued more seriously: "I mean, they don't matter emotionally. But, I need them."

"You—you need them?" she had echoed indignantly.

"I do, and you know I do. To portray life I must know life. I must study it—must feel it, and taste it, and squeeze it dry of laughter and tears." He had risen and faced his wife. "I must live life to the full, with every fiber in me, every quivering, sensitive nerve. You see," and he had spoken quite without vanity, "I'm not a mouthing, ranting ham. I am an actor—a great, realistic actor . . ."

"At times I wish you were a bricklayer."

Suddenly, impishly, he had winked at her.

"The hell you say, darling," he had exclaimed. "You would go to Reno if my name didn't happen to be flung against the Broadway night with flickering electric lights ten foot high . . ."

"It isn't so!"

"Well, maybe I'm exaggerating. But all the same there's something in what I'm telling you, child. Pride in my fame is part of your love for me."

There had been a knock at the door and the call boy's thin, piping voice:

"Curtain's about to go up, Mr. McDermott."

"All right, Sammy."

He had crossed to the threshhold. Over his shoulder he had added:

"Do you remember what we promised each other the day we married?"

She had not replied, and he had gone on:

"We were young—so young. We were ambitious and keen, and we promised each other that, in spite of our love, the theater must come first. We did not want money. We did not want children. We did not always have enough to eat, nor—" with a little laugh—"enough to wear. But we remained true to our ideal, the stage. And we got there, Loretta! Ah"—triumphantly—"we got there!"

He had left. He had not heard her dull murmur:

"You got there! Not I!"

She had sat there, brooding, morose. Her eyes had been sullen. Her red lips had been sullen.

She had thought: "Fame—he has it—enough and to spare. And what have I? I am a successful comedienne. But, principally, I am Lionel McDermott's wife. His name is a household word in America and England . . . he has risen to heights which I can never reach."

Jealousy.

Professional jealousy more hurting and bitter than jealousy of the flesh.

And all at once she had been ashamed.

Why, she considered, she was the wife of Lionel McDermott. She was proud of him.

Pride, too, had duties.

She must merge her indviduality yet more completely in his. She must forget her own self, as he had forgotten his own self, in service to the theater.

She must!

A solemn oath.

She had spoken it out loud:

"I promise!"

And she had lived up to this promise. Perhaps with advancing years it had become more easy to keep, and had made no more jealous scenes, although the jealousy in her heart had remained, and so she had been happy on that night when Lionel had said to her:

"I'm through with the stage. Let's pack up our programs and clippings and go to California."

Yes. She had been happy.

Why, she had thought, she and Lionel were good for many more years. They would live out these years in close, warm harmony.

An old couple, growing older?

Well, what of it?

Quiet, Peaceful Days

They did not belong to the new generation that was making a fetish of youth and that, by the same token, preferred the kick of crude, home-brewed gin to the mellow glow of a cobwebby bottle of Beaune. They had their resources, spiritual and mental; their memories, some sweet and some bitter; their dreams of long lost, far-off things. . . .

Their little house was comfortable. Their income was sufficient. Their two Filipino servants were capable and loyal. And then there was their rose garden.

Such a lovely garden. A mass of blossoms, creepers as well as bushes, scrambling, and straining, and tangling in their own self-willed fashion, clothing old stones with hearts of deep ruby and amethyst, building arches of glowing pink and tea yellow against the blue sky, lifting shy, single, dewy heads in hushed corners as if praying.

Here they passed long hours. They were alone a good deal of the time, since few of their former Broadway friends were in Hollywood, and these few, mostly younger than they, were busy in the motion picture studios.

At first Loretta was afraid that her husband would miss his former life—the excitement, the applause, the fame, the electric signs hiccoughing through the dusk with the mandarin blue and sharp saffron and spelling out his name for all the world to read and admire.

But she was mistaken.

Lionel McDermott had spoken the plain truth when he had told her that he was definitely through with the stage. Nor did he care; was indeed sardonically amused when, shortly after his arrival, he made the discovery that he was less well known in California than Douglas Fairbanks, and that only rarely he was pointed out when, occasionally, he dropped in at the Ambassador, the Brown Derby, Henry's, or the Wednesday luncheons at the Embassy club.

For it appeared that in Hollywood, and more and more throughout America as the legitimate theater gave way before the western invasion of camera and screen, the motion picture actors and actresses were the Lord's anointed. The Sir Henry Irvings and Signora Duses were as dead as King Tut and the great auk. The tribe of Chaplin and Pickford, of Beery, and Gilbert, and Garbo were becoming the grandees of the painted boards, the grand moguls of publicity, the feudal barons of spotlight and props.

These men and women, recent nonentities, were caught in a shower of glory and gold. More glory and gold, thought Loretta, than seemed altogether fair. And so, at moments, she would feel a faint stirring of envy.

But Lionel did not mind, perhaps because he was too serenely and too naïvely conscious of the fact that he was who and what he was: the greatest living realistic actor; that, as long as he had wished, he had been supreme in his chosen art, and if Hollywood was not aware of it, well, it was Hollywood's loss, not his.

Let the picture people earn millions. Let them vie with each other with the gestures of their modern, barbaric Babylon. Let them drive down Hollywood boulevard in gold plated foreign cars if their tastes so inclined.

He personally did not give a damn.

"Mannequins," he called them in the single interview which he gave to a Los Angeles daily. "Jerking, uninspired marionettes, strutting and posturing their cheap, tawdry stuff. Unimportant hucksters in theatrical piece-goods. . . ."

Tactless words, widely broadcast, that did not endear him to the film colony; that did not open to him the hospitable houses on Beverly Hills and Malibu Beach.

But he did not care. He wanted to be alone—with his thoughts, his memories, and his wife.

He had sacrificed so much in the past. He had sacrificed himself, he had sacrificed Loretta. There had been this twisted, cruel hysteria of success, like a halo made of thorns. He must make up for it.

Nightly to thousands, he considered, he had brought enjoyment and happiness with his art. Now it was his turn. He, too, wanted happiness, and during the next nine years he attained it.

A simple happiness. Perhaps a trite happiness. But deep and great to him and his wife.

He was now almost seventy-two, she sixty-nine.

Yet often when they were in their garden and looked out upon the twinkling, stammering lights of Los Angeles, it was as if time were rolling back its curtain, back to, over four decades earlier when, for the first time, he had told her that he loved her.

They had been beginners, just out of dramatic school, and had been playing bits in a fluffy French comedy. They had gone for a stroll after the performance and had finally sat down on one of the stone benches at the eastern end of Central park, facing Fifth avenue.

A summer night it had been. A soft, warm, purple night with Orion slanting, immense and lonely, across the sky, and the silver horn of the young moon shredding the fleecy clouds to gossamer.

Memories

They had been silent for a long while. Then, very suddenly, he had told her:

"I love you, Loretta."

She had smiled.

"And I love you," she had replied.

"Let's get married."

"You bet!"

"When?"

"O . . ."

"What about tomorrow, Loretta? We'll have time after the matinée to hop over to the Little Church Around the Corner."

"All right. It's a date."

He had kissed her then. He remembered the kiss; remembered the heady, sweet scent of flowers drifting out from Central park. . . .

Many, many years ago, and today they were both white-haired. . . .

And still he remembered. . . .

He turned to his wife:

"Do you remember, Loretta?"

"Do I?"

They sat there, holding hands. So old they were, so ludicrous, so happy.

"So happy!" she whispered, her head on his shoulder. "So happy I could die."

He gave an involuntary little start. Queer, he thought, his fear of death. Queer, and silly. Why, death must come to everybody sooner or later.

He was silent. So was she.

"So happy," she repeated after a while, "so very, very happy."

And then, within the week, the end of their happiness came with tragic suddenness, with fate striking twice in the same twenty-four hours.

Fate struck in the afternoon when Lionel, opening a late paper, read on the front page that, due to enormous peculations committed by the president of the concern, the Helveto-American Investment Trust, in whose bonds his entire small fortune was placed, had been declared bankrupt.

At first his brain seemed unable to take in the news. But, a moment later, he understood.

"Dear Lord," he whispered.

Loretta heard.

"What has happened?" she demanded.

He told her; added:

"What are we going to do? Why, we're wiped out, penniless."

She turned pale. Then she spoke bravely:

"We've been penniless before."

"Years ago. We were young then, Loretta. Now we're old."

"But in those days we were unknown. It was an uphill fight. Today we are famous. At least you are. Don't you worry, darling!"

"How can I help worrying?"

"O, I'd like to shake you! We have made the grade before, you and I. And we'll make it again. I'll send a wire in your name to Grady & Cowan, your former managers. They made you all sorts of offers trying to get you to change your mind when you retired. Remember? Well, here's where they'll come through with some real money. I won't let you take a cent less than fifteen hundred a week and a percentage on the gross."

ILLUSTRATION BY R. F. JAMES.

"Lionel," he began, "I hate like hell to . . ." "No use beating round the bush. I was rotten in that last scene."

He laughed at her enthusiasm. She sent off the telegram to New York and, sitting in the rose garden after dinner, they lied to each other tenderly, beautifully:

"I'm sick of California."

"So am I."

"Too many flowers."

"And the palm trees—stiff, dusty, unfriendly."

"I hate them."

"Same here."

"And too much sunshine."

"And the air too pure."

"No kick to it. I long for a breath of carbon monoxide, don't you?"

"You bet!"

"Broadway, eh?"

"Dear old Broadway!"

"And our old friends there."

"O, it'll be great to be back home!"

"When do you think we'll hear from Grady & Cowan?"

"Tomorrow morning, I guess. They'll be just as anxious as we are."

At the Producers'

They would have been surprised if, just then, they could have taken a look into the producers' Forty-third street office; could have listened to the two partners discussing Lionel McDermott's telegram:

"Wants to stage a comeback, does he?"

"Why, the poor old fossil, does he imagine the world is standing still?"

"Say, lay off o' him. He was one swell actor once."

"Sure. So was Napoleon one swell emperor once. And now Napoleon is dead."

"Maybe an all-star Shakespearean revival—might bill it Lionel McDermott's farewell tour."

"Not with my mazuma, baby! It's bad enough as it is, with the movies cutting the ground daily from under the feet of the legit."

"That's so. The only chance we got nowadays is pretty faces."

"And pretty legs."

"You've said it! Still, I'm sorry for Lionel, poor old bozo. Gotta let him down easy."

"Sugar the pill all you want to. Put orange juice into the castor oil. But tell him nothing doing."

"O. K., Bill. I'll send him a wire that'll be as tactful as hell."

And he sat down to compose the message of refusal while, back in Hollywood, Loretta and Lionel continued weaving their brave dreams until presently, with the chill night wind blowing down from the Sierra Madre, she coughed a little and he said to her:

"Off with you, before you catch cold!"

They went inside and to bed.

He dozed off quickly, but she tossed about for a long time, unable to sleep. Her cough kept on bothering her and when, gently, so as not to disturb her husband, she tried to clear her throat, she felt a sharp pain—a pain that started in her chest, then traveled down the length of her arms and to the pit of her stomach—a cunning, malignant pain accompanied by a shivering in her back and the nape of her neck.

Was her head too low, she wondered?

She stretched out a hand to double up her pillow; desisted at once. For the pain suddenly became an agony, and then, the next moment, her lungs seemed to be filling up with air—burning hot air that she could not expel; air that was torturing her, choking her—and she was conscious of her heart beating with dull, heavy strokes as if trying to break through the walls of her chest, and she grew frightened.

She must call Lionel.

She must. . . .

"Lionel, O, Lionel."

He sat up.

"What is it?"

He heard a rattling noise in her throat. He switched on the light. He looked at her.

Why, Loretta, she was sick—sick.

He jumped out of bed, telephoned to the doctor, who came ten minutes later, examined her, then joined Lionel in the next room.

He spoke gravely:

"Pneumonia."

"Is it—dangerous?"

"At her age? Yes. I'm awfully sorry, Mr. McDermott. I'll send a nurse—two nurses, day and night. I gave your wife an opiate. Go in and talk to her while the drug begins to work. And don't pull a long face. Cheer her up. Something in Christian Science, you know."

"Thank you, Dr. Walker."

He went in and sat by Loretta's bedside. He smiled at her. He held her hot hand.

"You love me?" she whispered.

"I have never loved anybody else."

"Didn't love any of the other women—ever?"

"O—what were they, you silly little goose? Models. Types. And you——"

"What am I?"

"You are you, Loretta!"

"God bless you, darling!"

Broadway's Dismissal

The days that followed were gray, unhappy.

There was that telegram from Grady & Cowan. Tactful indeed. But Lionel read between the lines. Broadway did not want him. He shrugged his shoulders. Nor did he blame Broadway. New gods had risen on the Rialto.

Furthermore, even if Grady & Cowan had made him an offer, he would not have been able to go to New York, with Loretta so sick.

Sickness—he considered morosely—was more expensive than health. The two nurses, the doctor, the medicines, the dozen and one incidentals. And, all the time, the regular living expenses running on; the bills rolling up, piling up; the mortgage interest on the house a week overdue; one or two shopkeepers dunning him; his few jewels pawned; and his bank account down to less than a hundred dollars.

What was he going to do? Dear Lord, what was he going to do?

Borrow——?

He blushed at the thought. He, whose name had once ranked with that of Sir Henry Irving, to borrow—like some cheap ham cadging at the Lambs' or the Players' club, telling his oft-told tale of "show went blooey on the road—stake me to a ten spot, will you, dear lad?"

No. He could not borrow. Besides, why should he? He was still Lionel McDermott, the great realistic actor, and this was Hollywood, where, lately, the talkies had begun to take the place of the silent pictures and where, today, there was a demand for actors of the legitimate theater.

He asked the nurse's permission to speak to his wife. He told her what he had decided to do—and she gave a girlish little giggle.

"What a joke on you!" she commented.

"Why——?"

"Because you've always been so down on the movies. But it's all right. You'll show them in Hollywood—as you showed them on Broadway."

"I'll try."

Fleshy Sol Katz

She was silent; then demanded in a low voice:

"A sacrifice—for my sake—isn't it?"

"O——"

"No use giving that embarrassed, self-conscious little grunt. I know you, you old fake. Of course, you are doing it for my sake. And it makes me feel happy and glad—because I am a woman—and selfish—and vain." She smiled. "Have you made up your mind which company to go to?" she continued.

"I thought of Colossal Features. Sol Katz is the head there. You remember Sol?"

"You mean the little runt who was your dresser, thirty years ago, when you played Richelieu?"

"The same."

"I do remember him. Such a thin, serious, spectacled youth he was. So eager. And so frightfully esthetic—always reading high-brow books behind the wings——"

But Sol Katz had changed. He was still spectacled and eager. But he was no longer thin nor esthetic. Gross he was, physically and mentally, and surfeited with success.

He listened to Lionel McDermott. With rather triumphant amusement he recalled how once he had trembled before the actor. Well—he thought—it was different today. Today the other knelt at the throne, imploring the king for a favor—and the king would grant it.

"O. K.," he said. "I'll give you a job. Of course, I can't offer you a million. You're a greenhorn when it comes to the movies. And your name——"

"Is forgotten. I know. On the other hand"—haughtily—"I'm an artist. I know my trade, my craft, my——"

"Aw—keep your shirt on!" interrupted the other. "Nobody's trying to throw asparagus on you. Tell you what I'll do. I'll give Jim Macomber a ring——"

"A director—isn't he?"

"A director? For cryin' out loud! The director! The greatest in the world! Why—I pay that crook five thousand a week. He's casting that new play. There ought to be a bit in it for you."

He unhooked the desk telephone; talked into it a moment later in accents half hectoring and half cajoling, which, precisely, expressed his feelings toward the director:

"That you, Jim? This is S. K. How are you, my boy? Say—I'm sending McDermott over to see you. Which McDermott? Lionel. Eh? No. He ain't dead. If he were he wouldn't be here, you damned fool. I want you to get him something in your new opera. What's that? I shouldn't interfere in your business? Say—who the hell is paying for this shebang? Eh? You will—what? Aw—come on, Jim—don't be so touchy—but—you see—I promised McDermott——"

He put back the receiver.

"Phew!" he sighed, "What a tough bird! I wish I could afford to fire him. Take my tip and handle him with velvet gloves." He rose. "Glad to have seen you—wait here—have a couple of cigars."

So Lionel McDermott left the magnate's presence, smiling at himself, at life, with bitter irony. To be patronized—by Sol Katz! Well—it was the way of the world—just another experience—and he squared his shoulders as he entered Jim Macomber's office and, presently, was pleasantly disappointed.

A queer man he found the famous director. Given to queer clothes, with his pale blue plus fours, his canary-yellow golf stockings, and turtle neck sweater to match. And queer his way of talking. Talking—it seemed—in glaring, staccato, chunky, disconnected headlines; wasting his energy in extravagant phrases and gestures. Yet a fair minded man, and amazingly intelligent.

At first he grumbled.

What the devil—he inquired—did

These Chic Designs Solve the Problem of What to Wear for the Next Few Months.

HERE are two frocks for grown-ups and one for a child that reflect spring style trends. Pattern No. 2858 is intended for the woman who is inclined to be stout. All the points in its design give a slender silhouette. For instance, the surplice closing adds a softly rippling rever that cuts the breadth. Still more helpful, perhaps, is the shaped yoke brought up to the waistline at the left side front. It tends to narrow the hipline. The surplice vestee does its bit toward slenderizing and is most becoming.

The circular skirt is molded to the figure with fullness at the hem. This model would be attractive made of a crêpe silk print, or of navy blue crêpe with white crêpe vest.

The pattern is so simple to follow that the novice at dressmaking will not have any difficulty with it.

Youngsters like sleeveless frocks, so this one, pattern No. 2503, should delight some childish heart. It has a scalloped yoke that simulates a capelet collar. The front and back of the dress are gathered and joined to the scalloped yoke with long shoulders. The hem is also scalloped and is bound in plain yellow organdy. The yoke is yellow dimity and the rest of the frock is white dimity. Pale blue dotted swiss, or light green handkerchief lawn, or tub silk in pink and white, might be used, too.

This frock is easily made and will prove comfortably cool and pretty for summer days.

Pattern No. 3006 is for a printed silk crêpe dress that is as practical as it is pretty. A peplum frill encircles the hips, but it is cleverly placed so as not to interfere with the slender lines of the model. A frill finished the fitted cape collar that chooses the becoming V shape at the front and is finished by a bow. The pattern provides for long cuffed sleeves, seen in the small picture.

Plain flat crêpe, sheer woolen crêpes, and artificial silk novelties are suggested as attractive materials for this frock.

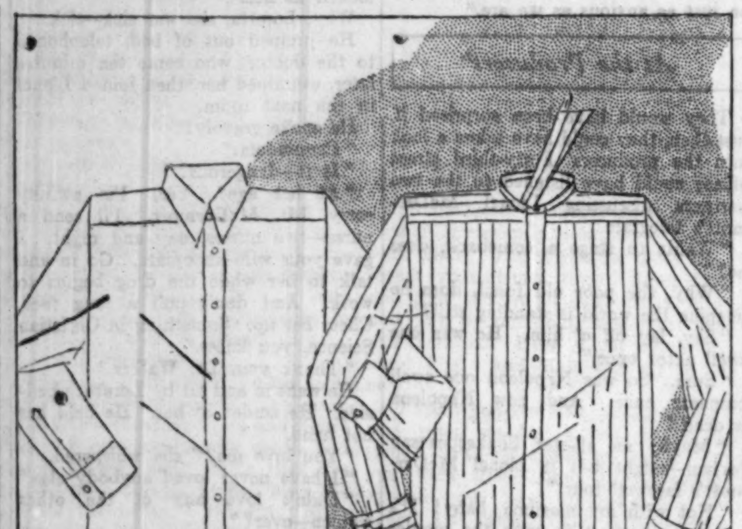
Needlework

—By Clotilde—

The Woman Who Sews Will Find Making These Trimly Tailored Shirts a Fascinating Occupation.



A GIFT of a half dozen shirts is something that would be appreciated by any husband or brother, and the work is pleasant and not too difficult for a woman who is accustomed to sewing.

Buy the best quality of broadcloth in white or colors, or some of the lovely silk shirtings. You will also need about one-half yard of coarse muslin for the strips down each front inside the hems, and for the interlining of the cuffs. This should be washed and ironed before using. Also shrink the shirt material that is used for the cuffs. Neckbands may be bought ready to set on, but if you are going to have an attached collar you won't, of course, use the band.

Measure the length of the sleeves in a shirt that is right and cut the sleeves that length. Go slowly with the cutting and follow directions as to how each piece is to be laid on the material.

Tear a piece of muslin about 3 inches wide and fold down the center so that the raw edges come together. It should be about 17 inches long. Turn in the bottom edge and lay on the right side of the right front so that the raw edge comes to the line where the front of the shirt is to be turned to the wrong side in a seam. Stitch in a narrow seam, overcast, and turn to the wrong side. Stitch close to the edge and leave the fold edge alone. Continue with a narrow hem down the front, around the bottom, and up to the notch in the side, showing where the underarm seam is to end.

Where this hem goes around curves, hem by hand, instead of basting, using the point of the needle to make the curved hem smooth. The stitching can be done right through the hemming at these places. Hem both fronts, first laying the boxplait down the right side of the left front, and hem the sides across the back and up the sides to the notches. Men's shirts button from left to right.

Next the under yoke section is basted and stitched to the back. Put together according to the notches, gathering the slight fullness in the shirt at either side. Lay the shirt on a board or table, and turning in the other yoke section across the bottom lay it in place on the under yoke piece, baste down across the bottom, and stitch twice across the lower edge. The shoulder seams are put together next, first taking a right side seam, and stitching the front to the under yoke section. Then, turning in the shoulder seam of the outer yoke piece, baste and stitch this down over the under seam, stitching first close to the edge, and the second time about ¼ inch above.

Clip the edges of the armholes all around, making these clips about a scant ¼ inch long. The clipped edges are then turned in towards the wrong side just beyond the clips. The next step is to finish the sleeve openings carefully, following the pattern directions carefully. Crease or trace a line around the top of each sleeve about ¾ inch from the edge; then pin the armhole in place on the sleeve, first pinning at each end, then in the center and in between.

The turned in edge of the armhole is pinned so it comes to the traced line on the sleeve. The shirt is then turned to the wrong side, and the sleeve edge turned in and basted down. The sleeve is then stitched to the shirt, stitching on both turned in edges.

Baste and stitch the underarm seams together, and finish with a felled seam. Set a gusset in at the bottom of each underarm seam.

Suitor Has Fine Character, but Lacks Ambition

Girl Wonders About Life as His Wife.

By Doris Blake.

YOU'RE a girl in the mid-twenties, let's say. And your best beau is five years older. He has a personality that everybody likes. He is agreeable, pleasant, always kindly toward and about people. Every one you introduce him to lauds him for his sweetness of character.

He's a one-man woman—and you're that woman. He takes you uncomplainingly, though your temper may get the best of you, now and then. So far as he is concerned, you can't do any wrong. His manners are those of a man brought up by an excellent mother and father who have implanted in their boy's character a respect for honesty, decency—and women. As for disposition, character and manners, the man is pretty nearly perfect.

BUT, though he talks marriage, wants marriage, he has little to offer in the way of financial security, and ambition is not one of his driving forces. He is perfectly honest about his financial state, admits that he could be more ambitious, but at the same time rightly contends that he is not lazy and no one would welcome a better job than he. But luck hasn't courted him, he thinks.

Be it said, in all credit, that he has been inordinately good to a sister whose illness has been a constant drain on the young man's pocketbook. In fact, all of his wage earning life has been met with incidents of expense from one family member or another, leaving him at 30 madly in love with you but, for the time being, pretty destitute of funds. The business he is in at present depends upon commissions, largely, for income and with things what they are at the moment and the man's natural nonaggressiveness, said commissions are pitifully lacking.

The Girl's Viewpoint.

Now, still assuming you are the girl in the case, you admire him for a character fineness, for a wonderful disposition, for his touching faith in you and everything about you. You feel more comfortable with him than with any other man you ever knew. His family likes you immensely—but you, because you are a worker and ambitious, yourself, you suffer periods of impatience that you can't help showing, and doubt the advisability of pairing up with such a one for a lifetime.

You see a long, hard trail ahead and you in the rôle of constant prodder, inspirer and general custodian of the man's business success. Now, would you, with all the facts in hand, vote for abandoning the marriage idea and going it on your own, as "Correspondent," whose letter inspires this questionnaire, thinks perhaps might be the better way? Understand, she's not one who asks for a love nest lined with gold, or even silver. No money to start out with wouldn't be such an objection. It's the idea of never getting ahead that terrifies. In fact, "Correspondent" is perfectly willing to work a year to get things started. At 30, the girl thinks a man is pretty well established in the traits that must characterize him for the rest of his life.

Now, all of this may seem pretty hard-headed reasoning for a true sentimentalist to swallow without a gulp. But in view of the present day economic situation sometimes I wonder if a little hard headedness isn't justified. It's pretty difficult for a girl with a head on her shoulders and one who is an earner, herself, not to be confronted with the future possibilities that lie with marriage to a man without funds and without ambition. Daniel Cupid may weep as he sees a girl supposed to be rendered immune to material considerations with one of his darts—he may weep, I say, when he sees her with pencil and paper in hand, cold bloodedly figuring her possible financial status five, ten, fifteen years hence. The girl, however, is hardly to blame, since she hasn't brought about the economic strain. And there's no avoiding rents, household expenses, and family expenses adopted with marriage.

I'm just apologizing in a general way for the so-called hard little note that men complain so frequently of in otherwise possible mate candidates. Girls can't very well be put through years of training as wage earners themselves without being acquainted with the urgency of knowing where the next week's expenses are coming from.

The Other Slant.

However, and this is the weakness of the hard-headed calculations, there is another side to marriage consideration—one you can't figure out in dollars and cents and which, if I may be permitted an old fashioned name for it, shall be called the spiritual side. All the security for a successful marriage is not drawn from the income envelope. Surely, that's plainly written into the familiar scenes of domestic discontent, broken homes and divorce records, where financial security is well enough established.

Foregoing marriage or marrying a man whose status as a provider is doubtful, then, boils itself down to two things. One is whether the woman is able and shall continue to be able to measure her other compensations for what they are worth, or not. And whether or not twenty or twenty-five years hence she will be able to accept her own material success, along with her spinsterhood, as sufficient return from life. Whether she can look without regrets upon a sister whose life has been a financial failure, let's say, but who has to show as her contribution to life a family of boys or girls, or of both, who inherit character, quality, fineness from a male parent who may not have been much of a financial success, but who never failed as a kindly, loving husband and father.

Of course, there is the gamble which other girls have taken and won out on, of urging, inspiring or even nagging into success a man without the natural urge to want to go his neighbors one better.

Stamps to Aid Cotton.

LONDON.—(AP)—To stimulate Britain's ailing cotton industry a special postage stamp advertising the Lancashire mills is being urged. A special cancellation mark with the slogan "Buy Lancashire cotton goods" also is suggested.

Portrait of an Actor

—By Achmed Abdullah—

S. K. mean by trying to dictate to him, by telling him what actors to hire? He was doing the casting—he himself—and so——

"I know how you feel," McDermott cut in. "I have done quite a little casting in my time. It's really my fault. I appealed to Mr. Katz—because I need a job."

At once the other was apologetic.

"Of course, it's an honor to have you, Mr. McDermott. Forgive me. I've been terribly rude. But—O—the most annoying thing has happened. Haven't told S. K. yet. Afraid he'll have a fit. You see—I'm almost through with the casting of the new play. All the sets designed. All the costumes finished and most of the scenery. Ready to shoot next week. And"—throwing up his arms in despair—"last night that damned jackass of a Rodney Grotton, who's our star, gets tanked and breaks his damned leg! And here I am high and dry—with the finest production ever attempted—months of work gone to hell—months of thought—my reputation at stake—and—O—it's enough to drive an archangel to the bug-house!"

He slumped into his chair near the desk. He flung his arms across its unyielding surface, abasing his curly head. He sobbed.

The sob was, perhaps, a trifle too studied, too melodramatic. Yet McDermott felt sorry for the man. Then, the very next second, he was utterly taken aback when Macomber jumped up, rushed over to him, implanted a moist and fervent kiss upon his left cheek, and exclaimed sonorously:

"Blessed be the pink eared Prophet!"

An Answer to Prayers

"But," stammered the other, "what has happened?"

"You have happened. You yourself. Coming to my office like an answer to my prayers—the only man able to replace that boiled owl of a Rodney Grotton."

He opened the door.

"Miss Blomquist!" he called.

His private secretary appeared.

"Publicity item!" he went on breathlessly. "Rodney Grotton dangerously ill! With what? Nervous breakdown—the lousy souse! His part will be played by most famous actor of century! Lionel McDermott! Look up stuff about McDermott! Pile it on thick! Persuaded latter to come out of retirement! For sake of old friendship with Sol Katz! Princely salary! Two thousand a week! O. K., McDermott? McDermott will repeat former stage triumph on screen! Jump to it, Miss Blomquist! Make it hot and snappy!"

She left, and McDermott asked:

"Mind telling me what the play is?"

"'Cyrano de Bergerac.' You'll be a wow in it. Chiefly in the death scene. Realistic I want it—yet with beauty. Rehearsal tomorrow morning at nine. Ah"—wringing the actor's hand—"blessed be the pink eared Prophet!"

Cyrano—thought McDermott as he walked down the street—and the death scene in Cyrano in which, almost, years ago, he had failed, as often, almost, he had failed in similar scenes—because, always, he had been afraid of death, had never been able to study it as he had studied life.

And now?

He must try it again. Must play death for the sake of life; Loretta's life; and the two thousand a week, and, if he made a hit, doubtless other engagements—the future taken care of——

He reached the house.

"Your wife is so excited," the nurse said to him. "She wants to know——"

"I'll tell her."

He did; and, once more, she gave her girlish little giggle.

"Remember," she asked, "what the Globe critic wrote about you when you played Cyrano at the Amsterdam? I know it by heart. 'I wish'," she quoted teasingly, "'that Lionel McDermott would cut out the sob stuff when giving up the ghost.' Well, this time you will cut out the sob stuff, won't you?"

"Yes, dear." He looked at her anxiously; saw her white and haggard. "Feeling a little better?"

"Perfectly bully. Stop worrying. You've work ahead of you, and you must rest. And, Lionel . . ."

"Yes?"

"In the olden days I used to watch you rehearse—helped you occasionally with suggestions, didn't I?"

"You helped me lots."

"Now I'm flat on my back. Can't go to rehearsals. But I'd like to help you again. So every day you must tell me how you're getting on, so that we can talk things over."

"I'll do that," he promised.

Glamorous Acting

He kept his promise, and from the first he had pleasant things to report. For he did not find the talkie medium, the camera and microphone, to differ vitally from the regular stage technique. He was successful from the outset, and soon the great studio building buzzed with excitement as the production got under way. The property room buzzed. The wardrobe room buzzed. Actors and actresses buzzed, in tenor, baritone, alto, basso, and falsetto:

"Say, this McDermott bozo knows a thing or two."

"I'll tell the cockeyed world!"

"Sure fire box office!"

"You bet! He'll knock 'em for a row of Peruvian cuspidors!"

Slangy praise. But well meant and well earned.

Indeed, and even the hard boiled, cynical stage hands admitted it, there was glamour in the man's every gesture and intonation. There was beauty. There was high romance. There was, straight through, honest realism.

And, truthfully, sitting by Loretta's bedside in the evening, he told her:

"I am myself again. I have not lost the art of illusion. I still know how to make them laugh and cry."

"Of course you do. But don't forget when you come to that last scene—that death scene—no sob stuff, Lionel."

"Yes, yes," he interrupted hurriedly. "I'll do my best."

Thus, steadily, he drove toward perfection, and achieved it.

For—though this happened months later when the picture was finally released—Garth Burns, America's leading screen critic, voiced the opinions of the other critics as well as of the thousands who nightly thronged to see the show, when he wrote in the Gazette:

"I used to think acting an ephemeral art, through its very nature. The actor dies. With him dies his voice, his gesture, his magnetism. Last night I realized that I have been mistaken. Lionel McDermott will die. But somehow the flow of his genius will continue. Go and see him in Cyrano. You will not be able to forget him. He will forever remain in your consciousness, chiefly his death scene: the beauty of it, the strength, the pity, and the amazing, breath-taking realism. Incidentally, and let all lovers of true art rejoice, Colossal Features has signed Mr. McDermott for five years. His next picture will be Don Quixote. But to return to Cyrano, the whole thing is a triumph. A great deal of the credit is due to the director, Mr. Macomber, as well as to . . ."

But this came later.

At the time when they rehearsed the last scene, the death scene, though everybody else in the enormous, barn-like studio was satisfied, there were two who were not: Jim Macomber and Lionel McDermott himself.

The former drew the actor aside. He was obviously embarrassed.

"Lionel," he began, "I hate like hell to . . ."

"No use beating round the bush. I was rotten in that last scene."

"No, not rotten. But something seemed to be missing. Something, O, how can I express it?"

"I'll express it for you, Jim. Reality was missing. Honesty. And courage."

"Then, you know?"

"Who better than I? And"—dully—"I wonder if I have the ability to . . ."

"Don't be a silly fool, Lionel! Why, by the pink-eared prophet, you are the noblest Roman of them all. We'll keep on rehearsing that scene. We won't shoot it until you are absolutely satisfied in your own mind. Feel like having another go at it now?"

"As you wish."

Study of Death

McDermott shrugged his shoulders. He told himself that he would never be able to master his fear of death; that always, because of this fear, the sentimental, unreal sob note would creep into his voice, his acting . . .

He went up on the set.

"All ready, Jim!"

And then, just as he was about to begin, an office boy ran in.

"Mr. McDermott!" he cried excitedly.

"What is it?"

"You are wanted at home, at once. The nurse telephoned . . ."

He hurried to the house.

In the hall Dr. Walker mumbled medical half-truths; finally, compelled by the actor's chilly gray eyes, spoke the whole truth:

"I'm terribly sorry. But I'm afraid your wife won't live out the night."

He went in. He sat down by Loretta's bedside, her wasted hands in his.

Outside, Hollywood clamored. Evening dropped in the lee of the sinking sun. Tired clouds went drifting past. The windows of the houses across the road flashed lemon and gold.

He bent over. He looked at her very closely. A great pity—pity for her, for himself—stole upon his soul with a freezing touch.

"Loretta!"

She heard. She rallied a little.

"Yes, darling?"

"Loretta, dear, dear Loretta."

She smiled.

"I love your voice," she whispered. "It is, O, deep, deep, like the tolling of bells in some ancient cathedral. It was your voice I fell in love with, first."

Her own voice splintered; broke into a hacking, febrile cough.

"You must not talk," he begged her. "Must not tire yourself."

"I shan't tire myself, after tonight, ever again."

Dim her accents, he thought, blurred, as if wiped over by the hand of fate.

"Lionel!"

"Yes?"

"You rehearsed that last scene today, didn't you? The death scene?"

"I did."

"How did it go?"

"All right, I guess."

"No—no sob stuff?"

"Well . . ."

Her giggle then. Her girlish little giggle.

"O, Lionel, as a liar you're a complete washout. You were bad, weren't you, and you sobbed?"

"Yes."

"I'm ashamed of you. You—you mustn't fail in that death scene . . . the whole play stands or falls by it."

"But, what can I do?"

"You must learn!"

She was silent; continued in a voice like the faint ebbing of a tide:

"Lionel, you have always been a realist, haven't you?"

"Yes, dear."

"Because always you studied the living model. So why not study—the dying?"

"No!" he cried, and his face was ravaged. "No, no, no, no, no!"

Back to the Studio

Her wasted hands gripped his with amazing strength.

"Why not?" she insisted. "You are an artist, and I am an artist, and we promised each other, years ago, that the theater must come first. We kept this promise in the past, so why not today? I helped you in the past, so why not today? Ah"—with a strange high triumph—"I have helped you—helped you more than the other women. In life I helped you . . . shall help you in death. Watch me, Lionel . . . watch me—and do not be afraid! That is the secret which you must learn—not to fear death. For death can be beautiful, when life has been beautiful, as our life has been, dear—yours and mine."

Silence.

He looked at his wife.

"Death can be beautiful," he thought.

She had closed her eyes. Her accents were very thin and faint:

"I wish, O, I wish I could help you."

He stared at her; studied her white features intensely.

"You are helping me, dear," he whispered. "O, God, forgive me; you are helping me."

Then he broke down. He cried, with queer, cracked, high pitched sobs, as old men cry. He did not hear the door opening, the doctor and the nurse coming in; did hear, a few minutes later, the former saying in a voice that was almost awed:

"Why, Miss O'Reilly, the crisis—she has passed it. It's, O, a miracle, incredible. . . ."

Miss O'Reilly was by way of being Irish and devout.

"I fail to see," she commented severely, "why a miracle is incredible."

Then full comprehension dawned upon Lionel McDermott. He looked at Loretta. A faint flush had come into her cheeks. She was asleep; was breathing quite easily.

He rushed to the door.

"Look here," demanded the doctor, "where are you going?"

"To the studio."

"But, if your wife wakes up and asks for you . . ."

"Tell her that I have gone back to rehearse that last scene. Tell her that I have learned. Tell her that I shall succeed. She will understand."

He ran out of the room, and the nurse shook her head.

"His wife may understand. I don't."

"Nor I."

"Queer people, actors, aren't they?"

"Damned queer," agreed the doctor as he bent to take Loretta McDermott's pulse.

Mercolized Wax Keeps Skin Young

Do you know that just beneath that soiled, discolored, faded or aged complexion is one fair to look upon? Nature causes the normal skin to peel off in tiny, unseen, flour-like particles, a little each day, renewing the complexion of youth naturally, but there comes a time when this skin shedding slows up. Worry, overwork, sickness, inactivity are reasons that cause the face to be blotchy, discolored, pimply and old looking. The thing to do, if you wish to look your prettiest at all times, is to assist nature in the process of absorption by using pure Mercolized Wax. Get an ounce at any drug store or beauty counter and use as directed. It gently but surely peels away the outer scarf skin, removing freckles, pimples, blackheads or a muddy complexion. The underneath skin, now in evidence, is clear, pink, fresh and velvety, and the entire face looks years younger. Mercolized Wax brings out the hidden beauty.

To quickly remove wrinkles and other age lines we recommend a face lotion of unusual merit. One ounce powdered saxolite and one-half pint witch hazel.

SEEK—EXPERIENCED MEDICAL CARE

HUMAN welfare is often placed in jeopardy when strict adherence to known principles is disregarded—either through inexperience, lack of knowledge or deliberate intent.

This is true especially in the treatment of disease, and particularly social diseases, syphilis and gonorrhea. Perhaps nowhere are experience, skill and integrity more necessary than in the provision of medical care for those who have contracted one of these diseases. The harm done by unreliable persons and those who sell nostrums for self-treatment of syphilis and gonorrhea is still incalculably great. Individuals are warned against such unsafe methods—serious results invariably follow. Promises of speedy cures are dangerous and misleading. A correct diagnosis and proper treatment is of vital importance.

Social diseases, syphilis and gonorrhea, can be cured, but the treatment selected must be carefully adjusted to the patient's physical condition together with a close record of its progress and effectiveness. These require the supervision of an experienced physician. Time necessary to effect a cure may be a matter of weeks, months or years, depending upon when treatment is begun and the natural resistance of the patient. When treatment is delayed too long, the doctor's problem becomes increasingly difficult and the possibility of satisfactory results dangerously remote.

Therefore, don't let timidity, false pride or neglect cause permanent injury to your health and wreck your happiness.

Social diseases, syphilis and gonorrhea, are health problems the same as other dangerous communicable diseases, and doctors consider them in that light only. They know that they can be acquired innocently, especially by women and children, and exist unknowingly—often causing serious damage before they are discovered. If you have a social disease or think you have been exposed to a social disease, seek experienced medical advice without delay.

Good medical treatment for either gonorrhea or syphilis, including Wassermann and Kahn blood and other necessary laboratory tests, can be secured within your means from an experienced family physician, or from the Public Health Institute. Treatment also is available through the Institute and many free clinics for those without funds.

The Public Health Institute was organized more than ten years ago to combat "social diseases" (syphilis and gonorrhea) in Chicago. Every facility necessary for competent and reliable medical service is provided. Members of its medical staff are experienced and are registered by the State. All treatment and advice are given by these men and women physicians.

The fees are within the reach of all. The first examination is only $3.00, and includes Wassermann and Kahn blood and other laboratory tests. Six consecutive treatments in the Urological or Gynecological Department for $4.00. Examination and treatment are available to those without immediate funds. No one is turned away because of inability to pay.

More details of this subject will be found in Leaflets Nos. 1 and 2 sent free in plain envelope on request.

Announcement . . . This advertisement has been submitted to and been approved by the Medical Advisory Board which has been formed at the invitation of the Trustees. It is published by a health agency established for public service to inform the public of the dangers of "social diseases," of the importance of securing good medical care, and the facilities whereby this can be obtained.

By B. Laura Brockway.

AN essential thing in keeping your canary healthy, happy, and ready to sing is to keep him free from lice and mites. This is a delicate topic, I know, and it is not a good policy to inform a bird owner that his bird has lice until you become better acquainted with him, at least. But it is a fact that no matter how clean and careful we are sometimes we will find them. They just seem to come out of the air or from the dust. Seldom can we tell where they do come from. They are tiny pests and can be easily overlooked.

One of the first things I do when a bird is brought in for treatment or care is to examine it closely for lice and mites, for they are the seat of a good many ailments. They sap the strength of the bird, making him susceptible to other ailments found among birds, so it is a good thing to guard against these pests, using methods that will make it impossible for them to live.

At the top of most cages is a bolt which goes through to serve as a hanger. It also holds the swing in place. There is usually a cap which prevents the bolt from slipping through. This forms an excellent place for lice to hide and breed and the one place you will find them after they have fed upon the bird during the night.

If your cage is not a painted cage boiling water can be used successfully, after removing the bird from the cage. If your cage is highly polished, just remove this bolt and clasp, holding the cage over a white paper or cloth. Take a small piece of cloth or brush dipped in a good disinfectant and clean this thoroughly. Before putting the clasp back take a little cotton covered with powdered sulphur or any dry disinfectant and put it between these clasps and let it remain. Do not have it so the bird can pick it out. You will find this a great help in keeping a canary free from lice.

A small piece of white cloth thrown over the cage at night and examined the next morning will generally show if there are lice around. If you find lice on the cloth, don't let this worry you and don't let them worry your bird. Start action at once.

Take the bird from the cage, holding him gently by both feet, head down, just as you would a hen, and dust him with a good louse powder. Place him somewhere else, remove the roosts and seed cup, and scald. Give the cage a thorough going over with a cloth dipped in disinfectant. Dry the cage with a clean cloth and put the bird back.

Care should be used that nothing gets on the roosts that will burn the canary's feet.

Scalding and drying the roosts is sufficient and should be done whenever dirty. This subject will be touched upon again in another article.

Bright Sayings

Please address all bright sayings of children to Aunty Bee, The Tribune.

My little daughter, aged 4, came in from play one day and said:

"Oh, mama, I saw the neighbor's baby and she surely must eat a lot of spinach and lettuce and carrots because she's got curls all over her head." F. G.

Carl, who is 3 years old, was standing on the edge of a chair. His mother told him to be careful or he would lose his balance.

He asked: "Where is my balance, mother?" G. M. F.

We recently showed our 5 year old niece a picture of Siamese twins and explained that they were fastened together.

She studied the picture and then asked: "Did they grow together when they were seeing which was the biggest?" J. E. D.

Theater Guild Offers Play of Prairie Types

Lynn Riggs Takes Bow as Dramatist.

By Charles Collins.

WITH "Green Grow the Lilacs" the Theater Guild introduces a new American dramatist, Lynn Riggs by name, who has been receiving ecstatic consideration from the people who dote on "authenticity," "atmosphere," and folklore. This play, which will begin a three weeks' stay at the Illinois theater tomorrow night, marks his first appearance upon the Chicago scene. Let us, therefore, prepare to meet Mr. Riggs.

The proper attire for the occasion is a ten-gallon hat and a pair of chaps, for Mr. Riggs comes from the west and has a nostalgia for the old-time cattle ranges. He writes about the great open spaces, however, like a follower of Synge and Yeats and Lady Gregory rather than like a librettist for a Tom Mix film. Try to imagine an Irish dramatist drunk on the local color of the cow country and you will get an approximation of Mr. Riggs.

He is young; he broke into the big league of the drama only this season, and he strives to write literature rather than plain, practical stage dialogue. He has listened intently to the folk speech of the region where he spent the first twenty years of his life [that part of Oklahoma which was once the Indian Territory], and he causes his characters to talk it in rich, glowing, picturesque phrases. He raises the key of dialect until it approaches prose poetry, which is exactly what the Dublin school of playwrights did to create the mellow tradition of the "Celtic renaissance" in drama.

Dialect Specimen.

Here is a sample of Mr. Riggs' vein, culled from his "Roadside," the play that Arthur Hopkins called "the first American classic" without getting any one to believe it. Texas, the hero, a tremendous blatherskite, is giving an account of the supernatural phenomena that attended his mythical birth:

"Wild horses come a-nickering and trompin' around. Great big b'ars as high as hills begin to growl sump'n fierce. All of a sudden there was a crash and a bang and a clatter. Thunder and hail and lightnin', hell f'ar and brimstone! The cabin where Liza lay cracked itself wide open from stem to stern, beam-end to beam-end, bird-end to gullet! And when the smoke cleared away out I stepped, full-grown, dressed to kill, in a ten-gallon hat, boots and chaps, a gun in my hand and both guns poppin'! And that's how I got started!"

Young Lochinvar.

Mr. Riggs' biographers say that he is now thirty-two years ago; that he left school to ride a cattle train into Chicago and then wandered on to New York; that he returned to his native prairies to become a reporter for a Tulsa newspaper; that he studied and taught English at the University of Oklahoma; that he toured the Chautauqua circuits with a quartet of singing cowboys; that after graduating from the university he worked on a cattle ranch near Santa Fe, New Mexico, and forgathered with the members of the literary colony there. All this time he was writing plays—one-acters, chiefly, and verse. In 1926 he was awarded a Guggenheim fellowship, which sent him to Europe for a year to write what he liked, which proved to be "Green Grow the Lilacs."

Last fall Arthur Hopkins staged his "Roadside," with announcements that a new American genius had been discovered. The New York critics marveled, and the play failed. A reading of the printed text quickly reveals the reason why. In spite of its saturation in local color and its picturesque phrasing, it was not ripe for Broadway staging. Its story element is feeble; it is repetitious of incident. Its "folk" quality was forced and fantastic. Mr. Hopkins was in error when he proclaimed it "the first American classic." Nevertheless it was a work of much promise.

Prairie Ballads.

But "Green Grow the Lilacs" has the theatrical quality that "Roadside" lacked. It rises above the synthetic western stuff with which the stage and the cinema have been overburdened; it rings true as a study of folk character; and its repertory of prairie ballads gives it an element of lyric novelty. These are impressions gleaned from a reading of the text, as published by Samuel French, but I am confident that tomorrow night will find a lusty, breezy open-air show at the Illinois, with literary values in racy dialogue and the brilliant stagecraft of the Theater Guild to provide it with a radiant background.

In addition to "Roadside" and "Green Grow the Lilacs" Mr. Riggs' career as author includes: "The Iron Dishes," a book of verse; "Knives from Syria," a one-act play; "Big Lake," a two-act tragedy; "Sump'n Like Wings," a short play, and "A Lantern to See By," a tragedy in three acts. He is a young man to be reckoned with in the development of the American drama during the next decade.

Playwright from Paris.

The recent première of "Melo" brought to New York one of the veteran dramatists of the French stage—Henry Bernstein. Soon after he stepped off the boat the interviewers discovered that their romantic Gaul was of Polish-American parentage. Nevertheless he is a true Parisian with several literary duels on his record. Some twenty years ago he crossed swords, as the saying goes, with Francis Chevassu, dramatic critic of Figaro, after the latter had written unkindly of Bernstein's "La Griffe." When reminded of this incident, he said:

"That little affair with Chevassu was entirely a personal matter. It

Here's the Most Intimate Air Film Yet Made

Good morning!

Well, you're blasé-er than I am, Gungadins, if "Dirigible" doesn't hand you a thrill.

This film may not be the greatest air film ever made, but, I believe, it IS the most intimate. Others may have surpassed it as a spectacle, but no predecessor has made you feel so actively a participant in its doings as does "Dirigible." I don't like storms and I'm scared of airplanes—SO—you can well imagine the sufferings of this interested party when, willy nilly, through the sheer realism of the film, she was carried high over the Caribbean sea IN a dirigible that encountered a tempest which, after giving a most ghastly exhibition of a wind and rain storm at its worst, cracked up the plane and sent it with its gallant crew—and quaking observer—into the lashing, waiting waters! [Long sentence, but there's a lot in it.]

NEVER on land—or film—have I seen a hurricane so "winged with red lightning and tempestuous rage"!

Dedicated to the U. S. Navy.

"Dirigible" is dedicated to the United States navy. A title avers it could not have been made but for the aid of Uncle Sam's experts, and a press note before me says: "The bureau of aeronautics made available for location four of the most important naval stations—Anacostia, San Diego, Pensacola, and Lakehurst. The latter was the locale of most of the aerial sequences, obviously because it was at Lakehurst that virtually all the lighter than air craft was housed." It is at Lakehurst that the stunning air pageant you gaze upon early in the film's footage takes place.

The piece is big, expensive, informative, and entertaining. Though reminiscent of all air spectacles of the past, including Columbia's own "Flight"—and on a line with the average polar expedition movie, "Dirigible" has much that is all its own. The direction is superb.

The story, while not unlike in pattern from many other yarns, has its surprises. Several decidedly unexpected developments delight your sated soul. You think you have things

Mooney Case Lives Again on Stage; It's Propaganda Play

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—The old Provincetown theater, which is in Greenwich Village below Washington square and was once a stable and later the modest temple of drama from which Eugene O'Neill and many of his works were sent into the Broadway world—the old Provincetown came suddenly and unexpectedly back into its own, last week.

A play called "Precedent," defending Tom Mooney, the San Francisco bomber or martyr, was produced there by a young man of the theater named Sidney Harmon before an audience of socialist and labor luminaries. The play proved to be bigger than even its friends anticipated and is at the moment the talk of a good part of our theatrical town.

"Precedent" is quite frankly a propaganda play. It was written by a St. Louis attorney, I. J. Golden, avowedly a Mooney-Billings partisan, and it is played by actors who are thoroughly convinced that they are taking part in a righteous crusade. It is that sort of enthusiasm that makes for drama when reason holds the crusaders within bounds. Mr. Golden's play, unlike the Sacco-Vanzetti protest, "Gods of the Lightning," is fairly calm in statement, no more than moderately biased and, insofar as the demands of emotional drama permit, dispassionately reasoned.

It presents the case of one Delaney (who, I assume, is a merger of Mooney and Billings that retains the best features of each). Delaney is a labor leader in a certain Queen City in 1916 and he is about to organize a strike for higher wages against the local street railway company, presided over by one Preston.

Delaney Is Framed.

To curb Delaney the railway magnates are willing to go to any length. The day of the parade they are looking out the window of Preston's office when the bomb that killed ten persons is thrown from the roof of a building. That gives one of the Preston hirelings an idea.

What if the bomb had not been thrown from a roof? What if it had been planted in a black bag at that particular corner? And suppose Delaney had planted it? They call in Riley, the district attorney who owes his election to the railway company. Riley proceeds to frame Delaney. He forces the perjured testimony of a harlot, who is in his power. He bribes an old scrub lady with the offer of a better job to identify Delaney as the man seen with the black bag. He buys such other testimony as he needs and gets his conviction. Delaney is sentenced to death by Judge McInerny of the Superior court.

Thereafter, a fighting newspaper editor, Fremont of the Gazette, working with Callahan, attorney for Delaney, turns up the perjured testimony and new evidence to prove that Delaney was a mile from the scene of the crime at the hour of the explosion.

Judge McInerny joins them in an appeal to the governor for pardon. The governor, because of a precedent that denies the consideration of new evidence in any conviction that has been confirmed by the Supreme court, denies the pardon but commutes Delaney's sentence to life imprisonment.

The play ends simply and pathetically, with Fremont, the editor, and Mrs. Delaney on one of their period-

Mary Garden, Colorful Opera Star, Leaves Civic Company

By Edward Moore.

MARY GARDEN is not returning to the Civic Opera company next season, said a news item in this newspaper a few days ago.

This is not intended as an obituary but as an exit, a farewell to the person who, since the organization of Chicago's resident opera company in the year 1910, has always been its most colorful member. In her time she did many glorious things in the name of operatic art. True, she did her share of excruciating things, too, but they were always positive things. There was never anything tentative about Mary Garden. She was always out in the front of the picture, and she always made herself and the Chicago opera talked about.

A long time ago an editorial in this paper said, "Some one is always running Miss Mary Garden through a printing press, and she never seems to provoke the attention." Perhaps not, but she got it.

Miss Garden was not in the first opera given by the Chicago company at the Auditorium, but she was in the second, which was nearly as good. It was "Pelléas et Mélisande." It is curious how the wheel turns in music. People were dazed by five acts of Debussy's music in 1910. Its filmy evanescence was far too much for them then. Last season she revived it again, and I have heard no one who did not declare by all the gods of harmony and rhythm that it was the most beautiful work that ever went upon an operatic stage. So, even though the work never became a best seller—it was good for a rehearing about once every three years—Miss Garden at least educated the public into some liking for Debussy and the musical idiom of his period.

Put Company on the Map.

She did a lot to put the company on the map that season and for several seasons afterwards. Her rôles were brilliant, not only Mélisande, but Louise, Thais, Jean in "Le Jongleur de Notre Dame," the prince in "Cendrillon," Natoma, Dulcinée in "Don Quichotte," Monna Vanna, and above all, Salome, to mention only some of them. These were items that got into the Chicago répertoire because she was here to do them. We never knew how necessary she was in those days until a few seasons later during the war when she stayed in France and other people attempted to do some of her rôles. Then we knew how much she was missed.

Can any one who was on the spot at the time ever forget the comic row over her Salome? Imagine a scene that had Miss Garden on the defense on the one side, being attacked on the other by forces headed by the chief of police, the president of the Law and Order league, and a man whose life chapters had made him variously a kidnaper in a sensational case and an exhorting evangelist! Meanwhile the management of the company stood pat and waited for the dust to settle, finally ordering, "in deference to the wishes of patrons," that the opera be taken from the répertoire. It was not until Miss Garden had her season as general director of the company that she got her chance to sing the part again.

Typical Garden Roles.

It was a strange thing about her artistic career that the rôles mentioned above became almost exclusively Garden rôles. In only a few did any other artist come anywhere near approaching her performances. But when she went in for better known parts her glamour was a little dimmed. At one time and another she tried Manon, Marguerite, Carmen, Charlotte in "Werther," various others, but while she generally managed to give interesting performances, they were by no means the supreme performances of the other operas in which she first appeared.

The fact of "some one always running her through a printing press" was not quite so obvious. Early in her career; in fact, before she ever came back to Chicago, it was discovered that she was "good copy" for the reporters. Having a perfectly efficient set of brains under her red hair, she developed a flair for news values in interviews, and learned to adopt the item that made the best story of the moment. So, at one time there might be a mythical oriental prince somewhere just out of sight over the horizon; at another she "just loved" Chicago policemen; at others she had views on chewing gum and wearing hats in the theater and prohibition. And she never played the same line twice. Wherefore, city editors and reporters alike used to give three cheers when Mary Garden came into town.

Personality Uppermost.

What with one thing and another, she became the logical choice for general director of the company, and in the season of 1921-'22 she directed the most hectic season of opera that Chicago has ever known. It was exciting to be on the spot; it was interesting, if not exactly exhilarating, to read the red ink figures after she got through. Never before or since was there such a deficit. In fact, if Samuel Insull had not come along about that time, picked up the wreckage, and rearranged it into a new and permanent form, there is more than a chance that Chicago would have been without an opera company. His hand however, has guided it safely through all subsequent storms, and he, realizing that the time was limited when the Auditorium could be used as permanent headquarters, created the new

OUR TOWN

Paragraphs About Some Folks You Know

P. M. KADEL, grand old man of Our Town, passed another milestone Monday, his 84th birthday. Friends streamed in and out of his house at 3443 West 60th place all day, and there was a birthday cake sent all the way from Rock Falls by a grandniece. Mrs. C. H. Brown, H. Dean Ingalls and Merrill E. Ingalls were among the relatives who called to pay their respects. Our Towners will remember that Mr. and Mrs. Kadel celebrated their 61st wedding anniversary on her 80th birthday last December.

A jaunty postcard came to us last week—a picture of a Mexican troubadour strumming a guitar under the adobe walls of the governor's palace in San Antonio, Tex. Mrs. Gordon Holland, head of the junior auxiliary of the Woodlawn Woman's club, was the sender. It said she and her mother and little daughter were enjoying the peach blossoms and missions and Spanish singing so much they would stay on until the middle of May—as long as Mrs. J. M. Macdonald was seeing the Woodlawn juniors through the season so successfully.

One more artistic achievement for Vanderpoel school. The work of Mrs. Lewis Sorrell's art pupils has been chosen to represent the district at the Western Arts asociation convention in Louisville Tuesday.

Delwin Campbell was one of the lucky thirteen cadets who received letters at Kemper Military school in Boonville, Mo., for his prowess on the school rifle team. He did his bit in bringing the school 45 victories in 50 matches. He is a son of Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Campbell, 5115 Cornell avenue.

WHILE we're mentioning teams, they're so keen about bowling out in Beverly that St. Paul's Union church had to divide its teams into an Eastern and Western conference. The victory of the Princeton team was celebrated at a banquet of the whole league the other night. Broadcasting was a feature of the program with Mrs. Reid Bennett, Mrs. David Maver and Mrs. Oscar Nelson doing Clara, Lu, 'n' Em and A. H. Moulton and C. Heppes doing Amos 'n' Andy. And the entire program was broadcast to the bedside of Robert Huffnagle, a bowler who's been laid up as a result of an automobile accident.

Moving day is with us again! Mrs. and Mrs. S. R. Moses and son, Robert, have deserted the domicile at 7220 Yates avenue for an apartment hotel at 5528 Hyde Park boulevard.

The juniors understudied the seniors at Thornton Township High school, Harvey, last week and got out an issue of the Thorntonite all by themselves. Next year they'll have to do it regularly, so Miss Emilia Novotny and O. Fred Umbaugh, who run the paper, decided they should have a chance to try their wings beforehand. Eugene Barna was editor in chief and Virginia Marquardsen associate editor.

Burglars, marauders, take note! Morgan Parkers enjoyed their indoor shooting so much this winter at the Ridge Community center rifle range that they're going in for long range shooting outdoors next season. Philip W. Upp, 1731 West 105th place, manager of the club, has applied to the war department for the necessary equipment.

If you keep chickens, and like to keep them, consult Charles Odell of 14830 Robey avenue, Harvey. His chickens were stolen a few weeks ago, but nothing daunted, he purchased more chickens. This time, however, he installed an alarm. A few days or nights later, at 12:45 a. m., he was awakened by the alarm. Coming on the run he found the chicks intact. A good night's sleep well lost, Charlie!

MOVING day, again! Mr. and Mrs. Delbert Smith have moved from Brainerd — but they're still in the Ridge district. Their new address is 1836 West 105th street. Still in the center of things for one of our town's busiest clubwomen.

Florida still calls. Mrs. Charles M. Mickelberry, and her daughter, Eleanor, of 10337 South Hoyne avenue have been away on a motor trip to Miami. And R. H. Greene of 9851 South Winchester avenue went to Florida on his way to South America on business, Miami being the first port of call.

Charlie Church got a scare the other day when he fell asleep at Marsh school, 98th street and Escanaba avenue, and got locked in. If it hadn't been for the South Chicago police flivver squad he might have spent the night there, but about 7 o'clock the squad turned up and turned Charlie out.

Russell Waterman of Englewood High school and Willard Watson of Tilden Technical High school came back to school Monday after a week in Washington, D. C., at the Junior Red Cross convention. They were two of three delegates chosen to represent Chicago.

Several bright young men have received promotion at the South Chicago Savings bank. Herbert Gunnet, note teller, is now third assistant cashier, taking the place of Harry C. Kriewitz, who has been made first assistant cashier. Guy A. Nelson, first assistant cashier, is now third vice president and trust officer; N. M. Frederickson, former second assistant cashier, is cashier, and William F. Mulcahy adds the duties of second assistant cashier to his job as auditor.

News about yet another grand old man: Thomas Milcrist is back in our midst again, at the home of his daughter, Mrs. F. T. Bascom, 10861 Prospect avenue, after three months in Hot Springs, Ark. He celebrated his return by observing his 94th birthday with a party for his children and grandchildren.

Teaching Future Citizen to Think, Principal's Aim

O'Hearn Tells Ideal for School in Democracy.

By Betty Browning.

MAKING good citizens of its students—that is the prime responsibility of the high school as Daniel F. O'Hearn, principal of Englewood High school, sees it. A thorough democrat himself, Mr. O'Hearn believes that on education depends the future of American democracy.

"In this country we give the vote, a share in the government, to every one. Likewise we afford every one the opportunity for a high school education, and every one is taking it, where a few years ago only a small proportion of the population went beyond grammar school," Mr. O'Hearn remarked.

"Obviously, then, the high school has both a great opportunity and a great responsibility—to prepare this electorate of the future for its duties as citizens. High school years are the critical years prior to adulthood when traits essential to good citizenship can be crystalized permanently in the student's makeup. What characteristics the student develops in these years determine the citizen of 20 years hence—in fact, the future of the country."

To teach the student not subjects, but to think, to exercise judgment independent of emotional or personal considerations is the most important lesson to be imparted by the high school, Mr. O'Hearn believes. Both in the classroom and in extra curricular activities the student is given opportunity to use judgment, to act responsibly on his own initiative. Mr. O'Hearn is in favor of the student's being permitted sufficient freedom to make his own decisions and therefore profit by his own mistakes.

Puts Responsibility on Student.

"Taking the student into the teacher's confidence, presenting the problem to him, leaving the responsibility of solving it to him—that is more or less what we are doing in class work now," Mr. O'Hearn said. "The teacher is not interested in packing information into him, but in having him think over a problem, and reason out the solution independently. Sometimes, naturally, his solution will not be the right one, and he will come to grief, but in the end he will find his way out and learn much more in the process than if he is supervised every foot of the way.

"Clear, logical thinking is something that cannot be drilled into a pupil; the teacher is only the guide, the sign post who stimulates, leads the pupil to think for himself. Upon this ability to think logically good democratic government depends. The ballyhoo, the personalities which color every political campaign and which bring in the votes show how much education has still to accomplish on this score."

Extra curricular activities are even more valuable than classroom work in developing independence of thought and responsibility in the student, Mr. O'Hearn feels. He cited student government as an example of the responsibilities with which the high school vests the students. Students enact laws regarding conduct, order in the halls, upkeep of school buildings and grounds, he pointed out. Culprits who violate the laws are sent before a student court for judgment and punishment.

Concerned Over Uninterested.

Clubs based on class work or hobbies, such as the stamp and riding clubs, language and science clubs, music and dramatic clubs, also were mentioned as giving the student scope for individual though and effort. Mr. O'Hearn emphasized, however, that only about 20 per cent of the students are interested in such activities now. Increasing this proportion is one of the problems of educators, he declared.

"Our greatest difficulty is to reach a large number of students who do not want to think, who are not interested in any special hobby, and who have no particular talents. These students are often conscientious about mechanically learning facts and mechanically setting them down, but where any original line of thought is called for they balk. We must reduce this number, stimulate them to mental activity, if the public of the next generation is to be intelligent and cultured."

Mr. O'Hearn is a native Chicagoan, having lived on the south side most of his life. He was born in 1879 in the vicinity of Harrison and Jefferson streets, but when he was still a small boy his family moved to the neighborhood of 29th street and Lowe avenue, then a district of prairies and cow pastures. Mothers used to drag their children out of the road when cowboys drove herds of steers along Archer avenue to the stockyards, he recalls.

Long an Elementary Teacher.

Mr. O'Hearn went through grammar school at All Saints' school, 25th and Wallace streets, then went to the old South Division High school. He took the general course in elementary school training at Chicago Normal college under Col. Parker, and in 1899 was assigned as teacher at Mark Sheridan school, in his old neighborhood at 27th and Wallace streets. Three years later he was transferred to Corkery school, at 25th street and Kildare avenue, and six years later, in 1908, he was elected principal, becoming the second youngest principal in the system.

In February, 1922, he was transferred to the new Roswell B. Mason

VOICE of the SOUTHWEST SIDE

Chicago Jubilee Is Of and For All Chicago

"A festivity that will go down in history as of all Chicago and for all Chicago," Col. Robert Isham Randolph thus describes the Chicago Jubilee in making plans for the event.

And the cities within the city are enthusiastically responding to the opportunity to join with the central district in celebrating Chicago's civic and industrial rebirth. It is from the neighborhoods that much of the color and impressiveness for the loop's pageantry must be recruited. Neighborhood demonstrations will play no small part in the Jubilee week's program.

The outside world cannot fail to take notice with such wide and wholehearted coöperation contributing to the success of the occasion.

LET NEIGHBORHOODS JOIN COURTESY DRIVE.

The neighborhoods are all included in Mayor Cermak's campaign to promote courteous treatment by public employés. It is a city-wide affair. Suburbs may also accept the suggestion. Visitors are inclined to judge the whole city family by treatment accorded by any of its members. Each of the cities within the city contributes to the general impression.

A few years ago THE TRIBUNE sent forth to the various neighborhoods a politeness reporter with a prize of $50 to be given to the most courteous person encountered during a day's adventure. Many folk who felt at the time that they could easily have won the prizes had they been warned in advance overlooked the fact that courtesy always pays.

Pleasantness toward the prospective customer or favors for those obviously in a position to return them differ from that unselfish courtesy which, without hope of reward or fear of punishment, goes a bit out of the way to allay any passing stranger's bewilderment.

The politeness reporter, as the result of the prize distribution, could not fail to observe that the winners possessed qualities in common that not only made life smoother for those with whom they came in contact, but more interesting for themselves. They were everyday winners during what otherwise might have been life's dull and sour routine. Courtesy was its own reward. That courtesy has its commercial advantages, successful business houses and public service institutions have long since learned.

Chicago and its neighborhoods are preparing to play host to the outside world. Courtesy encountered by this host of visitors will play a large part in the sort of impression of the city that is carried away. And what's good for the visitors is good for the home folk, day in and day out.

SAVE THE CHILDREN FROM AUTOS.

Announcement is made that 30,000 children from south side school district No. 9 are participating in a safety campaign directed by J. J. Smrhal, district superintendent. Safety posters are being displayed in 25 schools, and a safety parade has been planned.

With the automobile death rate in Chicago for the first two months of 1931 increased 28 per cent over the corresponding period of 1930, there is added need for such crusades. Change of weather which permits outdoor play lends to the hazards confronted by children along the streets. Daylight saving time, with its extra hour for play, is another factor that will make the problem more acute.

Indians and bears of the story books stir the imagination of youthful readers, but, in their most dangerous days, such ogres exacted a trifling toll as compared to the high-powered motor car when its pathway is carelessly crossed. Unless fenced off for the occasion, the day when children safely play in the streets has passed. To those who are called upon to face motor traffic perils, words of caution cannot be too often repeated.

SEEING NEIGHBORING INDUSTRIES.

Without doubt members of the South Shore Chamber of Commerce returned from their recent tour of the Illinois Steel company plant with a deeper pride in the gigantic industry that has made its district known throughout the world. Imagine the enthusiasm and eagerness with which any lively chamber of commerce would seek the establishment of such a plant in its community.

In becoming guests of the steel company for a day, the visiting business men learned of the benefits of nearly $60,000,000 in improvements made at the mill and went away with better understanding of its workings.

This tour by the South Shore group offered a suggestion to other neighborhood organizations which, in the Chicago area, are rather inclined to take their varied and vast manufacturing plants for granted. If the industries which have sought the Chicago location because of its many advantages are the source of awe to visitors from the outside, certainly they are worthy of a visit from the homefolks, to whom they mean most.

BUILDERS GROUP WILL PRESENT SHOW OF SHOWS

The Master Builders, Order of Builders, 7th division, will present their "Show of Shows" at 8:15 o'clock Saturday evening in the Englewood Masonic temple auditorium, 6733 Yale avenue. Both stage stars and south side artists will appear on the program.

Included among the entertainers are Princess Nadee Kaya, daughter of a Hindu prince and known for her telepathic faculties; Miss Calle Harcourt, concert violinist; Tiny Tim Horan, 8 years old, soloist, and the Illinois Central male quartet, winners in the 1930 TRIBUNE music festival. Also the "Gray Ghost," friend and mechanical advisor of the late Harry Houdini, is to be on hand.

Chapters of the order participating include Avalon Park, Brighton Park, Englewood, Lawn, Liberty, Ogden, Square, and Unity. Charles Albrecht, 1741 West 80th street, is in general charge of arrangements.

ALL SOUTH SIDE TO JOIN JUBILEE WITH OWN FETES

Communities Plan Local Celebrations.

Build Up Community!

The Metropolitan section of The Tribune has since its inception devoted itself to the upbuilding of Chicago's communities. Participation in the Chicago Jubilee may mean much to your neighborhood. The Metropolitan section will devote all its facilities to making the neighborhood celebrations a success. Advice and assistance will be given to any individual or group wishing to take part. Telephone Superior 0100, The Tribune's public service office.

Chicago's south side is to be an integral part of Chicago Jubilee week, beginning May 11 to let the world at large know that the second city of the nation, with its myriad of neighborhoods and shopping centers, is worthy of its slogan, "I Will."

No celebration could be complete without the participation of outlying business centers as well as loop interests, leaders of the Chicago Association of Commerce asserted, and accordingly invited representatives of community business organizations to a conference at the Palmer house on Thursday. Within 24 hours the south side was taking its place well at the head of the Jubilee procession.

South Shore in Van.

Two communities along the south shores of Lake Michigan already are in the midst of preparing demonstrations which will rival in intensity anything that the downtown business men can offer. At the same time plans are being prepared by a number of other organizations for other ambitious displays to attract shoppers to their merchants' doors.

The South Shore chamber of commerce is in the van with plans to make a full week of it. There will be flags and bunting aplenty; street and store windows will be dressed up for the occasion; there will be parades and a massmeeting. Morgan Fitch and E. J. Ryan, chairmen of the business promotion committee, have been named by Arthur C. Clemensen, president of the chamber, to outline the celebration. It is to cover the entire section between 71st and 83d streets from Stony Island avenue to the lake.

No Halfway Measures.

"There will be no halfway measures," declared Mr. Fitch. "We plan to have something doing every day. We want everybody to know that we are up on our toes down here; we do not intend to be left behind by the celebrations downtown. This will give our merchants a special opportunity for announcing new spring merchandise to prove that we are a mighty progressive community."

A monster mass meeting, preceded by a parade through the entire south shore community, is scheduled for Friday evening. At this occasion Ald. Barnet Hodes, newly chosen 7th ward reperesentative in the city council, is to be introduced to the residents of the entire ward for the first time since his election. Mr. Fitch expressed the hope that Mayor Cermak would be able to appear at this meeting.

Legion to Coöperate.

Matters of importance to the development of the community will be discussed at the mass meeting, and it is hoped that it will be possible to make definite announcements on the Yates-Jeffery-Southeastern boulevard improvement work, as well as the long sought 7th ward park.

The South Shore post of the American Legion already has expressed its desire to coöperate and will have its band in the parade and at the meeting. Further plans may result in the bands of Bowen and Hyde Park High schools taking part.

In addition to Mr. Clemensen, Mr. Ryan, and Mr. Fitch, the chamber's executive committee is working on the Jubilee plan. This includes Walter F. Schmidt, John E. Wolfe, Earl Walsh, Charles L. Gerds, and John Seemans.

South Chicago Plans Pageant.

The South Chicago Chamber of Commerce has had plans under way for some weeks for a special sales week to be known as the South Chicago Pageant of Progress. It has been decided that this will take place May 11-16 as a part of the Chicago Jubilee, according to a statement Friday by L. D. Jones, executive secretary.

Store windows are to be regaled in holiday style and special attractions will be offered by the merchants to stimulate the entire business and community fiber of South Chicago Other high spots in the week's celebration are to be mapped out this week.

Meanwhile, a twenty page circular with rotogravure cover is being prepared to acquaint residents of the entire community with the values to be offered. Men working on this committee with Mr. Jones and Ed. H. Burke, president of the chamber, include James P. Galligan, chairman, George A. Platt, Edward Gassman, W. G. Gibson, and L. Brissenden.

Roy Promises Celebration.

"There will be one big time down here," assured Mr. Jones. "We are going to give away a lot of prizes and you can bet there will be none of the carnival atmosphere missing. We even plan to have a good old steam calliope."

Walter Roy, business manager of the South End Chamber of Commerce and one of those called into the conference last week, promised to have a real celebration outlined in a few days.

"We are not yet ready to make an announcement," said Mr. Roy, "but you can always count on Roseland's being in on every progressive bit of business enterprise. We will have a jubilee to rival any of them."

Woodlawn Begins Work.

Theodore Becker, president of the Woodlawn Business Men's association, has begun work with a group of his members to make certain that the district around the 63d street and Cottage Grove avenue corner has a major part in the festivities. All the merchants have been invited to the luncheon meeting of the association Tuesday at the Hayes hotel, when definite plans are to be laid.

Decision has been made tentatively to have special window decorations in all stores, with a sale climaxing the week. The association also is scheduled to open White City officially for the spring, and it is expected that this occasion will be made to coincide with Jubilee week.

Chatham to Take Part.

The Chatham Chamber of Commerce will meet in a few days to consider what form its part in the jubilee will take. While unable to make any definite statements, L. A. Friedeman, secretary, declared that he was certain the business men of the district will want to go into the idea wholeheartedly.

Definite assurance was given last week that the South Woodlawn Chamber of Commerce will participate in the jubilee following a meeting of the board of directors Friday evening. The extent of plans will be determined at a meeting of the chamber tomorrow, it was announced by Eugene J. Mooney, chairman of the board of directors.

55th Street to Take Part.

The 55th Street Business Men's association is expected to take up the proposition at its meeting tomorrow noon, but the nature of its action is undecided, according to J. G. Strader, vice president. D. Gordon Ramsay, president, was out of town and could not be reached.

The Oakland Business Men's association headed by C. M. Clarke will have a meeting in a few days to decide what is to be their share in the jubilee. Charles Hirschfield and Frank Stanley, president and past president respectively, declared the East Side Chamber of Commerce to be in complete harmony with what they termed a "splendid idea." The course of action has not been determined as yet, however. Leonard Fish, president of the Englewood Business Men's association, was enthusiastic for the idea of communities taking part in the celebration, but was not ready to announce any plans for his group.

Lindblom Inter Nos Club to Give Dance Saturday

The Inter Nos club, composed of alumni of the June, 1929, class of Lindblom High school, will give its third annual dance Saturday evening in the crystal ballroom of the Hotel Shoreland. Officers of the group are Harold Rahn, president; Harold La Dolce, secretary, and Robert Peterson, treasurer, who is chairman of the dance committee.

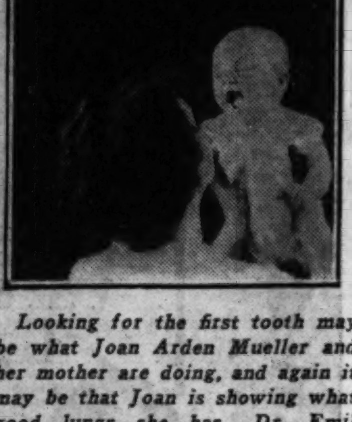
West Lawn Boosters to Hear Restriction Report

The West Lawn Improvement association will hold a public meeting at 8 o'clock Tuesday evening at the Calvary Lutheran church, 62d and Kenneth avenue. J. N. Zimring, chairman of the association's restriction campaign, will make a full report on the progress of the drive to date.

NANCY ANNE KNOWS HER TRAFFIC COPS

Tact at a tender age is displayed by Miss Nancy Anne Miller as her brother, Charles, arrests her for speeding. "Never Talk Back to an Officer" is the title Mrs. J. D. Miller of 7350 Crandon avenue gave this picture, which won her the first prize of $5 this week in The Tribune's amateur photo contest for south siders.

Monday may be wash day, but it's not blue Monday in this little group. Mrs. W. W. Imm, 1745 East 84th place, won second prize of $3 for her picture of Iris Anderson, 8434 Cregier avenue; Virginia O'Connell, 8414 Cregier avenue, and Joan Imm, 1745 East 84th place.



Looking for the first tooth may be what Joan Arden Mueller and her mother are doing, and again it may be that Joan is showing what good lungs she has. Dr. Emil Mueller, 11105 South Hoyne avenue, received the third prize of $2 for this picture of them.

WHO'S WHO ON SOUTH WEST SIDE

Henry W. Bonnema, one of the southwest side's most active workers, might be called a home product, for he was born and grew up in Englewood. Recently he was elected president of the new West Auburn Community Civic Council of Associations, and he also is treasurer of the West Auburn Business Men's association and chairman of parks and zoning for the Foster Park Improvement association.

HENRY W. BONNEMA.

Mr. Bonnema, who is 70 years old, attended Beale school, later studying plan reading. He is head of the Highland Decorating company, a firm of painters and decorators in West Auburn Park, where he has lived nine years. He is secretary and treasurer of the Painters and Decorators Mutual association.

Motoring is Mr. Bonnema's chief hobby. He spends free week-ends and vacations driving his car, and has included most of the country in his itinerary at one time or other. He likes camping, too, and golf whenever he has time. The garden around his house takes up a good many of his spare moments in summer. Mr. Bonnema is married and lives at 8501 South Laflin street.

BRAINERD PLANS MAY FETE WITH QUEEN, DANCING

A May festival with election of a May queen, maypole dancing by school children, a prize baby carriage parade, and street dancing will be held the afternoon of May 23 in Brainerd under the auspices of the Brainerd Men's club. This announcement was made last week by Dr. Alvin D. Geffert, 8911 South Loomis street. Dr. Geffert will be co-chairman of the festival with Frank Trautman, 8912 South Loomis street. Entries for May queen or for the baby carriage parade will be received by either chairman beginning this week.

U-Neek Players to Give 4 Act Comedy Tomorrow

"The Attorney for the Defense," a four act comedy, will be presented by the U-Neek players of the Wilkinson School of Music tomorrow evening at the Auburn Park Masonic temple, 7832 South Union avenue. In the cast are Miss Frances Kenny, Miss Bethel Grimpe, Miss Mae Noonan, Miss Winifred Sloan, William Kinnisten, Henry Nance, Jack Stapleton, Len Baker, Edward Kinnisten, and Charles Olsen. Miss Margaret Kathryn Reardon is directing the production.

WRITE SPRING POEM WITH CAMERA AND WIN TRIBUNE CASH PRIZE

Spring is Sprung! Wandering among the daffodils may inspire the young photographer to make some snappy shots. The Tribune continues its offer of $5, $3, and $2 as weekly prizes for the best amateur photographs received. All subjects are eligible to be treated in the photos for this contest, but we suggest that they be in keeping with the season. Photographers must be, as heretofore, of amateur standing. An amateur photographer is one who has not sold photographs for commercial gain.

Lakes, ponds, rivers, the new spring bonnet, the children, unusual views, the woods, the meadows, the streets, and, in fact anything indoors or out is a legitimate subject for an amateur photograph.

Send your best photo to the Photo Contest, Metropolitan Section, The Tribune. Three prizes will be awarded each week in your own metropolitan section, north, west, or south. The full name and address of the person submitting the picture should be printed clearly on the back of each entry, with the full name and address of each person appearing in the picture, left to right.

school, 18th street and Keeler avenue, erected at the semi-centennial of the Chicago fire to commemorate the mayor of that time. In May, 1924, he was transferred to Lawson Elementary school, 13th street and Homan avenue, then the largest elementary school in the city, with more than 3,100 pupils enrolled.

His first high school experience came in 1927, when he became head of the new Westcott Junior High school, located in the building just vacated by Calumet High school. Six months later, in September, 1928, he was made principal of Englewood Evening High school, and in February, 1929, became principal of Englewood High school. His experience also includes the principalships of the Graham Summer school, the Jirka, Goodrich, and Lawson evening schools.

When Mr. O'Hearn went to Englewood he found himself among old friends. Many of his pupils were children of boyhood neighbors in All Saints' parish. He has been a resident of the west side since his marriage in 1911. He resides at 5422 Quincy street. He has two sons at Crane Junior college and a daughter in the fifth grade.

Gillogly, 7211 South Union avenue, will be followed by a program by women of the church.

"BUY AND SAVE" CARDS OFFERED TO SPEED TRADE

Englewood Stores Start 6 Mo. Bargain Plan.

"Buy and save!" This is the slogan of a campaign to stimulate business around the 63d and 69th and Halsted street corners which is to be launched Tuesday under the sponsorship of the Englewood Business Men's association. More than 20 merchants have entered into the neighborhood promotion plan, which is to extend over a period of six months.

Trade books containing almost 900 savings coupons will be sold, one to a family, with an estimated total value in savings of more than $200. These will be sold for $1.95 each, and are to be sold by south siders, in accordance with the stipulation of the business men's association that all possible be done to help employment.

"The fine thing about the whole plan," asserted Leonard Fish, president of the Englewood Business Men, "is that it does not cost the merchant a penny until he makes a cash sale. Further than that, it is a plan in which the small as well as the larger merchant can participate to draw business to the community.

Sale Price Covers Costs.

"The entire cost of printing the books, obtaining contracts with merchants, selling the books, and paying for the promotion is covered by the sale price. It should be a fine thing for building up business for the merchants participating and also should stimulate buying along Halsted street."

In some instances, as in the case of a barber shop which will give a manicure free with a haircut and shave or a violet ray treatment with a massage, the merchants are offering other goods free with a purchase. In other cases the buyer may obtain a reduced price or gain an added money value in trade upon presentation of a coupon.

Each coupon has its value, a statement of the offer it is good for, and the place at which it may be used printed on its face. Establishments making the special offers will make good on them only to holders of the coupon books. The contracts call for redemption of coupons up to Oct. 31.

Economy in Meals and Cleaning.

One cleaning establishment alone offers a saving of $30 in its coupons, which are good for cleaning two garments for the price of one, with collection and delivery service included. Three restaurants are in on the plan, offering their meals at reductions of 20 to 30 per cent. The total savings in these cases total $26.

Drug store savings in the form of two for one fountain service are listed at about $14. Half soles will be at a two for one price in a shoe repair shop coöperating in the plan, while a hat will be cleaned free with each pair of heels, according to the offer on another coupon. These savings are to total more than $10.

The housewife has been considered especially in the trade and save books, as there are bargains in groceries, meats, coffee, hosiery, dresses, bakery goods, and infant wear. Also, a jewelry store has offered a $2 discount on each $10 purchase when one of the jewelry coupons is presented. Another offer provides brooms, brushes, etc., to be given away with purchases of paints and paper. These items amount to more than $10.

The high point of the week will be a joint luncheon meeting of the Englewood Business Men's association, Englewood Civic and Commercial association, Tri-Parks Business Men's association, and Fifty-ninth Street Business Men's association.

Other major meetings will be the Kiwanis and Keystone clubs on Tuesday and Friday noons, respectively. These groups meet at the Y every week.

Also there is a physical therapy department. Outdoors there are tennis and horseshoe courts and an athletic field. A departure of the last year to make the Y more than ever a community club has been the admission of women and girls to swimming privileges.

HENRY BONNEMA HEADS CIVIC BODY OF WEST AUBURN

New Community Group Organized.

A community council, representing some 17 civic and improvement organizations, churches and schools in the West Auburn Park district was organized recently at a mass meeting at the Barton school, 77th and Lincoln streets. Henry W. Bonnema, 8501 South Laflin street, treasurer of the West Auburn Business Men's association and chairman of parks and zoning for the Foster Park Improvement association, was elected president.

The council was formed at the invitation of Miss Kathryn Steinmetz, principal of the Barton school, in accordance with a movement to organize similar councils in various parts of the city started by William E. Bogan, superintendent of schools. The council has been called the West Auburn Community Civic Council of Associations.

Encourage Civic Projects.

The purpose of the council, as stated in the constitution already drawn up, is to encourage civic and cultural improvements in the community, to seek legislation beneficial to the associations affiliated with the council, to encourage improvements in the community's interests, such as parks, streets, and lights, and to increase coöperation between associations in the district.

"A large number of organizations interested in civic matters existed in the community, about two dozen in all," Mr. Bonema stated. "A council of this sort was needed to unite their efforts in matters of general interest to the community, to increase the effectiveness of those efforts."

Questionnaire Sent Out.

In order to determine the council's future line of action a questionnaire has been sent to each of the affiliated organizations, inquiring as to the projects in which they are interested. These questionnaires will be brought in at the organization's next meeting the third Wednesday in May and projects of general interest to the community selected from the list for the council to work on.

The council will consist of three representatives from each of the affiliated organizations, one of which will be elected to the board of directors of the council. Organization of the board of directors is expected to take place at the next meeting. Meetings will be held on the third Wednesday of every month.

Organizations Represented.

Organizations which were represented at the first meeting include: the Barton, Cook, and Calumet High School Parent-Teachers associations; the Calumet High School Band Sponsors, the Calumet High school Fathers' club, the Englefield, Auburn Highlands, North Auburn Highlands, and Forest Park Improvement associations, the Bethany Methodist Episcopal church, the Bethany Men's club, the Cook school, the Fort Dearborn school, the Hope Reformed church, McCullough post, American Legion, Mount Zion Lutheran brotherhood, and West Auburn Business Men's association.

In addition, Mr. Bonnema declared, that almost all of the remaining organizations in the territory are expected to join the council. The Foster Park Baptist church and the Loomis Boulevard Property Owners' club are among the organizations which have signified their interest in the project, he said. There are approximately two dozen organizations eligible to join in the district, he pointed out. Halsted and Western avenue, 74th and 87th street are the boundaries of the territory.

Other Officers Named.

Officers of the association elected to serve with Mr. Bonnema are: Walfred Benson, 7708 South Hermitage avenue, Englefield Improvement association, vice president; Miss Steinmetz, corresponding secretary and business manager; Mrs. Sidney C. Hines, 7801 Souht Sangamon street, Calumet High School Parent-Teacher association, treasurer; Sandusky Williams, 6714 South Peoria street, Calumet High School Fathers' club, recording secretary.

ENTRIES POUR IN FOR TRIBUNE'S GARDEN CONTEST

Judge for Honor Roll During May.

BY PAUL POTTER.

Whether it's large or small, formal or informal, so long as your garden is entirely the product of one or more amateurs it is eligible for entry in THE TRIBUNE's spring, 1931, contest.

Following announcement last Sunday that THE TRIBUNE would announce a garden honor roll for Chicago and nearby suburbs during May, entries have been pouring in, indicating a renewed interest in the awards for noteworthy gardens by both men and women, as well as two young persons, one a clerk and the other a stenographer.

All that is necessary to have your garden, or that of a relative or friend, judged for the THE TRIBUNE honor roll, is to fill in and mail the entry blank appearing in this section or supply the same information it asks for.

Dr. A. C. Wilhelm First Entry.

Doctors, dentists, engineers, business men find time with their wives to garner endless enjoyment and satisfaction from their gardens. The first entry in THE TRIBUNE's newest competition was Dr. A. C. Wilhelm, 3040 North Mansfield avenue.

"If you want to see a real garden where heart and soul are put into it, come on out here," declares Mrs. E. J. Lannan, next door neighbor, who expresses approval of Dr. Wilhelm's efforts. "This garden is where nature is."

Hundreds of such beauty spots, some of them tucked away between beshrubbed fences in the heart of an apartment district, others spread over a more spacious suburban yard, are quietly admired by neighbors and passerbsby, as well as by the immediate family.

Rules Are Simple.

They are deserving of the recognition and widespread publicity which THE TRIBUNE's judging committee metes out to 30 to 50 gardeners each spring and fall. The limitations in the selection of winners are few and simple:

1. Garden may be entered by its owner, with signatures of two friends; or by a neighbor or relative with one other signature.
2. The judges are required to submit a uniform and unbiased score form for each entrant from which the winners are made. The judging begins May 8.
3. Only gardens planned and cared for by amateurs are eligible. No paid or professional help is permitted.
4. Entries must be mailed not later than midnight May 5, 1931.
5. Those previously awarded certificates and places on the honor roll for fall gardens may reënter their gardens if the flowers are suitable for spring showing.
6. Only gardens located within 40 miles of Tribune Tower are eligible.
7. Each winner will receive an engraved certificate naming him or her to a place on the honor roll of outstanding gardens in Chicagoland, and the list will be published in THE SUNDAY TRIBUNE, with pictures of the most unusual gardens. Later, a booklet listing and describing all honored gardens will be issued by THE TRIBUNE and given widespread circulation.

Clubs to Get Recognition.

There is no cash inducement in this competition, the aim being to select the genuinely interested gardeners and and thus to stimulate greater interest in exchanging ideas and floral achievements throughout the Chicago and suburban area.

Special recognition of communities whose gardens are entered, and of women's clubs and garden clubs whose members compete in this contest, is to be given while the judging is taking place, and when awards are announced.

All nominees will be entitled to receive a copy of the score card with their scoring, thus indicating the improvements or changes which the judges recommend. In addition, information and suggestions will be supplied freely to the nominees when requested.

Five Nurses Compliment Miss Fanning at Dinner

Miss Jane Fanning, superintendent of nurses at the Jackson Park hospital, was a special guest at a dinner and theater party given by five remaining members of the 1930 staff of nurses of the hospital recently. The dinner was given at the Canton Tea garden. The nurses who complimented Miss Fanning were Miss Lena Shanko, Miss Elizabeth Williams, Miss Irene Strong, Miss Edwina Whitted, and Miss Palmer Mathers.

Hyde Park Junior Club Plans Informal Dance

The Hyde Park Junior club will journey to the northwest side for its annual informal May dance, which will be held at 8:30 o'clock next Sunday evening in the Pompeiian room of the Logan Square Masonic temple, 2451 North Kedzie avenue. Miss Beatrice Rosen is president of the club and Miss Shirley Kanarish is chairman of arrangements for the dance.

S. SIDE PETITION ASKS STATEHOOD FOR COOK COUNTY

Park Manor Group Is Sponsor of Plea.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Springfield, Ill., April 25.—[Special.]—John C. Garriott Jr., Republican representative from the south side, presented a petition to the legislature this week calling for the secession of Cook county from Illinois and setting up of a separate state.

Representative Garriott entered the petition at the request of the Park Manor Improvement association, 7101 South Park avenue. It was signed by the association's directors, Gerald H. Voss, Charles S. Duffett, W. O. Ferguson, M. J. Connelly, William J. Cleary, William V. Tyler, Frank Trautman, Edward Reusnow, John O'Neil, and J. F. Shaughnessy. The failure of the legislature to reapportion the state to give Cook county its proper representation is given as the prime reason for the move.

Text of Petition.

The petition, which was placed on file with the clerk of the house of representatives, reads:

"Your petitioner, the Park Manor Improvement association of the 13th senatorial district, containing 381,368 residents, represents that the right to petition for relief from oppression, redress of grievances, goes back into history, and is preserved in the first amendment of the federal constitution and in the 'bill of rights' of the state constitution.

"Your petitioner further represents that in the Magna Charta clear and prominent we find the motto, 'No tax without representation,' that in the declaration of rights issued by the congress at Philadelphia on Sept. 5, 1774, we find that the 'foundation of English liberty, and of all free government, is a right in the people to participate in their legislative council, and as the English colonists are not represented, and from their local and other circumstances cannot be properly represented in British parliament, they are entitled to a free and exclusive power of legislation in their several provincial legislatures'; that Patrick Henry stated that, 'Taxation of the people by themselves or by people chosen by themselves to represent them is the distinguishing characteristic of British freedom, and without which the ancient constitution cannot subsist.'

No Remapping Since 1901.

"Your petitioner further represents that this honorable assembly has failed to reapportion the state of Illinois into senatorial districts since the year 1901, in accordance with the constitution of said state and that the Supreme court of this state has in substance said that it cannot compel the legislative branch to perform its duty, which is clear and unmistakable, to apportion the state into senatorial districts.

"Your petitioner further represents that the senatorial districts are so out of proportion that the members of the general assembly do not equally represent the people of this state; that the largest district in population contains 863,231 inhabitants and the smallest contains 44,677; that the 13th senatorial district contains 381,368 inhabitants, which is more than those contained in five of the downstate districts, namely, 12th, 16th, 32d, 34th, and 46th [380,495]; that the 13th district has one senator and three representatives to 15 representatives and five senators of the five districts aforesaid; that the 15th district is larger in population than any one of the states of Vermont, Delaware, Wyoming, and Nevada.

Cook County Has Majority.

"Your petitioner further represents that the population of Cook county is 3,982,123 and of Illinois, not including Cook, or "downstate," is 3,648,541; that of the 51 senatorial districts in Illinois, Cook has only 19; that of the 27 representatives in congress, Cook county has only 10; that of the 7 state officers, the governor, lieutenant governor, secretary of state, auditor of public accounts, treasurer, superintendent of public instruction, and attorney general, only one is from Cook; that of the 173 executives, superintendents, commissioners, and board of state departments, only 52 are from Cook county; that of 7 justices of the Supreme court, only one is from Cook county.

29 of 35 Taxes for State.

"Your petitioner further represents that of the 35 different state taxes, the greater part of which is paid by residents of Cook county, all of the proceeds of 29 taxes go to the state of Illinois, and that there are a series of bills now pending before your honorable body that would require the state, instead of the county, to pay the salaries of Cook county judges, shorthand reporters, superintendents of public welfare, directors of public welfare, probation officers and probate judges.

"Your petitioner further represents that there is a strong demand by the people of Cook county for reapportionment of the state into senatorial, Supreme court and Congressional districts; for relief against unbearable taxation; for unification of local governments; for home rule and other matters; and that such matters can only be settled by amendment to, or revision of, the constitution.

"Wherefore, your petitioner prays that in accordance with article four, section three of the federal constitution, your honorable body consent and that congress be petitioned for its consent to the formation and erection of a new state, to include that territory lying within the boundaries of Cook county; that you appoint a commission to determine what share of the indebtedness of the state that the inhabitants shall assume and that necessary legislation be enacted to grant the relief desired."

Att: Metropolitan Advertising

Gentlemen:

Two years ago this month we placed our first ad in the Sunday Tribune Metropolitan Section which circulates on the South Side.

The first week's results convinced us. There was no mistaking what brought us so many new customers. From then on we decided to advertise on a regular weekly basis and our sales showed a steady increase.

In August, 1929, we opened a second and much larger store on the North side featuring the same high quality line of juvenile furniture, carriages and clothing that we offered through our South side store. We then began using the North side Metropolitan Section.

Now with these two locations we are making use of the North and South Metropolitan Sections practically every Sunday. Our business has continued to show steady increases. We get mail orders from many places in Illinois, Wisconsin, and Indiana.

We are using no other form of advertising and we do not hesitate to say that the rapid growth of this business owes a great deal to the advertising we have done in the Tribune Metropolitan Section.

Sincerely yours,

Advertising in the Tribune Metropolitan Section draws customers from all parts of the North side and the suburbs to this Slumberland Juvenile department store at 1542 Devon avenue.

"There was no mistaking what brought us so many new customers"

IN MARCH, 1929, the "Slumber-Land" Juvenile Department Store, 2211 E. 71st street, decided to give the Tribune Metropolitan Section a chance to show what it could do. They placed an advertisement in the Metropolitan Section of the Sunday Tribune which reaches 11 out of every 14 families living on Chicago's great South side.

"The first week's results convinced us," writes Louis Rubin, General Manager. "There was no mistaking what brought us so many new customers. From then on we decided to advertise on a regular weekly basis and our sales showed a steady increase.

"In August, 1929, we opened a second and much larger store on the North side, featuring the same high quality line of juvenile furniture, carriages and clothing that we offered through our South side store. We then began using the North side Metropolitan Section.

"We are using no other form of advertising and we do not hesitate to say that the rapid growth of this business owes a great deal to the advertising we have done in the Tribune Metropolitan Section."

Advertising in the Tribune Metropolitan Section has increased sales and boosted profits for scores of Chicago merchants and retailers. Large and small stores alike have cashed in on Sunday Tribune pulling power.

Don't decide that your business can't take advantage of Metropolitan Section advertising until you have examined the complete facts. A Tribune man will be glad to give them to you, without obligating you in any way whatever.

Call Superior 0100 tomorrow. Simply say that you would like to have more information about advertising in the Metropolitan Section.

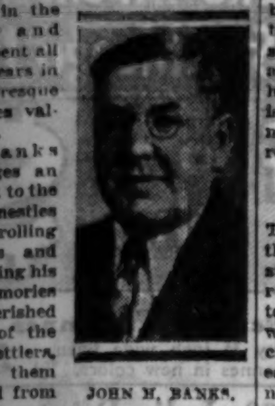
WILLOW SPRINGS MAYOR SEEKS TO RESTORE NAME

John H. Banks Cherishes Traditions.

In electing John H. Banks as its mayor, Willow Springs has honored a resident who was born in the community and who has spent all of his 47 years in the picturesque Des Plaines valley suburb.



JOHN H. BANKS.

Mayor Banks acknowledges an attachment to the town that nestles near the rolling Palos hills and supplementing his own memories are the cherished traditions of the early settlers, most of them now passed from the scene.

"Willow Springs," the new mayor recalls, "derived its name from the fact that beneath a nearby willow, in the old days, a bountiful spring sparkled and flashed with its wealth of carbonic acid gas. Doubtlessly, the Indians, who left many relics in the vicinity, drank from the spring. It disappeared when the drainage canal was dug, but the neighborhood still boasts of several fine springs.

Seeks to Restore Name.

"The name of the community was changed 33 years ago when Willow Springs and Mount Forest were incorporated as Spring Forest," adds Mayor Banks, "but the old name has stuck and it is one of my dreams to have it officially restored.

"Aside from being a beauty spot, Willow Springs, located only 17 miles from the loop, might have been a thriving Chicago suburb today had the two railroads—the C. & A. and the Santa Fe—developed service that would have been attractive to commuters. It has been one of my campaign pledges that the village coöperate in the fullest possible manner with other municipalities along the Des Plaines valley that we may obtain better commuter transportation.

"Willow Springs was one of those towns along Archer road that sprang up along the old Illinois and Michigan canal when that project was under construction. I have heard the old timers tell how the boats came up from Ottawa to stop here for water. Later, along the canal from Summit to Sag, was a great ice house district for supplying the Chicago trade.

Town Lifted Out of Mud.

"Like so many other communities in the Chicago territory, the coming of concrete highways a few years ago has lifted the town out of the mud and banished our isolation.

"Our first settlers were Irish, with only one German—Jacob Koller—and they called him Irish, too. Phillip Koch, now in his 85th year, tells how the Indians camped here and how, as a boy, he heard the howl of wolves in the Palos hills. The old folks farmed in the hills and when their boys grew up they had a way of leaving the homesteads to become firemen and policemen in Chicago. And they all became good ones, too. Later the Germans came onto the farms, then the Bohemians, and more recently we have welcomed many Lithuanian families. Along with the changes has come the buying up of numerous nearby farms for the forest preserve.

Willow Springs Features.

"Other great changes are in store for Willow Springs. We are now linked up with Chicagoland by splendid concrete highways. Within the year the Santa Fe railroad will move its terminal here. We are in the line of the new deep waterway. We are next door to the wonderful Palos park playground."

Mayor Banks retains a vivid memory of the fire that swept Willow Springs in the fall following an active summer in his home town during the early nineties, when the drainage canal was constructed through the locality.

With his brother, H. J. Banks, he conducts a general store that boasts of handling "a million items," including everything from pins and needles to coal and ice. Mayor Banks' father, J. H. Banks, was the pioneer postmaster and general store proprietor.

PRINCETON AREA WILL CLEAN UP, BEAUTIFY YARDS

A "front yards beautiful" drive was opened last week by the Princeton Community association. Circulars are being distributed urging both landlord and tenant to clean, spade, rake, and plant their yards.

W. J. Ammen, 248 West 61st place, chairman of the committee, said, in urging wholehearted coöperation: "Clean and well kept front yards show pride in home and community, attract others, enhance property values, and make for health and happiness. Both tenant and landlord benefit."

Members of the committee and officers of the association have offered their services in telling how things can be greened up at minimum cost. Members of the committee besides Mr. Ammen are E. H. Briggs, F. V. Coster, C. S. McDonough, C. W. George, J. F. Hogan, and P. Staudacher. Carl F. Shean is president of the association.

H. C. LAYCOCK HEADS BAPTIST SOCIAL UNION

Hartley C. Laycock, 10744 South Hoyne avenue, was elected president of the Chicago Baptist Social union, at a dinner Tuesday evening at the Hotel La Salle. Mr. Laycock is president of the People's National Bank and Trust company. Other officers elected were: Dr. A. R. E. Wyant, 7106 Princeton avenue, vice president, Charles J. Major, 2328 South Michigan boulevard, secretary, and Mrs. Silvester Schiele, 2028 West 110th street, treasurer. The Bapist Social union was organized in 1877.

Neighborhood Theaters

A father and son whom every one in the family, young and old, will recognize and sympathize with are Lewis Stone and Leon Janney in "Father's Son," a picture made from Booth Tarkington's story, "Old Fathers and Young Sons." The film is showing today at the Marquette and Highway theaters, and today, tomorrow, and Tuesday at the Stratford theater.

Leon plays a lively, mischevious, but lovable small boy, and Stone, his father, a stern old fashioned parent with rigid notions of discipline which quite conceal his real affection for his boy. Irene Rich as the mother is the buffer between the two, understanding both points of view. Finally, after her son runs away, she takes his part, and for a time the family is divided, but a circus and a deus ex machina in the person of a Dr. Bob reunite them in the end.

Spoiled Girl Wields Scepter.

"Bad Sister," showing Wednesday, Thursday, Friday, and Saturday at the Englewood RKO theater, tells the story of a spoiled young miss who rules her parents, brothers, and sisters and all the small town beaux with a high hand. Along comes the city slicker and she learns a well earned lesson. Conrad Nagel and Sidney Fox co-star in this production.

"Parlor, Bedroom, and Bath."

"Parlor, Bedroom, and Bath" was a champion laugh stimulant on the stage, and it loses none of its potency on the screen, with the added presence of Charlotte Greenwood of the lengthy legs and arms, and Buster Keaton, unsmiling as ever. Buster plays a sign tacker who suddenly finds himself in the rôle of a great lover. Reginald Denny and Cliff Edwards do their share to make things merry.

Two Fisted Heroes, Fair Ladies.

A western picture especially for fans who like their bad men bad, their heroes two fisted, and their ladies fair is "The Conquering Horde," starring Richard Arlen and Fay Wray. Fay is the beautiful owner of a ranch and 5,000 head of cattle in Texas just after the civil war when cattle were going a-begging, and confidence men were buying up the lands of impoverished ranchers at a few cents an acre. Richard Arlen is the hard riding, hard fighting youth who sees her through her difficulties. The picture will be shown Wednesday, Thursday, Friday, and Saturday at the Stratford theater.

"Royal Family" and "My Past."

"The Royal Family" and "My Past" are the double bill scheduled for the Marquette and Highway theaters tomorrow and Tuesday. The doings of the Barrymores as Edna Ferber, and Jed Harris chronicled them in their successful play form the basis of the play. Ina Claire plays Ethel, torn between love of stage and desire for a peaceful married life, and Mary Brian, her daughter, Gwen, likewise torn between love and a career. But Frederic March wins the honors as John Barrymore, and Henrietta Crosman nearly outplays him as the grand old lady of the family.

"My Past" brings two sweethearts of real life, Bebe Daniels and Ben Lyon, together as sweethearts on the screen.

MARBLE, SKATING TOURNEYS WILL RULE AT PARKS

Roller Meet to Open Saturday.

Marbles and roller skates, youth's salute to spring, will be given full sway in the playgrounds of the south park system this week. Skating meets for boys and girls will be held at Sherman park beginning at 2 o'clock Saturday afternoon, while the preliminaries of the marble tournament will be run off in the 18 parks during the week.

The winner and runner-up in each park will compete in the final marble tourney at Grand Crossing park on May 6. There will be six rings in the semi-finals, with six boys in each ring. The six winners will compete in the final round.

Skating in Four Classes.

The roller skating meet has been divided into four classes, one each for boys under 12, boys under 15, girls under 14, and girls under 17 years of age. There will be a coast for distance in each of these classes, as well as a single skate race. This will be for 100 yards in all divisions except for the girls under 14. They will race for 50 yards.

With the cream of a gang of 150 model airplane builders and juvenile aviators participating, some 60 boys contributed to the best set of endurance marks ever set in the south park contest in the Washington park armory.

Raymond Adams of Mark White and Andrew Johnson were neck and neck in excellent junior performances, Adams' plane nosing out Johnson's by a margin of 6 minutes 3.8 seconds to 6 minutes .6 seconds. Third place went to Al Teed of Hamilton. Other winners: Steve Kopec, Davis, fourth; Edward Smoletis, Gage, fifth; Glenn Reiber, Hamilton, sixth.

Henry Pacevitz Wins.

The senior competition was won handily by Henry Pacevitz of Mark White with a record of 7 minutes 45.4 seconds. His other two attempts were well over 6 minutes. Frank Neisimisen of Hamilton was second with a flight of 6 minutes 10.8 seconds. Others who placed: Steve Klazura, Bessemer, third; Mike Holly, Gage, fourth; Kermit Weinberger, Bessemer, fifth; Walter Schuleff, Bessemer, sixth. The keenness of the competition is indicated by the sixth place winner's time of 4 minutes 52 seconds.

Points scored by the parks in the two contests: Mark White, 40; Hamilton, 27; Bessemer, 15; Grand Crossing, 15; Gage, 8; Davis, 5.

Civic Opera Singers Heard in England

Covent Garden Season Starts Tomorrow.

LONDON.—[Special.]—Every year America, and Chicago in particular, has reason to take a deeper interest in the ten weeks of grand opera which makes the Royal Opera house at Covent Garden in London the Mecca of opera lovers from all over the world during the short summer season. When the Chicago Civic Opera and New York's Metropolitan have closed their doors, and the summer season at Ravinia Park has not yet begun, Covent Garden attracts many of America's favorite singers to her historic boards.

Tomorrow night the curtain will rise on Strauss' "Der Rosenkavalier," a favorite "first night" piece, brilliant and lighthearted, reflecting the spirit of the audience, which includes every one who "counts" in social London.

Chicago has a representative among the singers on this first night. Her latest recruit, whose début last fall at the Civic Opera was one of the outstanding events of the season, is an old favorite at Covent Garden. Lotte Lehmann, the German soprano, will be heard in one of her most delightful rôles as the Marchioness in "Der Rosenkavalier."

"The divine Lotte," as Paris has named her, is justifiably thrilled at the moment of writing. While singing recently at the Comédie Française she received the decoration of the Legion of Honor—a tribute rare among women and, if I am not mistaken, Lotte Lehmann is the first woman of German nationality to be so honored since the war. A dramatic lyric soprano, Lotte Lehmann is known for her singing of Wagner and Strauss, and is a regular favorite at the Vienna and Berlin opera houses.

Frida Leider Returns.

Another singer of Wagnerian rôles who vies with Lotte Lehmann in popularity both in European opera houses and at Chicago is Frida Leider. She has returned to Covent Garden each summer since her first appearance there in 1924, when Bruno Walter brought her from Berlin to sing Isolde, a success which made her the talk of the season. Although Mme. Leider is chiefly associated with dramatic soprano rôles, her range enables her to sing the part of Kundry in "Parsifal," in which she will be heard at the Bayreuth festival this summer in performances conducted by Toscanini.

Her husband, Prof. Deman, is also a musician, a violin instructor and virtuoso, and a friend of Einstein. At their home in Berlin the scientist and the professor are often to be found amusing themselves by playing classical sonatas, for the man of science is also a musician.

Although born in the same year as Frida Leider, Maria Olszewska reached Chicago first. She made her début there in 1928 and was at once recognized in America. She hails from Bavaria and was discovered by the conductor, Nikisch, who heard her in operetta and, struck by her voice, at once engaged her for the Leipzig opera, where she found her true métier as a Wagnerian contralto.

A newcomer to Chicago last season who was already well known at Covent Garden was Eduard Habich, of the bushy eyebrows and piercing dark eyes. Although he was one of the first to be reëngaged at the Civic Opera for next season, Chicago has only tardily recognized his worth, for he has been a popular figure on the German operatic stage for many years and this year will celebrate his twentieth consecutive season at Bayreuth. His most famous part is that of Alberich in the "Ring," in which he will be heard at Covent Garden, as also in lighter vein in "Der Rosenkavalier" and "Der Fledermaus."

Sang with German Opera Co.

Covent Garden will welcome this year a new all-American singer, Juliette Lippe, a Wagnerian dramatic soprano, who leaped into fame last year when she made a tour with the German Grand Opera company, scoring sucesses in Chicago, Washington, Baltimore and Philadelphia.

The name of Beniamino Gigli, "the new Caruso," as he is hailed wherever he sings, is a household word among music lovers of America. Although he has had many thrilling experiences in his career of fame, he counts among his most memorable the wonderful reception he received on his début in London last year on the stage where Caruso had reigned so long as king. He will be heard, among others, in one of his best rôles this year, that of the Duke in "Rigoletto."

Associated with Gigli in many operas, both in New York and London, is Rosa Ponselle. She sang in London last season in "La Traviata" prior to her first appearance in that rôle in New York. She will sing the title rôle in "Phedre," the opera by her teacher, Romani, which is the only novelty scheduled for the coming season.

Bruno Walter, the conductor-in-chief of the German operas, is to visit America again next fall; while the conductor in charge of the Italian half of the season is Tullio Serafin, the musical director of New York's Metropolitan.

The Usual Repertoire.

Last, but by no means least, is Chicago's own artistic director, Charles Moor. Each summer he returns to Covent Garden to find the scenery and costumes a little more faded, the lighting more antiquated. He needs all his vast experience and skill to refurbish the operatic paraphernalia which has done duty for so long. His entirely new production of Mozart's "Magic Flute" is therefore awaited with much interest.

Except for this and the aforementioned novelty, "Phedre," the répertoire promised appears somewhat stereotyped. Two cycles of the "Ring," "Tristan and Isolde," and "Lohengrin"; "Der Rosenkavalier" and "Der Fledermaus"; four Verdi operas, including the great "Falstaff"; Puccini's "Turandot" and "Gianni Schicchi," as well as the ever popular "Bohème"; Zandonai's "Francesa da Rimini," unfamiliar to Londoners, these make up the short season of international opera. Not exciting, but where funds are scarce we play for safety and rely on the great singers and established operas with a wide popular appeal, rather than court danger with novelties which may bring nothing to the box office.

IN "MY MARYLAND"

LOUISE KIRTLAND

SHE'S the prettiest of the Dixie belles who flutter around the heroine of "My Maryland," the operetta now at the Grand Opera House. If that doesn't identify her for you, pick out the character called Sally, whose brother has gone cuckoo over Barbara Frietchie. Miss Kirtland will have better parts before the history of American operetta gets much older.

Studio Jubilee Recalls Early Movie History

Gigantic Strides Made in Films Since 1894.

By Rosalind Shaffer.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal.—[Special.]—Hollywood is as sentimental over anniversaries as a pair of newlyweds. Perhaps this is because "the motion picture industry is still in its infancy," an oft quoted remark, and because its comparative youth makes it howl loudly for a birthday cake with candles.

The cinema village in April celebrates the twentieth jubilee of the Paramount Publix corporation, with the company's annual convention being held in San Francisco. Adolph Zukor, during the season of 1911-'12, first conceived the idea of "famous players in famous plays" and started production of the first Paramount-Famous Players picture.

During the twenty years that have passed Paramount has given the public Gloria Swanson, Wallace Reid, Bebe Daniels, William S. Hart, Douglas Fairbanks, Mary Pickford, Mary Miles Minter, Harold Lloyd, Rudolph Valentino, William and Dustin Farnum, Tom Santschi, Robert Edeson, Theodore Roberts, Rod La Rocque, and Pola Negri.

Picture Developments.

Reminiscences by B. P. Schulberg, managing director of production in Hollywood Paramount studios, recalls some of the early film history that is commemorated in April.

"On April 22, 1893, motion picture photography had been developed to the point where the human face could be photographed at such range that it covered the screen. On April 20, 1894, the Holland Brothers opened their peep shows in a store at 1155 Broadway, New York City. Ten kinetoscopes which ought to have been ready for the World's Fair in Chicago in 1893 comprised the exhibit. This was the birthday of motion picture exhibiting.

"Edison had been too busy on more serious things to get what he considered a toy ready in time for the big World's Fair. The toy took so well that there was a big production rush to supply subject matter for the peep shows."

Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Farrell.

The most determinedly in love married couple that Hollywood has seen for a long time is composed of Charlie Farrell and Virginia Valli [Virginia McSweeney in the old Chicago south side school days]. They recently returned from their honeymoon trip abroad and are living at Virginia's former bachelor girl home temporarily while planning with architects over a new home. Charlie and Janet Gaynor are to be continued as co-stars from all present plans.

Madge Bellamy is selling her show place home here and is going to Europe to stay at least a year or two. Madge seemed to be at the height of a promising career just after "Mother Knows Best," three years ago, but had a fight with Fox officials and her contract was dissolved. That was her last starring appearance. It is possible she will appear in films abroad.

A newspaper syndicate offered Estelle Taylor $15,000 if she would agree to write ten articles about her marriage to Jack Dempsey. Estelle indignantly refused. "One thing I never will do is to write about personal affairs," she said, "particularly when the affairs concern others who might be hurt besides myself."

Cecil De Mille, who has headed his own film producing organizations three or four times during his long span as one of the industry's headliners, is now engaged in negotiation which may result in his again becoming an independent magnate. His last attempt was the ill-fated effort to swallow up the Metropolitan studios and the Pathe organization, and it probably would have succeeded but for the period of depression in the movie industry immediately preceding the talkie era.

Here Is Most Intimate Air Film Yet Made

By Mae Tinee.

all figured out and know JUST what's going to happen—to discover that you're wrong. [I like that, don't you?]

The love interest circles about the two naval air aces—and the wife of one of them. Jack Brandon, commander of the navy dirigible, Pensacola, secretly and silently adores the wife of "Frisky" Pierce, record breaking navy plane pilot who is an incorrigible grandstand player.

Called to Washington.

The action starts with Brandon's appearance in the Washington office of Admiral Martin, whither he has been called. The navy, he is told, plans to sponsor an expedition to the South Pole, headed by a w. k. and persistent explorer, named Rondelle. The admiral wants Brandon to persuade Rondelle—who is set on going in a plane—to use a dirigible instead, and desires that the ace give such an exhibition of the blimp's prowess that the explorer will see the light.

"I'LL convince him!" promises Brandon, his nice, bright, intelligent wire-haired terrier eyes alight with elation over the prospect of the trip.

And convince Rondelle he does. He sews up his argument completely by persuading "Frisky" to hook his plane on the belly of the Pensacola. If Rondelle will feel better with a plane, why, the Pensacola will cart one along for him. . .

Now, here's where Helen Pierce comes in. She doesn't want her husband to make the trip.

"PLEASE tell Frisky he can't go—without letting him know that I've said anything!" she begs of the man who loves her, with tears in her eyes.

And this after Brandon has requested Pierce for the job—and the papers have been full of stories of the contemplated expedition. . . !

Well—"Frisky" doesn't go. Not that time. But—see pix for further news of what happens.

"Dirigible" is magnificently photographed. How Columbia ever filmed that storm scene is beyond me! However they did it, it's a bangup sequence in a bangup air picture.

The acting is excellent—with my heart tenderest toward Jack Holt.

And NOW—will some one please come forward and write a story in which HOLT gets the girl. . . !

ROOTING through a drawer of stuff I came upon a press notice of the year 1926 in which JOSEPH M. SCHENCK avers that "Sex stuff is out of style"! . . . SPENCER TRACY, who was so grand in "Up the River," will have the leading male rôle in a coming aviation comedy tentatively titled "Ground Hogs" . . . JOAN BENNETT instead of Janet Gaynor will be CHARLES FARRELL'S leading lady in his next picture, it is said. . . . LILA LEE is back home in Hollywood after a long rest at Prescott, Ariz., where RENEE ADOREE is also under treatment. Miss Lee will, it is thought, start work on a new movie in about a month. . . . BETTY BRONSON has been signed for an important rôle in "Lover, Come Back." . . . THOMAS MEIGHAN'S picture, "New Sinners," is completed and will soon be released. . . . "MICKEY MOUSE" has joined United Artists. . . . CHARLOTTE GREENWOOD will play a rôle in "Palmy Days," which stars EDDIE CANTOR. . . . CLARA BOW says she's going to write her life story so that it may be told the way it oughta. . . . The two funny ladies, EDNA MAY OLIVER and LOUISE FAZENDA, will have important parts in "QUEEN OF HOLLYWOOD," adapted by Paramount from the Sinclair Lewis story, "Let's Play King." . . . Richard Bennett will play the rôle of a father in his daughter Constance's first Warner production, "Bought."

Stage Talent to Adorn Boards of Movie Theaters

Talkies Start Demand for Real Live Artists.

By Tom Pettey.

NEW YORK.—[Special.]—Just about the time it began to look as if talking pictures were becoming self-sufficient, stage presentations for the movie houses bobbed up as a "dominant factor." Now we learn that no movie bill is going to be anywhere near complete this summer without a trimming of flesh and blood actors.

Michael Marco of the firm of Fanchon & Marco, who is looking after the Roxy stage shows, declares we are in the midst of a "stage renaissance." Here is what Mr. Marco says: "The talkies and the singing pictures have really started a fresh public demand for real, live artists in the picture theaters. Eventually the condensed stage entertainment we give at theaters like the Roxy will create a new interest in full length stage shows, the legitimate, so called.

"But with all the best actors appearing in the movies, the theater will have to go to the talkies for its casts. Right now Hollywood cannot spare any talent for the revival of the legitimate, but in a year or two this condition will adjust itself and the new blood for the theatrical renaissance will come from moviedom. A strong legitimate stage can only be helpful to the talking picture producers. The picture people will put the legitimate theater back on its feet."

Something New Needed.

Well, staging flesh and blood acts is Mr. Marco's business, but if he wants the public to flock to the movie houses in increasing numbers, he must give them something new. The average stage presentation seen hereabouts is a thing of beauty, but not always as entertaining as straight vaudeville.

Then, too, the stage shows must not be too long. The oftener the turnover of audiences the bigger the profit, and even now it is getting so that one can spend a half day or entire evening in the movie house. Shorter, snappier programs would be welcomed during the summer season, I believe.

London and Sunday Films.

Some rather amusing comment on the talkies has come out of London, recently. The Sunday movie bill has just been approved in the house of commons, despite a deluge of propaganda from reform and blue law societies. As a matter of fact Sunday movie shows have been run in England for a long time in defiance of the three centuries' old law. In the debate on Sunday movies certain original criticisms were voiced.

"I fail to see the difference between looking at a mummy in a museum," said George Lansbury, commissioner of works, who does local preaching on Sundays, "and a film in a movie house. The movie, however, is a better thing to open than the saloon."

Sir Alfred Butt, theatrical producer, said he had discovered that "people who go to cinemas on Sunday refrain from going to theaters on Monday," and "that Sunday movies were bad for the legitimate stage."

Robert Louis Stevenson's quotation concerning the Scot who "honored the Sabbath with a sacred vacancy of the mind" was introduced into the debate.

Coming Talkies.

Pictures in store for the next few weeks include John Barrymore in "Svengali." The film is based on George Du Maurier's "Trilby," and shows Barrymore's famous profile covered with a beard. Marian Marsh is the feminine lead.

Clarence Darrow is Carl Laemmle's latest find. Mr. Darrow is entering the movies late in his career in a film called "The Majesty of Life." Advices state the picture will reduce the evolution theory to a simplicity that can be understood by movie audiences—even in Tennessee. Mr. Darrow has been working with a Smith college zoölogy professor for the last month on the problem of putting the story on the film. Film work is being rushed in studios here.

"Other Men's Women," a railroad boarding house melodrama, is the attraction at Warner's theater with Mary Astor as the biggest side of the triangle. "Quick Millions," a story of the bulding racket, is on view at Roxy's. Courtenay Terret, ex-World reporter, is the author. Spencer Tracy is the star.

A British film version of the Milne mystery play, "The Perfect Alibi," is showing at the Cameo. "Skandal Um Eva" [the Scandal of Eve], a German production, is at the Eighth Street playhouse. It is worth while for its clever character studies and concerns a young school teacher who adopted a baby, but failed to tell her neighbors.

There are a lot of other pictures, but one cannot see them all.

Here's some news. Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne, who signed a film contract with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer some time ago, have decided on their first picture. It will be the Noel Coward comedy, "Private Lives," now running on Broadway.

Mae Marsh is coming out of retirement to play the lead in "Over the Hill," a coming Fox picture.

Jimmy Durante has been signed to make a motion picture. He made one in the silent days.

THE VOICE OF THE MOVIE FAN

If you would like your letters printed in this column please write on ONE side of the paper ONLY. If you want a personal answer send stamped, self-addressed envelope—PLEASE!

Pertinent or Impertinent?

Dear Miss Tinée: Just a few pertinent questions: Now that the squawkies have succeeded in getting rid of Corinne Griffith, who is there to take her place? Who can rank with her for sheer beauty and queenly grace?

Do the Bennett girls, Connie and Joan, imagine that they fill the bill? Are they anything more than walking clothes horses, and, if so, what? And who ever told them they could act?

And how long must we sit and suffer while the baby faced dolls such as Janet Gaynor and Nancy Carroll and that awful Helen Kane strut their stuff across the screen? When will the directors wake up to the fact that we want something stronger than baby prattle in our movie fare?

When, if ever, will the big shots of Hollywood realize that when they kicked out stars of the Emil Jannings magnitude and hired a lot of puppets of the Buddy Rogers and Charlie Farrell size they made the mistake of their distorted lives? If they must have their marionettes talk, why can't they make them talk like he-men?

And why, O why, is Maurice Chevalier? DISGUSTED.

Editor's note: Many, I fear, will cry "Why is—YOU!"

Movie Stars Classified.

Dear Mae Tinée: Joan Crawford is not an actress in the true sense of the word. She has no innate histrionic ability. True, she has an intensely dominating, vivacious personality, which accounts for her remarkable success, but she is merely herself in her rôles and portrays a type.

In her category I may place such screen luminaries as Maurice Chevalier, Jack Oakie, Will Rogers, Clara Bow, Lew Ayres, Nancy Carroll, Janet Gaynor, and others, who are fascinating personalities, but not actors and actresses. They are merely themselves. Imagine Chevalier, Oakie, or Rogers in a serious rôle.

A true actor is able to interpret life in its varied moods, phases, and emotions. The really great actors and actresses are George Arliss, Walter Huston, Wallace Beery, Charlie Chaplin, Edward G. Robinson, Chester Morris, Richard Barthelmess, Conrad Nagel, George Bancroft, Fredric March, John Barrymore, Marie Dressler, Ruth Chatterton, Greta Garbo, Barbara Stanwyck, Ann Harding, Constance Bennett, Claudette Colbert, Norma Shearer, and a few others. Very truly yours,

STAN LEE KAPUSTKA.

Editor's note: Interesting!

Farewell to Charlie.

My Dear Miss Tinée: Now it can be told—the truth about "City Lights." What a disappointment! The old dodge of the blind flower girl and the good tramp—the drunk whose memory fades with sobriety, the beaten underdog. And THIS is the great genius of comedy! When has there been a picture so weak, unoriginal, uninspired—with nothing but the ghost of a great name to carry it on? The title should have read, "Curtains for Charlie!" for it surely ends his career as an artist. The King of Comedy is dead—long live the new kings, Lloyd, Keaton, Hamilton, Sennett, Gribbon, Laurel and Hardy, Chase, et al., who not only give great comedies but—more wonderful, real and vital—TALK. Goodby, Charlie. You were an amusing fellow—ONCE.

Yours, J. H. BISHOP.

Editor's note: Brave man! There are bricks headed your way!

Estimates of Ruth Chatterton.

Dear Miss Tinée: You are right about Ruth Chatterton! She is hopelessly conceited, painfully affected, always self-conscious and superior, and never, never natural. I have seen Ruth in two pictures and that is two too many.

"PATCH QUILT OF LIFE" TO MAKE BOW ON W-G-N

Minstrel Show Will Be Revived.

A new feature entitled "Ma Brown's Patchwork Quilt," written and to be presented by Erna Phillips, with Leonard Salvo at the organ, will make its initial appearance from W-G-N, THE TRIBUNE station on the Drake hotel, at 2 o'clock Wednesday afternoon. Thereafter it will be heard weekly at that hour and also at 9:45 Friday mornings.

ERNA PHILLIPS. [Theatrical Photo.]

"The patchwork quilt of life," says Miss Phillips, who is also author of "Painted Dreams," a true to life sketch heard each weekday morning at 11:30, "is sewed together by experience of people. Many folks have crazy quilts. You'll find Ma Brown a loveable old lady, a bit old fashioned, but still well abreast the times."

"There will be another character in the story, a young modern, to whom I have not yet given a name. Perhaps she always will be known as just a modern girl. Both she and 'Ma Brown' might live in a big or small city and that is why I believe the feature will interest everybody."

Grace George, star of "The First Mrs. Frazer," now playing in a loop theater, will speak on the W-G-N theater party at 2:10 Tuesday afternoon. This is to be Miss George's first appearance before the microphone. Miss George will be introduced and interviewed by Miss Kirby Davis and her experiences on the stage.

Salerno on New Program.

South America and Cuban rumba music will be featured by an orchestra composed of mandolins and guitars in a program at 9:45 Thursday evening. Lawrence Salerno will be the soloist.

At 9 on Thursday evening Baroness Flora von Westen, contralto, and Gordon Erickson, baritone, will be the guest artists on a program called "Grave and Gay." Baroness von Westen, a Flemish singer of note, has made appearances with Leopold Stokowski and the Philadelphia Symphony orchestra, and with Ossip Gabrilowitsch and the Detroit Symphony orchestra.

Grant and Owen Hour Shifted.

So popular are the double piano programs of Delos Owen and Allan Grant, that they have been moved to an earlier period on the evening programs. Their new time is 9:45 on Wednesday and Friday evenings.

Chester Scott Rowland, whose experiences with the whaling industry began many years ago when as a small boy he traveled with his father, a whaler, will speak from W-G-N at one o'clock, when he appears before the Executive club of Chicago at its regular luncheon program.

Mr. Rowland, who made the interpretation of "Moby Dick" used in the motion picture of that name, will describe in detail the chase and capture of live whales and life aboard a whaling vessel.

Minstrel to Be Resumed.

The minstrel show which proved so popular during the winter months will be resumed Friday night at 8:40 o'clock. Henry Moeller will again be interlocutor, with Hal Gilles and Tom, Dick and Harry as end men.

Intimacy will be the keynote of a program to be called "Fireside Melodies," which will be presented on W-G-N at 8:20 Saturday evenings. The simple beloved tunes of days gone by, favorite operettas, with ballads by Walter Pontius, golden voiced tenor, will be featured in this program.

HELEN ROWLAND WILL SING WITH RUDY AND BAND

Helen Rowland, musical comedy star, will occupy the spotlight as the guest artist of Rudy Vallee and his Connecticut Yankees on their next broadcast, which will be heard between 7 and 8 o'clock Thursday evening through W-G-N and the NBC network. During her stage and radio career Miss Rowland has won a name for herself in the rôle of blues singer. She will be heard singing three new tunes, "Please Don't Talk About Me When I'm Gone," "By My Side," and "If You Should Ever Need Me."

Dean Dennis to Speak Over W-G-N Thursday

Dean Ralph B. Dennis of the school of speech at Northwestern university, will speak on "World Peace" over W-G-N, at 2:20 P. M., Thursday, for the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom.

TOMORROW! 8:45 A.M. (Central Daylight Saving Time) tune in on WBBM

THE W-G-N OPERA COMPANY

Morning Singer

MRS. ELVA GAMBLE.
[Moffett Photo.]

First place in voice in a state-wide contest in Kansas was a starting point in the musical career of Elva Gamble, mezzo soprano, who sings at 10:45 every Wednesday morning on W-G-N. Mrs. Gamble is a graduate of the voice department of the University of Kansas and since coming to Chicago has been active in church, concert, and radio work. She is president of Iota Alpha chapter of Mu Phi Epsilon, honorary musical sorority, and a member of the Lake View Music club and Chicago Artists' association.

Mrs. Gamble features a song by some Chicago composer on each program.

ZIMBALIST WILL BE HEARD OVER W-G-N TUESDAY

Efrem Zimbalist, world famous violinist, will be heard over W-G-N and an NBC network from 8 to 8:30 p. m. Tuesday. Mr. Zimbalist will play four numbers during his share of the program. The first group will include the "Adagio" and "Scherzo," by Hubay, and the second group "Caprice Vienois" and "Tambourin Chinois," both by Kreisler.

The symphony orchestra, under the direction of Adolphe Dumont, also will be heard on the program playing "Petite Suite," by Coleridge Taylor; "Barcarolle," by Offenbach; "Zephyr," by Hubay; "Moment Musicale," by Schubert, and "Waltz Serenade," by Tschaikowsky.

New Licensing Policy Is Adopted by Commission

The federal radio commission has adopted a new policy of renewing licenses of broadcasting stations so that approximately 100 will expire each month, instead of having all end on the same date as heretofore. After the stations are properly scaled, each will be licensed for six months, instead of three as now. The more than 600 stations have been apportioned so that the licenses of one group expire on August while remaining groups will be given renewals at the first of each succeeding month through Jan. 1, 1932.

SUNDAY EVENING CLUB WILL HEAR HOWARD U. HEAD

Dr. Mordecai Johnson is to be the guest speaker at the meeting of the Chicago Sunday Evening club tonight at Orchestra hall. Dr. Johnson is president of Howard university at Washington, D. C. "The Burning Bush" is to be his subject. Beginning at 7:30 p. m. WMAQ will broadcast the entire services.

Clifford Barnes, president of the organization, will be heard first in the deliverance of another of his informal talks. Stanley Martin will follow with an organ recital composed of Clokey's "Fireside Fancies" and Handel's "March."

The soloist on the evening's program is to be Mark Love. Mrs. Mabel Sharp-Herdien, the quartet, and the choir will also contribute to the musical program. The scripture is to be read by Dr. Rolland W. Schloerb, who is associated with the Hyde Park Baptist church.

CARL HILLMANN COMPOSITIONS ON AIR TUESDAY

Recent compositions of Carl Hillmann, well known composer and formerly first violinist of the Chicago Symphony orchestra, will be played for the first time on the radio at 9:30 Tuesday evening from W-G-N by the W-G-N Symphony orchestra, Gaston du Moulin conducting.

CARL HILLMANN.

The program consists of four orchestral numbers: "Gondeliera," "Nodische Legende," "Meditation," and "Impromptu." Two vocal compositions, "Die Wiese" and "Appreciation," will be sung.

Dr. R. I. Lewis to Give Dental Talk on W-G-N

15 MINUTE RADIO PROGRAMS ARE MOST POPULAR

Three-Fourths of W-G-N Periods Are Short.

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

Radio presentations have been growing shorter and shorter the last year or two until the average now appears to be somewhat under fifteen minutes. The few programs of an hour length now on the air include a number of sponsored broadcasts with a reputation of many years. New programs on the air seldom run more than a half hour. The radio audience has grown so vast and all inclusive that apparently only a small proportion of listeners have long stretches of time to devote to radio listening. They tune it in early and late and occasionally during the day but they like something that is over with in a quarter of an hour or less.

Analysis of the programs on W-G-N, for example, on an average day, reveals that only two programs for the day last an hour or longer. The hour program is one coming just after dinner—one that has been there for years—and the afternoon baseball broadcast.

Of the 40 broadcasts for the day 23 are 15 minute programs; six run 10 minutes; two run five minutes. There are six of half hour length and there is a variety program of 45 minutes.

Rudy Vallee does his dancing to Guy Lombardo's music at the Roosevelt grill . . . Guy Lombardo hasn't played that fiddle with which he conducts his orchestra for several years . . . Dr. Frank Vizetelly, who gives talks on words, has received a request as to the corect pronunciation of Rzecyzcyany . . . Morton Downey has sung Wabash Moon into the microphone 260 times . . . radio amateurs are now playing chess over the air—from one continent to another.

Cornelius Vanderbilt Jr. is slated to take to the air shortly . . . Paul Dumont, 5 feet 2 inches is believed to be the shortest announcer on the air . . . Mme. Frances Alda goes for butterscotch pie . . . Something unique in broadcasts was Robert Sherwood's demonstration of a dislocation of his thumb . . . The University of Maine has a "successor" to the "Stein Song." Watch out for it . . . Nat Brusiloff is one aerial violinist who does not claim to play a Stradivarius.

The British Broadcasting company has a parrot answering to the name of Ermyntrude which broadcasts on a children's program . . . The Cumberland Ridge Runners yesterday presented "Adam's Mate," a song written by Abraham Lincoln, and "Vain Man," a song Ann Rutledge is said to have sung for him . . . Homer Rodeheaver, song leader for Billy Sunday, began a series of daily poem readings at 11:15 a. m. over NBC last week.

Paul Whiteman will play Ravel's "Bolero" on his NBC program at 7 p. m. [daylight time] Tuesday evening. Meanwhile Walter Damrosch has adopted Gershwin's "I Got Rhythm!" What has happened to that gap between jazz and classic music?

Incidentally, King Paul and his Jesters, who are coming to the Edgewater Beach on May 16, will be heard locally nightly on and after that date.

GLADYS RICE AND 8 CHORISTERS TO OPEN NEW SERIES

Gladys Rice and her supporting cast of eight male choristers, who will be reviving tuneful old favorites of song and light opera in a series of summer programs, will open their season at 8:30 Wednesday evening over W-G-N and an NBC chain.

Voice of the Listener

W-G-N, Chicago: I have been listening with a great deal of pleasure to your new radio feature "Walt and Skiezix" and can truthfully say I have never heard on the air so natural a picture of normal home life.

The characters are remarkably well portrayed in general, but special mention should be made of Walt and Phyllis, who with their soft voices are what I have always imagined them.

It seems almost incredible that you could secure such ideal impersonations.

Long live Gasoline Alley and W-G-N.

Yours truly,

Theater Guild Offers Play of Prairie Types

had nothing to do with dramatic criticism."

Speaking of this and that, M. Bernstein was quoted as follows:

"The Germans have the best actors and scenery. Unfortunately, they have no plays. . . . 'The Green Pastures' is the first play I intend to see in America. . . . New York is the most beautiful city in the world."

Before the war, Bernstein's plays occasionally found their way to the American stage. Among them "The Thief" is the most easily remembered. "Melo" is his first post-war hearing, although in the last twelve years he has been fairly active in Paris. His output of this period is covered by the titles "Judith," "The Hall of Mirrors," "Felix," "Venom," and "The Day." He is now working on a piece called "Jupiter," which will have a Paris première next November.

M. Bernstein's duels include a meeting with Leon Gautier, in which he "decisioned" his adversary with a neat little thrust of the rapier, and another [opponent forgotten] in which he almost winged an enthusiastic newspaper photographer who edged into the line of fire. He is about 55 years old, 6 feet 3 inches tall, and does not intend to go to Hollywood.

Speaking of Rumors.

The Billboard, theatrical weekly, admits that its recent article on a rumored split in the Theater Guild's organization was incorrect. It was based upon plans for independent summer activity of two employés of the Guild. Robert F. Sisk of the Guild's executive staff reports upon this incident as follows:

"Harold Clurman, a play reader in the Guild, and Cheryl Crawford, the casting director, have plans for a summer experimental group. These plans have been known to the Guild for some time and Clurman and Miss Crawford have had the Guild's support in proceeding with them. Both of these people will remain in the Guild's employ. Next season, the Guild's fourteenth in New York and fourth of road activity, will proceed with the directorate intact and in harmony."

Goodman Crisis.

The Goodman repertory theater closes its season with tonight's performance of "The Sacred Flame." Rumors that abandonment of the repertory company has been under consideration by the trustees of the Art institute have been neither denied nor confirmed. An announcement on the subject will probably be issued by the committee of trustees which handles the Goodman's affairs on or about May 1, when Charles H. Worcester, the chairman, returns from an excursion into the west.

The Goodman has staged eight plays this season, covering a period of twenty-nine weeks. It has offered "The Firebrand," by Edwin Justus Mayer; "Hay Fever," by Noel Coward; "Hotel Universe," by Philip Barry; "The Sea Gull," by Anton Tchekhoff; "Rebound," by Donald Ogden Stewart; "Lazzaro," by Luigi Pirandello [American première]; "The Adding Machine," by Elmer Rice, and "The Sacred Flame," by W. Somerset Maugham. Its deficit for the season's activity, excluding charges carried over on the books from last year, is in the neighborhood of $2,000, which is a close approach to a self-supporting position.

"Ibbetson" for London.

"Peter Ibbetson," the dramatization of Du Maurier's novel, by John N. Raphael and Constance Collier, now current in New York with Dennis King in the title rôle, will be presented in London this spring. Sir Gerald du Maurier, son of the author of the nov[el], will be associated in the produc-

Gotham Stage Will See Many Summer Shows

Producers Promise Keen Activity in Fall.

NEW YORK, April 25.—[Special.] Although spring theatrical activities are a mere trickle, the plans for summer shows along Broadway are abundant. If all the promises are fulfilled, the Gotham stage will be cluttered with amusements for the floating population of June, July and August. Fourteen titles are already on the list.

In tomorrow's issue the New York Times will catalog the prospective summer playbills as follow:

"Ziegfeld Follies": The first since 1927 of the revues that have made Mr. Ziegfeld famous. It will arrive at the Ziegfeld theater early in June. Helen Morgan and Ruth Etting will be prominent in the company.

"The Scandals": An up-to-date issue of George White's annual pastimes. Everett Marshall, a barytone from the Metropolitan Opera, and Betty Compton have been announced as principals.

"The Vanities": Earl Carroll hopes to open his handsome new theater, seating 1,700, with a revue under this title in July.

"The Band Wagon": A revue by the Dietz-Kaufman-Schwartz combination, which is scheduled to reopen the New Amsterdam theater early in June. A cast of notables is now in rehearsal, including the Astaires, Tilly Losch, Frank Morgan, Helen Broderick, Philip Loeb and Guy Lombardo's orchestra.

"Rhapsody in Black": A Negro revue which Lew Leslie, who seems to specialize in this sort of thing, has in rehearsal. It will open at the Harris theater May 4 with Ethel Waters as its most important performer.

"Sweet and Low": A new edition, designed for the summer customers, of the revue that closes tonight. It will probably bear the altered title of "Sweeter and Lower." Ted Healy and Phil Baker will replace James Barton and George Jessel; Fanny Brice will continue to serve.

"The Third Little Show": This is planned as a successor to the "First Little Show," which was a vast success; not to the "Second Little Show," which was a quick failure. Beatrice Lillie and Ernest Truex will head its cast. It will have a première at the Music Box late in May.

"The Crooner": An offering by the adventuresome Will Morrissey, which will tell a story about a sweet young singing fellow who resembles Rudy Vallee.

Other possibilities for the summer are: A show from the Folies Bergères of Paris, which Ray Goetz hopes to import; an intimate musical comedy called "Doing New York"; a large scale musical comedy sponsored by Mr. Ziegfeld and written by James Montgomery, Joseph McCarthy and Harry Tierney, which may reach New York in mid-August; "Lola," a show from the German with William Gaxton as its chief personality; an operetta by Schwab and Mandel; and "The Panic Is On," a revue which will be placed in rehearsal two weeks hence in preparation for a June opening.

Tonight's withdrawals from Broadway will be: "Miracle at Verdun," the German drama staged by the Theater Guild of which much was hoped and less realized; "Give Me Yesterday," by A. A. Milne; "Six Characters in Search of an Author," a competent rival of Pirandello's best known play; and "The Admirable Crichton," George C. Tyler's latest all star revival. The latter is the only one that escapes the storehouse. It will begin a spring tour in Philadelphia tomorrow night, and will travel extensively next fall, with Walter Hampden and Fay Bainter as co-stars.

The diligent gatherers of theatrical items for the New York Times will make the following announcement tomorrow:

"At the moment all sorts of plays are crowding the fall and winter lists. If even half of them materialize, there should be considerable activity, certainly more than there has been during the past two or three not overly distinguished Broadway semesters. But announcements in April do not necessarily bring productions in the fall."

Arch Selwyn has changed his mind about keeping his touring success, "Cherries Are Ripe," away from the slings and arrows of Broadway criticism. He says that he will give the comedy a New York première in August, with two well known players in the leading rôles. Apparently he does not mean Vilma Banky and Rod La Rocque, who ornamented "Cherries Are Ripe" in Chicago and on tour. He says that he hopes to secure either Ina Claire of Tallulah Bankhead for the heroine. These actresses have recently asserted that they were through with "the legitimate"; but Mr. Selwyn seems to have a way of cajoling the high girls of Hollywood.

A simmer of activity has been discovered in the relatively quiet offices of John Golden. Rachel Crothers is writing another play for his inspection, and it may be tested early in the summer. "After Tommorrow," written by Hugh Stange and Mr. Golden himself, is another possibility. "The Devil Finds Work," by Augustus Thomas and Frank Craven, is also on the docket, although not imminent. George W. Barbier of "That's Gratitude," will reach stardom in this opus, if the film magnates do not tie him up too tightly.

Sinjin Ervine: Author, Critic, and Irishman

ST. JOHN ERVINE, author of "The First Mrs. Fraser," has been a dramatist for more than twenty years, a dramatic critic for at least that long, and has found time to take part in some of the political movements which have concerned Ireland in that period. His first visit to Chicago, in 1920, was made as a member of a committee which came from London and Belfast to spread propaganda against the setting up of the Irish Free State.

"Mixed Marriage" was the first of Ervine's plays to be acted in Chicago. Arthur Sinclair, Sarah Allgood, and their associates of the Dublin Abbey company put it on in the Grand Opera house in their first visit, early in 1912. On their return a year afterward the Irish players acted Ervine's brief play named "The Magnanimous Lover," which, in its single situation, contained the essence not only of Stanley Houghton's "Hindle Wakes," shown in Chicago soon thereafter, but also of Galsworthy's "The Eldest Son."

In November, 1923, Mrs. Fiske gave his comedy named "Mary, Mary, Quite Contrary" in Powers' under the direction of David Belasco. Mrs. Fiske appeared as a gay, irresponsible actress who, in the course of a week-end party, played havoc with the peace of mind of a provincial family.

Two of Ervine's plays, "Jane Clegg" and "John Ferguson," are marked with red letters in the calendar of the early years of the Theater Guild. That institution found popular success in both plays at a time when its venture was still a timid experiment.

Mr. Ervine's identity was fixed in the American consciousness less, however, by any of his plays than by his season of service as dramatic critic of the New York World, which brought him from London as a "guest," with the understanding that he would not be called upon to write reviews as "news," but might defer them until two, three, or even four days after the première. He engaged in many a battle with his colleagues.

B'way Openings

NEW YORK, April 25.—[Special.]—The first nighters of Broadway will get only two premières next week, and the plays seem to be of no special importance. Here are the announcements:

"Betty, Be Careful"—Opens tomorrow night at the Liberty theater. This is another of the farces that bloom in the spring. Its author is Willis Maxwell Goodhue, who has written farces before, and in the cast will be Mary Murray, Frederic Tozere, Helene Dumas, Edmund Elton, and Alan Goode.

"Devil in the Mind"—Opens Wednesday night at the Fulton theater. A play from the Russian of Leonid Andreieff, produced by the Moscow Art theater in 1914 and presented only recently in London. Leo Bulgakov will be the producer and will appear with his wife, Barbara Bulgakov, at the head of a cast which will further include Bruce Elmore, Ian Wolfe, Harold Johnsrud, and Barbara Benedict. William Laurence has made the American adaptation of the play.

ical visits to the imprisoned Delaney. They are, they tell him, still working, still hopeful. But for fifteen years Delaney has been hearing similar reports. He cannot even smile at them any more.

Program Statements.

The Mooney crusade is carried over into the program.

"The Mooney case is one of the dirtiest jobs ever put over and I resent the fact that my court was used for such a contemptible piece of work." . . .

That is part of the printed statement of the Hon. Franklin A. Griffin judge of the Superior court which convicted Mooney. What a confession!

"Since the conviction of Billings and Mooney, Captain of Detectives Mathesson, who procured the evidence against them, the judge who presided over the Mooney case, the attorney general of the state of California, the foreman of the jury, and all the jurors except one now living who found Mooney guilty, have recommended pardons for both Mooney and Billings," reads a statement from James P. Brennan, active prosecutor at the trial.

Mooney, we are told, has been offered a parole, but refuses to accept anything less than a full pardon, which would force the state's admission of the crime of its representatives against justice.

Having just been through a series of investigations proving our own courts disgracefully vulnerable, it is not difficult to understand how easy it is for New York audiences to sympathize with the victim in this play and to question the wisdom of what is frequently referred to as the Great State of California.

Mr. Harmon financed "Precedent" by selling out the first six or eight performances to interested societies. Norman Thomas, perennial Socialist candidate for whatever high office an election may be called, was prominent in the first night audience.

An all Equity cast of excellent actors, headed by Clyde Franklin, playing Fremont, the editor; Charles Harrison, as Callahan, the attorney; and William Bonelli, as the district attorney, made every speech count. Royal Tracy is a taciturn and martyred Delaney. The settings are mostly suggested and there are many short scenes.

"Melo" Added to Spring List.

A Henri Bernstein play—the Bernstein of "The Thief" and "The Claw"—called "Melo" is an addition to the spring list. In it three actors of reputation and achievement—Edna Best, the gifted young English girl who came running home from Hollywood recently because she was hungry to see her new husband, Herbert Marshall, of the "Tomorrow and Tomorrow" cast; Basil Rathbone, who specializes in rôles of sartorial elegance and physical passion, and Earle Larrimore, leading juvenile of the Theater Guild's first acting company whenever the first company has a job for him—are featured.

"Melo" is stronger because of these three. The story is the long familiar one of Pierre, the doting but dull husband; Marcel, his very best friend; and Romaine, the wife who loves them both. She loves them both, but if she must take one side she decides in favor of Marcel, the friend. If she did anything else there could be no drama. At least, no Bernstein drama.

Having chosen Marcel, it behooves Romaine to free herself definitely from Pierre. The fact that Pierre loves her and clings to her makes this a bit difficult, but Romaine decides it is best to poison him. So she begins feeding him arsenic in addition to other medicine the doctor has prescribed.

Caught in the act, Romaine gives up. Now she can't go to the man she loves nor stay with the one who loves her. So she throws herself into the Seine. The men thereafter have a long scene in which Pierre seeks to learn the truth and Marcel to lie Romaine pure. Which he does. Then something of the old friendship of the men is revived, practically over the grave of Romaine.

Miss Best, pretty and gifted, is as Anglo-Saxon as Queen Mary and practically as pure in thought, in all probability. At any rate, it is difficult to picture her as this type of French hungry heart. Otherwise, she does well. Rathbone and Larrimore are well suited to their parts, Larrimore doing a particularly good job.

Joe Le Blang Is Dead.

Joe Le Blang, the greatest of the ticket brokers is dead. He builded a fortune of nearly $20,000,000 on the foundation of a cigar store ticket agency which he established thirty years ago, and in which he sold what were known as lithograph tickets—passes given storekeepers and others in return for the display of show cards in their windows.

One story told of him I shall never forget. He had moved with the theatrical trend to Times square and established his cut rate ticket brokerage in the basement of Gray's drug store. As his business grew he became a nuisance in that his customers used to crowd into the store to get to the basement.

Finally, the drug store people decided that Joe would have to move. They told him as much. His lease was about up and it would not be renewed, they said.

"O, yes it will be renewed," said Joe.

"O, no it won't," said Gray's.

"O, yes it will," insisted Joe.

"Because why?"

"Because I own the building," said Joe.

He had, in a comparatively few years, built up so profitable a business that he was able to swing this investment in real estate. Later he bought the adjoining building, in which the George M. Cohan theater is located. He was also owner of the Cort theater, in 48th street, and had probably financed more frail plays into profitable runs than any other man in the show business.

Broadway will miss Joe Le Blang, however successfully his successors may carry on his business.

New in Chicago

"THE FIRST MRS. FRASER," the comedy by St. John Ervine, will begin a return engagement tonight, with Grace George as its star, at the Selwyn theater. This play was the high point of last season's sessions at the Princess theater under the auspices of the Dramatic League of Chicago. After its success here it went to New York, where it had a run of ten months and won rating among Burns Mantle's "Ten Best Plays" of the year.

Miss George's original company is practically intact. A. E. Matthew and Lawrence Grossmith are still her leading men. Phyllis Elgar, an English actress new to Chicago, has replaced Carol Goodner, and is said to be just as handsome. The engagement at the Selwyn will last two weeks or longer. Subscribers to the Dramatic league will have box office privileges. Miss George's return, therefore, may be counted as a postscript to the formal season of the Dramatic league, which ended several weeks ago.

"Green Grow the Lilacs," a play dealing with characters and customs of Indian territory in 1900, will be offered by the Theater Guild at the Illinois theater, opening tomorrow night. It is the second item in the Guild's spring subscription season here, and introduces a new American dramatist—Lynn Riggs, a young writer who has brought fresh material and a stimulating point of view to the stage.

This play deals with western prairie life in its transition period—the time of the cowboy's last stand against the farmer. It contains about twenty folk songs of the western plains. The cast includes June Walker, Franchot Tone, Richard Hale, Clare Woodbury, Ruth Chorpenning, Lee Strasberg, and fifteen genuine performing cowboys—Tex Ritter and Tex Cooper among them. Herbert J. Biberman was the stage director; the settings were designed by Raymond Sovey.

'Fine and Dandy'

"FINE AND DANDY," starring Joe Cook, will come to the Erlanger theater for an indefinite engagement starting Sunday, May 10. It is the longest run musical show of the Broadway season. The libretto is by Donald Ogden Stewart, and music and lyrics were written by Kay Swift and Paul James. Included in the cast that will present "Fine and Dandy" here are Nell O'Day, Dave Chasen, Alice Boulden, George A. Schiller, James Howkins, Eleanor Powell, Ethel Wilson, Florence Earle, John Ehrle, and Jimmy Hadreas.

Colorful Opera Artist Makes Her Last Exit

Mary Garden Leaves the Civic Stage.

By Edward Moore.

theater and building at 20 Wacker drive.

Miss Garden continued as a member of the company after her managerial experience. As time went on, however, it became increasingly difficult for her to find typical Garden rôles. Her appearances began to give off an impression of queerness, of being less in the glory of opera than to the glorification of her personality. She tried Fiora in "L'Amore dei Tre Re," revived her earlier Tosca, singing it in a strange medley of French and Italian; Katiushka in "Resurrection"; brought back the moribund "Cleopatra"; took up "Judith" and "Sapho," and finally, last season, "Camille." None of these, however, had the glamour of what she used to do years before.

A long time ago Percy Hammond, then the dramatic critic of this newspaper, wrote what I have always considered to be the last account ever devised of her abilities as a personage of the stage. It was back in the first season of the company and was published the day after her first appearance here as Salome. True, it considers her from the dramatic rather than the vocal standpoint, but few except the most insatiate of the Garden fans have ever done anything else. Under the circumstances Mr. Hammond's account may serve as her farewell:

"It is said by those proficient in the criticism of both arts that it is Miss Garden's genius as an actress rather than as a singer which constitutes her the feminine colossus who doth bestride our operatic world. Be that as it may, there can be no doubt that her impersonations of Maeterlinck's shadowy Mélisande and Wilde's monstrous Salome indicate the possession of an amazingly comprehensive power to act.

"Of course, as the 'curieuse et sensuelle' lady of Wilde's creation with its brutal, voluptuous, sensational perversions and abnormalities, the opportunity for effective unrestraint is limitless. The sheer sensationalism of temperament unleashed is enough to make the Salome performance easily the more notable popularly.

"But it is as the elusive Mélisande that Miss Garden's instinct, intuition, or genius is most impressively denoted. There she is, to the eye, at least, the fragile marionette of Maeterlinck's idea—a will-less creature, moving through a drear dream, expressing absolutely the Fleming's sense of the mystery and pathos of man's 'little life in the midst of the immensities'—the puppet of nature and destiny. Even those who regard 'Pelléas et Mélisande' as a morbid and Stygian pollution of the drama may see in Miss Garden's acting this difficult detachment—peculiarly difficult for a young woman so splendidly flesh and blood.

Much Burning Detail.

"Wilde dreamt his Salome to be like Titian's painting. 'Her lips disclose the boundless cruelty of her heart,' he wrote; 'her splendor is an abyss, her desire an ocean; the pearls on her breast die of love; the bloom of her maidenhood pales the opals and fires the rubies, while even the sapphires on her fevered skin lose the purity of their luster.'

"Like Huysmans, he imagined her 'drawn with jewels, all ringing and tinkling in her hair, and her ankles, her wrists, her throat, inclosing her hips, and with their myriad glitter heightening the unchastity of her unchaste amber flesh.'

"With this authoritative prospectus Miss Garden seems privileged to indulge in much burning detail, and so she does. The velvet seductiveness of her wooing of Jokanaan; the pantomime of her scorpion fury as a 'woman scorned'; the venomous, insistent cruelty of the reiteration, 'Give me the head of Jokanaan,' are incredibly real. At the cistern the impatient rage of the cry, 'Well, I tell thee there are not dead men enough!' freezes with its dire import. She is a fabulous she-thing, playing with love and death—loathsome, mysterious, poisonous, slaking her slimy passion in the blood of her victim.

"A large order for a timid artiste, but timorousness is not among Miss Garden's characteristics. From the moment she beholds the 'ivory prophet,' gazing on him with hot and hungry stare, on through the passion maddened scenes to the hideous finish, where, huddled over the head, she dies, Miss Garden makes no polite concessions. She is Salome according to the Wilde formulary—a monstrous oracle of bestiality. Even when Dalmores indulges in his realistic frenzies of drunken hysteria as Herod and Salome stretches like a sphinx, silent and immobile upon a couch, it is still Salome who rivets the eye and mind. But it is simply a florid, excessive, unhampered tour de force, lawless and inhuman. Any extravagance almost harmonizes the scarlet picture. As an exhibition it outshines Miss Garden's Mélisande, but as acting, there is no comparison."

Public Spends 10 Million for Music.

Talking about hard times, the American public spent $10,000,000 for concerts in the present season just drawing to a close. That would seem to come near to putting concerts into big business.

The figures are issued on the authority of George Engles, managing director of N. B. C. Artists Service in New York. He had a survey made for the express purpose of finding out how the concert business has been withstanding general business conditions, and the figures are the result. The attendance has also been 10,000,000, so the price of tickets has averaged $1 apiece.

Two hundred and twenty-five artists and artist groups went out from New York and Chicago, says Mr. Engles, and the stated figures are covered by the receipts from these touring plus the receipts of the major symphony orchestras, not including, however, what has been put up by guarantors toward the support of the orchestras and not including the field of opera.

Some interesting sidelights are revealed by the figures. It was suspected that Paderewski created the largest box office returns in past seasons. He still does. He drew $500,000 this year. Fritz Kreisler came next, with John McCormack third and Rachmaninoff fourth.

As far as cities are concerned, New York and Chicago showed higher receipts, Pittsburgh fell off 5 per cent, and Kansas City 12 per cent. Figuring on percentages, Laporte, Ind., leads the country, since 9 per cent of its population goes to concerts regularly. Helena, Ark., comes next with 8½ per cent and Dixon, Ill., and Marshfield, Wis., tie for third place with 7 per cent.

New England reports a season of fine returns for celebrities and slim pickings for less well known artists. California was rather badly hit, a few of the smaller cities giving up concerts altogether because of bank failures. The northwestern part of the country, however, from Washington and Oregon east to Iowa, are at least as well off in the matter of concert returns as it was last season.

Music would seem to be doing rather well.

Music Notes.

Lilian Rehberg, cellist, of Chicago, and Kurtis Brownell, tenor, of Winnetka, are two of the four young musicians announced as successful candidates in the seventh annual audition of the Walter W. Naumburg Musical foundation. The other two were Marguerite Hawkins, soprano, and Edwina Eustis, contralto, both of New York.

Under the terms of the award each of the four will be given a New York debut recital next season, with all expenses paid. Two hundred and twenty-three musicians applied in the preliminary contests. These were trimmed down to thirty-one, and these again to the four winners. The judges were Walter Spalding of Harvard university, Wallace Goodrich of the New England Conservatory of Music, Boston; Bruce Simonds of Yale university, and Adolfo Betti of the now defunct Flonzaley quartet.

Lily Pons, who has been making sensational performances in the coloratura operas of the Metropolitan Opera company, has added another city to hear spring festival appearances this year. It is Cincinnati. Ann Arbor and Evanston are the others. She will sing at the last named on the opening night, May 18.

Harold Van Horne is the Illinois winner in the state contest held biennially under the auspices of the National Federation of Music Clubs. He will next enter the district contest, to be held in Madison, Wis., May 16. The finals will be held in San Francisco at the time of the federation's biennial convention.

GREAT PIANIST

[Apeda Photo.]

HIS Chicago recital appearance having been postponed several weeks because of a serious illness in his family, Mr. Hofmann will fill the deferred date this afternoon at the Studebaker theater. His concert appearances have been fewer of late than they were in former years, since much of his time is taken up by his duties as director of an institution of musical instruction in the east, but his playing as soloist with the Chicago Symphony orchestra earlier this season proves that hand, brain, and soul, he is still the notable pianist who has been creating a brilliant reputation during the last thirty years.

John Golden's Book

JOHN GOLDEN'S tribute to Lillian Russell in his autobiography, "Stagestruck John Golden," has stirred John C. Shaffer's recollections of the Chicago girl he knew as Helen Leonard, with the result that he has presented to Mr. Golden a life size portrait of the deceased actress by Lenus Jacquer. It is now on display in the lobby of the Blackstone theater, where Mr. Golden's "That's Gratitude," is in performance.

Mr. Shaffer, former publisher of the Chicago Evening Post, knew Helen Leonard when she attended Grace M. E. church at Locust street and La Salle avenue with her mother, brother, and sister. Both girls went on the stage, one as Lillian Russell and the other as Suzanne Westford, who is still living.

A Future Star

AS a result of her performance in support of Lionel Atwill in "The Silent Witness" the Messrs. Shubert have signed a two years' contract with Kay Strozzi under which she is to be featured next season and starred the following year. Miss Strozzi, who is only 22, has had a rapid rise. Several years ago she was appearing with the Stuart Walker Stock company in Cincinnati, after which she made her Broadway début in "The Crown Prince." She has since acted in "Ink," "Heavy Traffic," "The Matrimonial Bed," and "The Humbug." Miss Strozzi is a former Chicagoan.

French Play for U. S.

The American rights to "Pierre or Jack," a comedy by Francois de Croisset, recently presented in Paris, have been acquired by Gilbert Miller. The play, which is the first by De Croisset in several years, is a satire on the motion pictures and the radio. The play was enthusiastically received at the Athenee in Paris, with Jane Renouardt and Fernand Garvey in the leading rôles. In collaboration with the late Robert de Flers, De Croisset is the author of many comedies which have been adapted for the American stage.

All of Mascagni Opera Recorded by Columbia

"Cavalleria Rusticana" Sung by Italians.

By Edward Moore.

IN the seventh of its operatic series, Columbia is making public the whole of Mascagni's best known work, "Cavalleria Rusticana." It is on ten double faced records, 67880-D up to and including 67889-D.

Nothing can be said in disfavor of the popularity of "Cavalleria Rusticana." It is the one work that made Mascagni a world wide figure in the field of Italian opera. But it has its problems as a matter of technical recording, and while Columbia overcome many of them, one can easily see that an opera that gives its singers only two grades of musical expression, from loud to louder, might cause concern in the minds of the experts in charge of the microphone. That the tone does not "blast" oftener than it does proves that they are experts.

Unless you are keeping in close touch with musical matters in Italy, you may not recognize the company that recorded the work. Santuzza is sung by Giannina Arangi Lombardi, Lola by Maria Castagna, Lucia by Ida Mannarini, Turiddu by Antonio Melandri, and Alfio by Gino Lulli. The chorus is from La Scala, under the direction of Vittore Veneziani, the Milan Symphony orchestra plays, and the work is conducted by Cav. Lorenzo Molajoli.

A Splendid Chorus.

It is a competent if not a stellar organization, though the chorus is as good as you will hear in any opera company in the world. Mme. Lombardi's voice is of the dramatic soprano type, with the virtues of stirring expression in tone and the vice of growing slightly edgy in its strenuous moments. Melandri has a bit of trouble in adjusting his tone when singing full voice on high notes, but otherwise is highly satisfactory. Conductor Molajoli knows his score thoroughly and is adept in all its tempi. You will hear an excellent reproduction of the intermezzo, all that used to be put out in the early days of recording. I wish, however, that the recorders had worked out a plan on Lola's entrance song so that it might sound as though it were growing nearer from a distance, as is done in the stage performances of the opera.

There is some good orchestral music of the better sort from both Victor and Brunswick. In Victor 7291, twelve inch, Willem Mengelberg and the New York Philharmonic orchestra play Beethoven's "Egmont" overture; in 1486, ten inch, the same conductor and orchestra are heard in Mozart's "Magic Flute" overture. They are different in manner, as they ought to be, and both tre excellent. Beethoven's sturdy firmness is accurately projected, also the quick, sprightly spirit of Mozart. Both are recommended.

Brunswick's offering is what would seem to be a new work as far as this side of the ocean is concerned. It is a suite, "Pelleas et Melisande," not by Debussy, however, byt by Fauré, played by the Philharmonic orchestra of Berlin, Albert Wolff conducting. Fauré is quite evidently no disciple of Debussy. The two works have little in common. Fauré, however, has written some melodious music with a touch of gentle wistfulness. The prelude, "Fileuses," and "Sicilienne" are on three sides of 90148 and 90149; the fourth by the same artists is Ravel's "Pavane for a Dead Infanta," another record worth having.

First Class Solos.

Turning back to Victor for a moment, some first class solos are presented. No. 7272 introduces Jacques Thibaud with the popular prelude to Saint-Saëns' "Le Deluge" and the first Spanish dance from De Falla's opera, "La Vida Breve," getting to be almost as popular and a much better piece of music. Georges de Pausnay is at the piano and the recording takes a high rating.

Another record, 7383, is a pair of excerpts from "Rigoletto," by Lily Pons, who has been the spectacular figure of the Metropolitan Opera company this season and is shortly to be heard in person in this part of the country at the May music festivals of Ann Arbor and Evanston. The two sides give the two distinctive soprano solos of the opera, "Caro Nome," and "Tutte le Feste." Mlle. Pons is due to have a good deal of discussion about her, which is good for her reputation. This pair indicates plainly that she is a personality of the stage with a voice that is a good deal of a delight.

IN MR. CRAVEN'S PLAY

HERE'S the young actress who plays the "ugly duckling's" pretty little sister in "That's Gratitude," at the Blackstone. She is true to type as a home-girl of Hutchinson, Kansas, and fits neatly into an excellent cast.

Theater Guild Denies

THE THEATER GUILD makes the following announcement:

"A story in the April 18, 1931, issue of the Billboard states at the end of the current season the Theater Guild will split up and that the dissenters will break away to form a rival organization. The Guild's board of managers is without knowledge of a schism within its ranks. The element which disproves a story of this kind more effectively than denial is time. The Guild, in making the present denial, is simply taking time by the forelock.

"Within a few weeks the Guild will make known its detailed plans for the coming season both in and out of New York."

Benefit.

A vaudeville show and dance for the benefit of the unemployed Negro theatrical performers of Chicago will be held in the Eighth Regiment armory Saturday night, May 2. Among the players who will contribute to the program are Jesse Cryor, Vivian Brown, Ed Goodbar, Archie Cross, Lovie Taylor, Percy Venable, Tommy Brookins, Alice Harris, Lola Porter, and Mae Alix.

Philharmonic Society Closes Gotham Season

Toscanini Sails for European Work.

By Joan King.

NEW YORK.—[Special.]—Arturo Toscanini at the helm, the New York Philharmonic society closed its 1930-'31 season Sunday afternoon at Carnegie hall with its two thousand six hundred and sixty-sixth concert. This year, which has been one of splendid accomplishment, marked the eighty-ninth in the history of Gotham's oldest symphonic organization.

As his final offering Mr. Toscanini chose to give again numbers which have been especially popular under his baton. The audience, of course, was delighted. The occasion was marked by two ovations of farewell, one for the concert master, Scipione Guidi, who ended his ten year association with the orchestra, and the other as a bon voyage to the beloved conductor, who sailed this week to take over the batons of leadership in Bologna and Vienna, and to inaugurate the Wagner festivals at Bayreuth. At the close of the program Mr. Toscanini was presented with a bronze medal by the Bruckner Society of America, and flowers by the prize pupils of Ernest Schelling's Children's concerts.

A Remarkable Program.

As a fitting close to the Thursday evening series Mr. Toscanini offered a program of colossal proportions in the presentation of which he was assisted by the Schola Cantorum. Bizzetti's introduction to the "Agamemnon" of Aeschylus, for orchestra and chorus, had its "first performance anywhere." This is the work for which the Italian government awarded the composer 50,000 lire as the best Italian composition produced in ten years.

Verdi's "Te Deum," for double chorus and orchestra, was given for the first time by the society. There was a first New York performance of Johann Christian Bach's "Sinfonia" in D major, for double orchestra; Op. 18, No. 3, and the remarkable versatility of the maestro as a conductor for the masters was again demonstrated in Mozart's Symphony in G minor and the overwhelming "Passacaglia" and Fugue in C minor by Johann Sebastian Bach, arranged by Ottorino Respighi.

The thousands which filled the hall remained standing and applauding long after Mr. Toscanini and the orchestra and assisting chorus had left the stage.

Two Popular Artists.

Hallie Stiles, American soprano of the Paris Opera Comique, and John Charles Thomas, baritone of the Brussels and Covent Garden companies, sang recently before 2,000 members of the Haarlem Philharmonic society, here. Both artists have recently appeared with the Chicago Civic opera as well as on individual concert tours.

Miss Stiles sang, in costume, an air from Massenet's "Manon," and Mr. Thomas one from "Herodiade," and they joined in a duet from Ambroise Thomas' "Hamlet." Songs in four languages were included on Mr. Thomas' part of the program and Miss Stiles, in addition to her written share, added several encores in French. The audience was delighted with both artists.

Exceptional Choir Music.

Another recent seasonal farewell was was that of Margaret Dessoff's choirs at Town hall. As have been all of Miss Desoff's offerings since she introduced her organizations into the musical life of this town, the program on this occasion was exceptional. The present chorus is the combination of the Dessi chorus of women's voices and the A Capella singers, mixed voices, both bodies having been developed by Miss Dessoff, whose efforts and enterprise have greatly stimulated interest in choral literature hereabouts.

For this third and last program of the year Miss Dessoff chose the Bach motet "Fear Thou Not," for double chorus A Capella; Brahms' three sacred choral pieces for women's voices; Loeffler's setting of the psalm, "By the Waters of Babylon," for four part women's chorus with accompaniment of organ, harp, two flutes, and violoncello obbligato; Spanish folk songs arranged by Joaquin Nin; three part songs for mixed chorus; Opus 37 by Hans Gal, talented Viennese composer, and four Slovak folk songs arranged by Bela Bartok. The audience, which was a representative one, was greatly pleased.

New Little Symphony.

A new little symphony made its first appearance under the direction of Hans Bruno Meyer recently at Roerich hall. It was welcome, indeed; for, despite the overwhelming number of musical activities in Gotham, there are regrettably few organizations which present the sort of chamber music to which this group announces itself devoted—namely: that written by a group composed of one leading instrument from each section of the usual large orchestra, plus an extra violin and harp or piano.

Mr. Meyer chose as his first offering Gluck's "Paris and Helen" Overture, Schubert's Sonata in B flat (originally for four piano hands), his own "Andante" and "Waldhorn," a Saint-Saëns suite, and three characteristic pieces by Albeniz. His conducting indicated a serious musician's interest chiefly in the music, and the work of his young ensemble was excellent.

Tournament of Plays

THE "little theater" groups that will complete in the fifth annual tournament of the Chicago Drama League at the Goodman theater May 4, 5, 6, 7, and 10, and the plays they will offer, are as follow:

Wieboldt Players, in "No Sabe," by Elisha Cook.

Amathayers, in "Dear Ducky," by Sidney Sloan.

Hawthorne Players, in "Dust of the Road," by Kenneth Sawyer Goodman.

Now and Then Players, in "The Veil Lifts," by Essex Dane.

Chicago Woman's Club Players, in "Count Your Buttons," by Florence Crocker Comfort.

Uptown Players, in "Exit," by Edwin M. Marshall.

Parish Club Players, in "Trapped," by Lloyd F. Thanhouser.

Parthian Players, in "Kindling," by Charles Kenyon.

Pilgrim Players, in "Little Father of the Wilderness," by Austin Strong.

Sinai Players, in "Drums of Oude," by Austin Strong.

Chicago College Club Players, in "Rescue," by Rita C. Smith.

Players' Guild of Evanston in "The String of the Samisen," by Rita Wellman.

Green Room Players, in "The Nurse," by Francesca Falk Miller.

Southern Little Theater Players, in "Thank You, Jesus," by Howard L. Rooney.

AND

"Never saw such suds!" says this Wilmette woman

"The first time I used Rinso I felt as though I had made a wonderful discovery. What suds! I never saw the like, and I've used many kinds of soap in my time. Rinso suds are so quick and active, they're almost alive. How they make the dirt let go! Clothes come so white, I never even think about boiling them. Colored clothes come brighter, too. And Rinso's great for dishwashing; I use it for everything."

Catherine O'Brien, 336 Greenleaf Ave., Wilmette, Illinois

Cup for cup, Rinso gives twice as much suds as lightweight, puffed-up soaps. Wonderful suds in washers, too; the makers of 40 famous washers recommend Rinso for safety, and whiter washes.

Try Rinso Free

If you don't use Rinso, and want to try it, send this ad. with your name and address to Lever Brothers Co., Dept. N 71, Cambridge, Mass. A full-sized package will be sent you without cost.

NEW MANAGER

GREGORY RATOFF.

He recently left the cast of "Three Little Girls," but he is returning to Chicago as a full-fledged theatrical manager. Mr. Ratoff has formed a partnership with Ben Bernie, the cabaret master of ceremonies, for the staging of "Oh, Promise Me," which will begin an engagement at the Apollo theater May 10.

ARMCHAIR PLAYGOER

By Fanny Butcher.

IN CHICAGO.

When "Green Grow the Lilacs" opens tomorrow night under the aegis of the Theater Guild, Chicago will have its first production of the dramatic work of a young man t has known for some time as a promising young writer for the theater through the publication of his plays,

FRANCES NOYES HART.

"Knives from Syria," "Sump'n Like Wings," "Big Lake," "A Lantern to See By," and "Roadside," and as a promising young poet in "The Iron Dish" [Doubleday Doran]. "Green Grow the Lilacs" [French] is the same sort of play as "The Green Pastures," in the sense that it is drama within the framework of folk music. Mr. Riggs has chosen his native Oklahoma to celebrate, and he does it with an amusing drama of the frontier, studded with cowboy songs which are a joy and a delight. They are authentic tunes sung by what looked to me like authentic gentlemen of the plains when I saw the play in New York.

The most authentic sounding of them all, however, was, I was told, a lad from Yale who looked and talked more like his alma mater than like a graduate of the great open spaces. Anyway, whether all of those lusty boys and girls who make a rousing chorus are alfalfa or caviar fed, they are the whole show. They give you a sense of your own country—its vastness, its strange admixture of cultures, just as "The Green Pastures" gave it to you. "Green Grow the Lilacs" does only that, however.

It does not pretend to any great spiritual significance. You may read the words of the cowboy songs in the published play, but for the music you will have to go to other sources. Some of it you will find in "The American Songbag," collected by Carl Sandburg, which is a grand book to own, anyway.

Tonight a revival of "The First Mrs. Fraser," by St. John Ervine leads me to assure you that it is available for stay at homes and published by the Macmillan company. It is amusing to read aloud.

IN NEW YORK.

"The Bellamy Trial" is a dramatization of one of the best mystery stories ever written. Frances Noyes Hart will never be forgotten by mystery fans because she wrote "The Bellamy Trial" if she never puts pen to paper again, and she has consistently been putting it there ever since 1927, when that thriller made a nation rejoice. And since she is only 41 years old she will probably be adding to the gayety of this nation for years to come.

Directing Circus Easy Task, Says Woman Manager

DELAND, Fla.—(AP)—Managing a circus seems hardly a woman's job, but it isn't so hard for one who has grown up in it.

So says Mrs. Johnny Jones, who directs the shows bearing the name of her late husband. She took command several months ago.

"Born to it," was the crisp explanation of Mrs. Jones, slim, brunette and 31. She is with the traveling caravan about three months of the five month season. When Johnny Jr., 9, is in school here, the railway "office car" stands on the siding and the Jones family is at home in an attractive house.

As soon as vacation time rolls around, however, Johnny and his mother are off to join the shows that have been out a month already.

The little ticket wagon used by the circus is the one in which Mrs Jones was born. It was the first living quarters of her parents who owned an animal troupe with the Jones menagerie in the early '90s. It was later bought by Jones for his private use.

So little Hody Hurd was born to the circus. When she reached her teens she was given the job of handling the elephants and horses. Later she married the circus owner.

SPRING COLORS AT LOGAN-TERBELL WEDDING

MISS ANN SMALL, MISS FRANCES WOOD, MISS DOROTHY RANNEY, MISS CHRISTOBEL WHEELER, MRS. JOSEPH B. TERBELL JR. (Miss Phoebe Logan), MISS BETTY DURHAM, MISS RHEA MUNROE, MISS SHIRLEY LOGAN, and MISS LORRAINE LOGAN.

[Photo by Arthur Ermates.]

THE first of the large and important spring weddings was that of Miss Phoebe Logan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Stuart Logan, and Joseph B. Terbell Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph B. Terbell of New York city, which took place on April 11 at St. Chrysostom's. The Chicago maids who attended the former Miss Logan were Miss Rhea Munroe and Miss Christobel Wheeler as maids of honor, Miss Ann Small, Miss Dorothy Ranney, Miss Frances Wood, Miss Shirley Logan, and Miss Betty Durham as bridesmaids, and Miss Lorraine Logan as flower girl. They wore peach-colored ruffled organdy frocks over taffeta of the same shade, pale pink horsehair hats, and carried arm bouquets of Talisman roses.

May Will Oust June as Month of Marriages

Cram-Drexel the First of Many Nuptials.

By Nancy Randolph.

NEW YORK.—[Special.]—Everything has been early this year—Easter, spring, and even the month of marriages—for it seems May is to oust June as the preferred period for social nuptials.

At any rate, we have been luxuriating in such glorious weather that society has decided to cut the season short and depart in the near future for its year round homes on Long Island and in Connecticut, prior to the annual migration to Newport and Southampton.

One unmistakable sign of the early season is the opening of the hotel roof gardens. The St. Regis chose Wednesday to usher in the sway of the oddly decorated roof, and among those who deserted the Embassy in favor of the Urban room were Mr. and Mrs. William G. Thayer Shedd, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Hone, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Trumbull, the recently freed Mrs. M. Duke Diddle, Mr. and Mrs. John Calvin Thorne, and Thomas F. Manville Jr.

F. A. Clarks Return Soon.

The F. Ambrose Clarks, who are now accepted as an indispensable part of the hunting season at Melton Mowbray in England, are to return to their Long Island home in May and many are the sighs of relief going up. The Clarks have been in England since last November and Westbury has missed them greatly. Open house is always the order of things at their showplace home, and the notables forced to remain in town over a week-end always think of the Clarks with joy when the Saturday draws to a close and they can motor down to Westbury to enjoy the Clark hospitality.

One of Mr. and Mrs. Clark's two famous nephews, Albert Bostwick, is to return with them. The other, G. H. Bostwick, known all over the world as "Pete," returned in March and has already been winning steeplechases and taking spectacular tumbles.

An Event of May.

The event of early May will be the Cram-Drexel wedding on the 5th, in St. Bartholomew's church on Park avenue. Mr. and Mrs. Anthony J. Drexel Jr., with Edith, the bride to be, and her sister, Marjorie, and brother, Anthony III., came into town this week on the Drexel yacht, Queen of Scots, after a cruise in southern waters.

The Drexels are now ensconced at Pierre's and are frightfully busy preparing for Edith's marriage to Henry Sergeant Cram. Edith, who had a splendiferous coming out at the Ritz last winter, is a granddaughter of the late George Jay Gould and of the noted Anthony J. Drexel, who is arriving from Paris for the ceremony. Cram is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Sergeant Cram and a grandson of the late Mr. and Mrs. S. L. Lloyd Bryce.

Old Romance Forgotten.

Now that Valerie French is Lady Brougham and Vaux, society is willing to forget all about her blighted romance with Bradley Martin Jr. It was, you will believe, cause for more talk than one would imagine. Valerie is the granddaughter of the late Earl French of Ypres. The present earl is a much quieter man than his father and much more interested in his art than his title.

The attachment between Valerie and Brad Martin was a youthful affair caused by propinquity as much as extreme youth. Most of us agree that it was not quite wise for Val to come leaping to America when Brad was hurt in a western motor accident. But come she did, and when the rumored engagement subsequently failed to materialize and Brad married pretty Katherine Kennedy Tod every one insisted that Val had been jilted.

Now, society is willing to believe that it was just a youthful attachment and that Brad and Lady Brougham and Vaux will soon meet and be the better friends for their near romance.

George Biddle Marries.

The Biddles are such a large clan that it is indeed difficult to keep them from the spotlight. The latest to interest society is the artistic George Biddle, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. A. Sydney Biddle of Philadelphia and well known in New York and Boston. Last year George divorced Jane Belo Biddle, whom he married in Paris after having been fearfully in love with Grace Moore, the Metropolitan opera singer.

Some fifteen years ago George married Anne Coleman, but was divorced in '21, and now, as a third attempt, he had espoused Helene Sardeau, a sculptress, not too well known to society. George is a brother of Moncure Biddle, who married Katherine Chapin and is a descendant of the original William Biddle, who started the clan in 1681.

WHEN CHICAGO WAS YOUNG

By Herma Clark.

Letters from Martha Freeman Esmond to her friend, Julia Boyd of New York.

Chicago, April 12, 1877.

DEAR JULIA:

We have just come in from dinner at the Grand Pacific hotel. It was Selma's "afternoon," and we thought we'd eat out for once. The dining room of the Grand Pacific is always interesting, for some celebrity or other is sure to be stopping there. It's our most magnificent hotel.

Tonight Will pointed out to me Frank Leslie, the well known publisher from your city, who is here with a staff of writers, artists, photographers, etc. Mrs. Leslie is with her husband. John B. Drake told Will that the party, numbering about a dozen, is en route to San Francisco in the interest of Frank Leslie's Illustrated Weekly, and will be gone seven weeks. They are traveling in a special car and will stop at all the principal cities to write them up.

Will thinks it is an excellent thing for the United States to have its industries in the limelight as it may help the depression from which we are suffering. It's about four years now, isn't it, that we have had hard times. The skies should be brightening by this time. Will thinks if people could only bring themselves to look on the bright side prosperity would come sooner. I haven't fully realized how bad it has been, I suppose, but Will said tonight that many merchants have told him that this spring season will decide whether they are to stand or fall. Many of these are fine business men, too, and it would be dreadful for them to fail.

Will thinks the tide is beginning to turn, for the presidential election is out of the way, and the south is beginning to recover from the war, while machinery is wearing out and needs replenishing. "Now," he says, "if only the grasshoppers keep out of Kansas and Nebraska." Last summer was so terrible there. I have a friend who married and went to live on a Nebraska farm, and her letters have been heart breaking. She wrote once of how she and her husband were standing, looking out over their fields of promising corn—waist high, it was. As they looked, a cloud darkened the sky and in another minute the grasshoppers were upon them. In a few hours the long rows of corn had been eaten down to the ground and the garden was a waste.

Yet she could write: "We think it can't possibly be so bad next year." The heroines aren't all dead.

We attended such a beautiful wedding last night at Grace Episcopal church. Miss Mary Rice was the bride and Mr. Eben Lane the groom. Mary Rice is one of the handsomest girls in Chicago, I think, and has charming manners. Her father is the Hon. John H. Rice, an ex-congressman from Maine, who brought his family west for a visit, which has resulted in this romance. My Martha is devoted to Mary and I couldn't wish her to have a finer example of good breeding.

Dr. Clinton Locke performed the ceremony. He has so much dignity that I always like to see him officiating on such occasions. Mrs. Locke sat in the same pew with us. She is a graduate of Monticello seminary and is much pleased at Martha's being there. Mrs. Locke is so charming and gracious she has been a great help to her husband. Dr. Locke is as good as gold, but not the most tactful person in the world, and his wife often saves a situation for him.

A story is going the rounds now about them, illustrating this. The other day a Grace church parishioner, Mrs. Blank, who is a terrible bore, was seen approaching the rectory. Dr. Locke saw her from the window and said: "I'll go up to my study, Adele, until she leaves. I couldn't stand her today." An hour later the sound of a door closing made him think that the objectionable visitor had left, and Dr. Locke started downstairs calling cheerfully as he came, "Well, the old bore has gone at last, hasn't she?"

Mrs. Locke was equal to the occasion. "Yes, dear," she responded sweetly, "she has been gone more than an hour and here is our good friend, Mrs. Blank, who is calling. I knew you were busy at your sermon, so I didn't call you when she came." Isn't such a wife a jewel?

But to return to the Rice-Lane wedding. The bride was certainly a vision of loveliness as she came up the aisle on her father's arm. Her gown was ivory brocade and silk, the draperies of brocade edged with handsome willow fringe caught with garlands of wild roses, lilies of the valley and orange blossoms. Her long tulle veil was held with a wreath of orange blossoms.

The bridesmaids were Fannie Lane, sister of the groom, and Florence Griswold, daughter of ex-Gov. Griswold of Connecticut, both lovely looking girls. Philo Otis and a Mr. Holmes of Kentucky were groomsmen.

Mrs. Rice, the bride's mother, wore a handsome seal brown velvet gown with a polonaise of fawn color brocade trimmed with point lace. Mrs. E. S. Lane, the groom's mother, had on a wonderfully handsome dress. It was made with a black velvet train, over which she wore a pearl colored silk polonaise elaborately trimmed with exquisite black Chantilly lace relieved by blush roses.

At the reception, which was held at the Woodruff house, I saw many people I knew—the George Otises, Dr. and Mrs. Owen, Mr. and Mrs. D. B. Shipman, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Counselman, the Augustus N. Eddys and the Arthur Catons. But my letter is too long. I must say good night.

Your loving,

MARTHA FREEMAN ESMOND.

Foot Notes.

Mrs. Clara F. Ewen of Chicago writes us that two children of P. P. Bliss [the Chicago singer and composer, who, with his wife, was lost in the Ashtabula disaster] are living. George Goodwin Bliss lives in Detroit; Philip P. Bliss in the east.

Horace Spencer Fiske of Harper library, University of Chicago, sends this column his "Poems on Chicago and Illinois," containing a sonnet on Gurdon Saltonstall Hubbard, from which we quote five lines:

"For faith was in his soul, and cleared his sight;
And strength was his, as of the oak he blazed;
And largeness, like the generous sky that raised
Its roof above him; and a love of right
That made this man a man of peace and might."

Mrs. Eben Lane, the lovely bride, whose wedding "Martha" attended in 1877, lives at the Chicago Woman's club, beloved and admired now as then.

Mrs. Alfred Voss of Elgin, in a most delightful letter to this column, tells of the pithy sayings of her two grandmothers. Her father's mother used to say when some one had recovered from an illness: "All healed up and haired over." A figure of speech this English-Irish grandmother often used was: "Finer than frog hair." Still another saying was: "O, she's just as she is, and so is a toad." [One can't be expected to change one's nature.] Her bedtime remark was: "Time all honest folk were a-bed and rogues a-traveling."

Mrs. Voss' maternal grandmother wasn't far behind in wise saws. One of these was: "Pride and poverty are always bedfellows." If you said: "Much obliged" for a favor done, she never failed to retort: "'Bliges would starve a dog to death."

P. V. Mahon of the Wrigley building, Chicago, sends a versification of the Celtic greeting, "Slaidhe mille faithe":

"Come in the evening, come in the morning;
Come when you're looked for, come without warning;
The oftener you come, the more we'll adore you,
A thousand welcomes await here afore you."

This greeting to a favored guest is often used in Ireland.

These old sayings are getting awfully interesting. If you recall a wise saw [not just the usual proverb, but one with a novel twist], or an odd and vivid figure of speech, handed down in your family, send it in to Herma Clark, care of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, Chicago.

Hospital for Little Cripples Thing of Beauty

Interiors Are the Work of Mrs. Francis Johnson.

By Cousin Eve.

WHETHER Mrs. Francis Johnson of Chicago and Mrs. Charles H. Sabin of New York are having a race in making hospitals beautiful and interesting instead of drab and rather dreadful—I know not. But after seeing the new Hospital for Destitute Crippled Children on the Midway one day last week I would say that Mrs. Johnson had won. A hospital couldn't be in better taste. It is simple and practical and everything that meets the eye is delightful, a pleasure and not a pain. Quite moderne, too, in an unaffected way.

Mrs. Johnson has been working on this beautiful Gothic building for eleven months, with an interlude in Europe when she traveled in Sweden with Mrs. W. Somerset Maugham and Lady Horlick and studied the Stockholm Exposition of Modern Decorative Arts. After that the party went through Germany, taking notes from the practical Germans, and spent days in the hospitals and galleries of Berlin and Munich.

The Passavant hospital was Mrs. Johnson's earliest success in hospital furnishing—also a magnificent Gothic building in stone and decorated with elegance, cheerfulness and a certain luxe. From this her reputation spread and Mrs. Arthur Reynolds, chairman of the woman's board of the Destitute Crippled Children's hospital, asked her if she would undertake their lovely new building. She would, and did, and her work is now done and a credit to the University of Chicago, with which it is affiliated.

Four Stories of Caen Stone.

To the east of Billings Memorial, it rises four stories of Caen stone, two wings, the Hicks and McElwee Memorials, and two Gothic entrances. The first leads one to a paneled vestibule, octagonal, modernistic, in heavily grained woods, oddly biased and effective. The floor is marble outlined in metal. The chandelier is smoothly polished iron, in spreading branches, each of which holds a newly invented Swedish light, like an inverted cup.

To the right is a small reception room paneled in pine and furnished simply in rose terra cotta velours. The side lights and chandelier are smoothly finished glass with rosy parchment shades; the hangings, a pale terra cotta, rough, silky fabric, brocaded in silvery effect. A walnut table carries twin white lamps with simple parchment shades. Two white leather side chairs complete the room. To the left lies the first floor of hospital rooms all done uniformly in terra cotta rose, the corridor paved in marble and terra cotta rubber—the ceilings paneled in gypsum, couleur de rose.

Each little room is walled in the soft, creamy rose; the beds are metal, aluminum, silvery and shining, the bureaus gray, with separate mirrors. At the windows are Venetian blinds in rose which turn with a simple pull and are the latest European note.

The kitchens of this floor are terra cotta rose and aluminum, spotless and shining, and to the east is the suite of Dr. Allerton, celebrated orthopedic surgeon who heads the hospital.

A Green Color Scheme.

The next floor is palest sea green throughout. Here the littlest babes are moving in. Flooring green rubber, corridors in pale green gypsum to deaden sound, and all hangings and detail are in the uniform color. The third floor is done in a creamy yellow and is reserved for paying guests. Similar in every detail, except very chic little arm chairs, covered in yellow and brown plaided cotton—and, yes, odd little floor lamps for the sick youngsters.

On the top floor the universal color is a lovely shade of pale blue. Here, as on the other floors, the rooms are separated by walls, and these walls have three windows with shades of the prevailing color, which roll up and down. Each room has also a large, flat screen of steel painted according to its floor, light and strong. On the top floor are an open air sun porch and a playroom. In here, who should we find on a stepladder but Robert Lee Eskridge. "And what was he doing, pray?" you will ask. And I won't mind telling you that this well known artist was dashingly painting that blue playroom into a French circus. At the windows were French awnings of yellow and red stripes, and between the windows scenes from the cirque, a fascinating French poodle leaping through a hoop, a trick elephant balanced on a sphere, some fat white circus horses cavorting trickily, and a trained lion sitting on a tub, which the artist promised he wouldn't for a moment let look like those arrogant, disagreeable lions on the front of the Art institute. It will be a chic place, that circus. And the entire hospital has chic, too, but it is practical. And what a place Chicago is, that one of our leading butterflies could imagine all this and make a gift of it to Chicago!

Mrs. Charles H. Sabin decorates hospitals in New York for love of it, too, but her hotel decorating business she charges for. A rich woman herself, she is married to a banker, and also heads the National Woman's Prohibition Reform.

A Farm in France.

People with imagination are always doing nice queer things. They think of them; then they do them. I am thinking of those two tiny, charming sisters, the Misses Alice and Margaret Moran, who have recently sailed gayly away for their other home in France. In Chicago they have a conventional house in Ritchie court on the gold coast, and in France they could have had one of the many comfortable, conventional châteaux outside of Paris, dating from any century or period the heart hankers after. But the Morans longed for a farm, a French farm, and their predestined abode is at Rambouillet, of all places, south of Paris as the crow flies, and not so far from the historic hunting seat of Rambouillet, where kings of

Tourists, Well Known, Obscure, Flock to Paris

It's Candle Round Which They All Flutter.

By May Birkhead.

PARIS.—[Special.]—This season shows an exceptional outburst of tourist activity, with many Chicago and other notables converging at Ville Lumiere, some sojourning here and others proceeding elsewhere on the continent.

The Aquitania landed George Cardinal Mundelein, who stopped at Paris en route to Rome. The Leviathan brought Col. Robert G. Morse of Chicago, one of his fellow passengers being Gen. John J. Pershing, who usually spends the spring at the Hotel Crillon. This time he will rest after completing the publication of his memoirs.

Some Noted Visitors.

The same boat also carried Mrs. L. A. Gunnarson and her daughter, and Dr. Alexander Hamilton Rice, the South American explorer, who, with Mrs. Rice, reaches Paris every spring. Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Molitor and John Galsworthy, the British novelist, and Mrs. Galsworthy, got off the Leviathan at Southampton.

The Europa carried Chicago people, including Mrs. Potter Palmer and her daughter, Bertha, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel A. Ettelson, the Rev. Edward J. Fox, and Mr. and Mrs. O. Eitel of Chicago. Other Chicago arrivals were Mr. and Mrs. James W. Thorne, Mr. and Mrs. H. Zimmerman of Rock Island, with their children, plan to spend the summer in a Paris suburb on the Seine, Le Vesinet.

Two events are causing much interest here, at the moment. One is the presence of the Spanish royal family, which may reside for some time at Fontainebleau, while Alfonso makes arrangements for a prolonged sojourn in England. Each day many Parisians catch glimpses of some member of the royal exiles, either leaving or entering the Motel Maurice, where they have had the habit of staying for years, and which is situated on the celebrated shopping street of the Rue de la Paix.

Another event causing keen anticipation is the forthcoming opening of the International Colonial Exposition, whose formal inauguration is scheduled for May 6. Only those visiting the exposition at the Bois de Vincennes recently appreciate the varie-

NEWS OF CHICAGO SOCIETY

France have spent a night en route to exile.

As one drives toward Chartres one has a fleeting glimpse on the left through thick woods of the old turreted house where slept Henry of Navarre, Napoleon I., and Napoleon III., and where France's bachelor president, M. Doumergue, recreates. The Moran farm has a straw stack, a duck pond with ducks, a formidable procession of geese, a temperamental French cat, a watch dog with a terrible bark, some woolly lambs, a tin Lizzie, a nice vegetable garden, and plumbing. They adore their place, do the Morans.

To the south lies Chartres cathedral, its great mass with uneven spires rising from the misty plains of Picardy. Last year on leaving the farm a bathtub was to be installed for the two French peasant maids [I wonder, pourquoi?], and the Misses Moran left many directions with the local plumber as to its location, etc.

On returning to France, what was their supreme astonishment to find neatly set up, side by side, twin bathtubs in a commodious, airy chamber, one for each maid. Probably the plumber figured it was the latest American mode! In this neighborhood the famous Duchesse d'Uzes owns vast estates, and the huntsman's horn, the baying of hounds, and the voices of gay Parisians often break the rural stillness.

More Rural Delight.

Speaking of rural delights and hunting makes me think of the Victor Beauforts and what they are doing—a charming couple—the former Billee Thompson that was, and Capt. Beaufort of the English army. Mrs. Beaufort's son, Alexis, has just inherited a very solid fortune under the will of his popular father, David Thompson, who died last year in Florida. Young Alexis is still a schoolboy, however.

This winter on a visit to the Morse Elys at Thomasville, Ga., Mrs. Beaufort became entranced with an old colonial house not far from the Elys, and, quickly making up her mind as to the possibilities of the lovely old place, bought it. The house is beautifully proportioned, and the estate has azaleas, lilacs, and all the flowering exotics of the south, round and about. Capt. Beaufort is on the eve of retiring from the army, and the family plan to spend their winters in the south, hunting, shooting—out of doors, in short, in a delicious climate.

And now for some bad news! For those who had ordained that Leander J. McCormick, second son of the L. Hamilton McCormicks, should return to Chicago and take up his abode, and join the stag line at balls and become again one of our leading bachelors—he isn't going to. Leander McCormick is one of the handsomest and most charming men I know, and a dancer of renown—my word, what a gorgeous dancer that man is! Before he came back from London to Chicago, years ago, his fame had preceded him. And now, since his divorce from Alice Cudahy, he has just about given up dancing for fishing. A few weeks ago he got back to New York from a fishing trip at the antipodes, joined his parents at Miami, where he fished again and landed some fat Florida fish—and now he is off, once more; in fact, he must have landed ere this off the Europa in England.

His destination is a very smart, exclusive fishing club up in Hampshire on the banks of a river called the Teal—the world's most select trout fishing stream. Leander McCormick's mother was English, and his two brothers, Edward and Alister, are married to English girls and no longer live in Chicago, so I think the chances are slim that Leander will ever join the stag line at Chicago dances.

Are They to Disappear?

As to Chicago dances, I wonder if the same thing isn't happening to them that is happening to kings. Is it the twilight? I went to one the other night, at the Bendix galleries. A lovely place, smart, gay young committee, popular charity, fashionable clientele. It was for the Lower North Community council, of which Frederick West is chairman, Miss Frieda Folts executive secretary, and the board bears the names, among others, of Adlai Stevenson, Carroll H. Sudler Jr., James B. Waller, Mrs. J. B. Herrick, Dean Brown, and Dr. Robert Park. It is a nonpolitical social service agency, and does lots of good.

They talk things over together, the poor and the rich, and better standards of living are promoted. Also child raising problems.

So fashionable was their ball, with so many dinners beforehand, and general swank—it began to look at midnight as if nobody would really get there. Bridge was going on in the library and backgammon in the drawing room, but the ballroom, where an orchestra was playing dolorous tunes, was almost deserted. At half after 1 my favorite "Peanut Vendor" had not been done once.

Here and there were lovely beings, to be sure—Mrs. Mitchell Blair in white satin, Angela Johnston, the radiant bride-to-be, also in white; Marion McFadden in white with diamante shoulder straps, looking like an early day Egyptian angel; Mrs. Tommy Wheelock in black with emerald shoes; Mrs. Sammy Rinaker in a vivid apple green printed frock, and Dorothy Ranney in a quaint print of yellow and brown. Mrs. Henry Field, also in white satin, so smart since her return from foreign parts, and Peggy Hambleton in something charming, I don't know what. Also, those two lively buds, Elsa and Beatrice, and among the men George W. Dulany Jr., who looks like a portrait of some youthful French king—was it Louis XV.?—and John R. Winterbotham, who dances like a New Yorker, and Joseph Ryerson, very late, but better late than never, and Mr. Galitzine and Mr. Vovodsky.

But, as I was saying, there were quite a few charming people, but by no means the gay beings in numbers necessary to make a good ball. At 1 o'clock quite a few dinner parties sauntered in, but why have dances if dinners are more amusing? I ask you.

A Charming Luncheon.

That enchanting, ever green occupation of box selling for the Chicago Civic Opera began last week with a luncheon at the house of Mrs. Rockefeller McCormick, who is honorary chairman of the box committee. It was a luncheon of about twenty-four, seated at one table spread with white damask and set with massive and magnificent pieces of silver, two huge bowls being solidly filled with glowing jonquils.

The sensation of the meeting was Mrs. McCormick's flaming and inspiring speech, in which her enthusiasm and belief in our beautiful opera, our magnificent city, and our great future were expressed in a torrent of words by one who is usually calm and measured in her speech. The first matinée box for the year was sold at this meeting to Mrs. Charles S. Davis. Another to Mrs. Joseph Long.

Mrs. Waller Borden was temporary chairman of the meeting and will preside until she leaves for Europe, late in May. Mrs. Jacob Baur, who has been chairman of the box committee for twelve years with much dash and enthusiasm, is greatly enjoying her new found freedom.

A Visitor from Jerusalem.

Mrs. John B. Drake and Miss Helen Drake sent out cards last week to meet a very interesting visitor from Jerusalem, Mrs. Frederick Vester, at the Blackstone. Mrs. Vester is the daughter of Mr. Spafford, who a long time ago was a law partner of the late John P. Wilson. Over fifty years ago he sent his wife and four daughters abroad. Their ship was wrecked and only Mrs. Spafford was saved. The Spaffords decided to devote the remainder of their lives to good works, so with two little daughters (one of whom is the present Mrs. Vester) they left Chicago and settled in Jerusalem to uplift the Arabs.

They built a beautiful house, and their daughter later married Frederick Vester, son of the English commissioner, and is carrying on the welfare work started by her parents. From seeing their movies, I imagine the Vester house is part of a compound, called the American colony, for the Drakes all stopped there on a Mediterranean trip two years ago, and called it "heaven" after the dirt and discomfort of Palestine hotels. Fresh, clean beds, food, milk, and vegetables, and charming, one might say elegant, surroundings.

Mrs. Vester is a beautiful woman with graying hair and brilliant dark eyes. Her present visit is to collect funds to carry on her welfare work among these Bedouin babes. Her board of American sponsors is eminent, but I fear she is finding our current depressions something to reckon with. Dr. John Timothy Stone introduced Mrs. Vester.

A Valiant Man Passes.

The Far East reminds me of that valiant and modest man who died last week in Arizona, John F. Bass. With his wife he had gone to Tucson to be near his venerable mother, Mrs. Perkins Bass. His brother Robert, former governor of New Hampshire, with his family, was also there, in this bright, shining modern Egypt.

John Bass was a graduate of Harvard, a wealthy war correspondent who lived for years in the heart of wars. His only son, John F. Bass Jr., was born on a Greek battlefield. His wife accompanied him on his campaigns and sometimes carried his copy from the front line to the cable office. Often in their adventuring they carried poison against capture and torture.

The Basses went through two Chinese wars. In Poland during the world war, John Bass was wounded. His knowledge of Balkan matters and certain modern political intrigues in southern Europe made him invaluable to the government at Washington, and he was the author of several books. When in Chicago he naturally was a much prized dinner guest, but a most modest one. Generous, kind and thoughtful, he was one of our star citizens.

Mr. and Mrs. Alvin McCord had an informal reception Saturday afternoon at their apartment, 191 East Walton place. It was in honor of the engagement of Mrs. Drane Kryss to Malcolm Conant, a popular bachelor, whose desertion from the bachelor ranks is nothing but spectacular, in view of Chicago's eternal bachelor shortage. The tea was gay and the California bride-to-be was voted pretty and winning. I met Mrs. Harris, Mrs. Loring Coleman, Mrs. Augustus Eddy, Mrs. Hathaway Watson, Mrs. Jacob Baur, Mr. and Mrs. Bendelari, Mr. and Mrs. Bowman Lingle, Mrs. Long, Miss Petty Hambleton, Dr. and Mrs. Duncan Browne, and Col. Voevodsky, among many others.

Mr. and Mrs. Eames MacVeagh opened their charming apartment at 900 North Michigan avenue last Monday night for the second meeting of the "Cercle des Innocents." This French causerie started by Count de Fontnouvelle, French consul, has caught on not only with one bang but with several bangs, and people are now studying French who once thought they knew enough of that elusive language. But membership in this exclusive organization is limited to those who speak rapidly and with enthusiasm, and who have other qualifications.

An Amusing Talk.

Prof. Cauuet made the French discourse, which was a brilliant and amusing talk on "Love Throughout the Ages." I remember one phrase, typical of the Parisian: "When a man loves a woman, it is comedy—when a woman loves a man, it is tragedy!" After this delightful, droll discourse, which set the note of the Cercle—its pace, so to speak as an amusing and charming slant on life—movies were shown. Among them some beautiful pictures of Paris taken by the talented Eames on a late trip abroad. Then there was a petit souper et on dansait!

The next meeting, May 6, will be chez the Hayden Harrises when a company from the University of Chicago will present "Les Précieuses Ridicules."

I must say a few words about that splendid tea at the Arts club, last Sunday afternoon, whereat one saw exhibits, paintings and sculptures by members. Many excellent things, but people in general massed up in front of Gerald Frank's "Lady or Tiger?"—a beautiful painting of some unknown lady whom the gifted Mr. Frank, who is also a clever actor, evidently thinks might be a tiger, under the skin.

I recognized the lovely creature and also admired greatly Frederick Bartlett's modernistic fish—but fear I would hesitate to buy such giddy looking fishes at the fish stall.

Londoners Agog Over Approach of Royal Courts

LONDON.—(AP)—Although the royal courts still are some weeks hence, the big rush already is under way at the American embassy.

Out of the hundreds who will curtsey to King George and Queen Mary at this year's courts on May 19 and 20 and June 9 and 10 only thirty or thirty-two will be Americans. More than a hundred applications have been made, however, and Walter T. Prendergast, the third secretary, is devoting his full time to the delicate business.

The presentations are a personal prerogative of the ambassador and the selections are made by him.

Glittering Social Event.

Last of the western world's great courts, the presentations at the court of St. James each year are Europe's most glittering social event, and a regal cap for the English "season."

Whether the prince of Wales or Prince George will be present at any of this year's courts can't be determined yet, but it is probable they will attend at least one.

At this year's courts it is expected 6,000 will get the chance to see the throne room in the cold, gray palace at the head of the Mall.

Means Everything to Debs.

For an English debutante with serious intentions in the social world, presentation at court means everything as far as the right start is concerned. For one thing, it determines her social standing to a large extent and assures her invitation to the affairs of those less exalted.

Furthermore, there is the preparation, which takes some weeks. First the court gown must be made in strict accordance with specifications given out by the lord chamberlain and approved by Queen Mary herself.

Then there is the rush on the "big day" when cars bearing excited debutantes and their sponsors pack the Mall leading to Buckingham palace, waiting their turn to be presented.

Presentation Time Brief.

Once in the throne room, after careful inspection in the anteroom for any deviation from the rules of dress, their time is very brief.

After her curtsey is made to their majesties, the deb is hustled out at the side and then away—most likely to have her picture taken by one of London's swankier photographers.

Presentation does not hold the same social significance for Americans as English, but the thrill seems to be much the same.

Capital Woman's Interests Range from Law to Art

WASHINGTON.—(AP) — Many women prominent in capital life keep up their "school work" after they are married.

These studies range from dressmaking and cooking to courses in constitutional law. Art and short story writing claim some. Mrs. Burton K. Wheeler, wife of the senator from Montana and mother of six children, is taking a four year course at Washington university.

Mrs. Norman Murry Smith of Oregon finds time in her round of entertaining to keep up her study of law. She already has a diploma, but is now studying cases in the Supreme court. Mrs. John Amherst Cecil, the former Cornelia Vanderbilt, takes art lessons, as does her mother, Mrs. Peter Goelet Gerry.

England Revises Law on Divorce

LONDON.—(AP)—England's rigid divorce law, which has resulted in making "arranged" divorces almost customary, is undergoing revision.

The new measure, based on recommendations of the royal commission on divorce, recognizes these grounds:

Adultery, desertion for three years, cruelty, incurable insanity, certified lunacy for at least five years, and incurable drunenness after separation from the applicant for three years under a temporary separation order on the ground of habitual drunkenness.

The bill is backed by members from each party.

Salary for Tipless Waiters.

LONDON.—(AP)—Under a resolution before the house of commons, waiters in the house restaurant would be paid $1,300 a year and members would be absolved from tipping them.

Infant Welfare Society Tells of Work

Organization Has Twenty-One Stations Equipped to Carry Out Most Scientific Methods of Child Health Supervision.

By Roberta Nangle.

BABY WEEK begins today and the Infant Welfare society of Chicago asks the world to lend an ear to its tale.

"I am not going to unload any hard luck story on you," writes Miss Townsend, the extension secretary, "but it is a fact that this year these babies need all the help they can get more than ever before; consequently, more than ever we hope we may have your coöperation."

Needless to say, nothing gives the club department more pleasure than filling this column with infant welfare news. The story of the society's work is always fascinating, and if space permitted we'd write about it every week.

Saved Thousands of Babies.

Miss Townsend's letter about this year's activities is a concise and interesting presentation: "Because the Infant Welfare society has saved thousands of babies, who would certainly have died without its ministrations, and has kept many more thousands in health, who would certainly have been sick, and in its twenty years of service has started almost a whole generation of Chicago youngsters safely on the road to useful adult citizenship, this society is asking every one during Baby week to learn what Infant Welfare does for our poorest babies, and then to apply that knowledge to babies in other classes of society who are not poor and who, therefore, whatever good fortune they have otherwise, do not have the good luck to be cared for by the Infant Welfare society.

"Twenty years ago when the Infant Welfare society started its never ceasing campaign to save the babies a spot map of the city was made showing the districts where infant mortality was highest, and it was found in every case that these were the districts where the housing situation was poorest, where overcrowding was greatest, and where the burden of poverty was heaviest.

Where Need Is Greatest.

"In the ten districts shown by this spot map to have the greatest need of infant welfare service, the first ten stations were opened, and the location of the eleven stations which have since been added to the original ten has been determined in the same manner. A periodic check of the infant mortality spot map of the city is made to be sure that the districts which the society covers are still the ones where the need is greatest.

"The program of the Infant Welfare society for insuring the health and happiness, present and future, of the babies follows the most approved scientific methods of child health supervision. It starts with the mother during the prenatal period, continues with the baby as soon after birth as he can be brought to the station, and carries him through his sixth year, when he starts to school.

"The twenty-one stations are equipped with a staff of 104 doctors, nurses and nutritionists. By means of conferences held twice every week in the stations at which the doctor carefully examines the expectant mother, the baby or the older child, whichever it may be, followed by regular home visits by the nurses and nutritionists, the Infant Welfare society teaches the expectant mother how to preserve her own health.

Helps Mother and Child.

"After the birth of the baby it teaches the mother how to keep him well and his home sanitary, and through its mental hygiene department it helps the handicapped mother in the training of the child, so that he early acquires good habits, which are the best guarantee of his becoming a useful, desirable citizen in adult life.

"The budget of the Infant Welfare society this year is $104,000, ninety-eight per cent of which comes from voluntary donations. Unique among the various social service organizations of Chicago is the woman's auxiliary of the Infant Welfare society, which raises more than half of the budget. This woman's auxiliary is composed of 'centers' of women among the more prosperous classes who unite to raise money for the work, to do volunteer work, such as weighing babies and helping with the records in the stations and to sew on layettes for the babies.

"These centers cover Chicago and its suburbs from Lake Forest on the north down to the South Shore district at the other end of town and swinging around to take in the western suburbs as far as Hinsdale and Western Springs. Miss Helen D. Wilkins of 5421 Cornell avenue is president of the woman's auxiliary this year, and some of the prominent women who carry on the work are Mrs. John F. Jelke Jr. and Mrs. John H. McIlvaine of Lake Forest, Mrs. Henry M. Dawes of Evanston, Mrs. J. H. Roberts of Glencoe and Mrs. Eugene S. Talbot Jr. of Chicago."

CLUB ETHICS

By Maude Swalm Evans.

"I HEARD a funny thing today," reported the south side member to a group of friends at a club tea. "A big laundry company is giving $25 to any club that will round up fifty of its members to spend a morning going through said laundry plant."

"Fifty cents apiece for a morning's work!" deplored the north side member.

"Twenty-five dollars for a nice sociable gathering," corrected the south side member. "The woman who told me about it went with her club and had a beautiful time, besides learning the latest methods of one of our biggest industries. She was most enthusiastic about it."

"Sounds like advertising to me," voiced the north side member.

"Of course it's advertising," agreed the south side member. "And it's also publicity, and also education, and almost any club can use an extra $25 to good advantage."

"I know a place where a club can hold a bridge party for a hundred women free of charge, with a luncheon thrown in," contributed the west side member. "The luncheon is composed of commercial brands of food and the promoters of the affair tell you all about them as you eat. It's highly exciting."

"More advertising," insisted the north side member.

"Yes, but you see the club is given the right to sell tickets for the party and can easily clear $100. I've heard the room is reserved for months ahead," the west side member replied. "And the women learn all about foods and food values and how to prepare a 'canned' meal in a hurry when they get home late from the club."

"I know one, too," spoke up the suburban member. "A big rug manufacturing company is offering a large room rug to any club that goes through its rug works, a hundred strong! Now if some enterprising lumber company would offer a club house for a visit of a club to their carpenter shop, or planing mills, or wherever they make their houses, we'd be fixed."

Attentions from the Air.

One evening, just as my father [called Bill by every one] turned on the radio the announcer said, "Hello, Bill." We all had a good laugh out of that, but about a week later a stranger thing happened.

We were listening to a concert and my Uncle Frank had just remarked that he liked the selection the orchestra was playing. At the end the announcer said, "How did you like that, Frank?" M. E. F.

Mutual Desire to Call.

One day at about 10 o'clock I decided to call up one of my friends. The line was busy, so I waited for about ten minutes. Then I tried again. My friend said that she had been trying to call me at about 10 o'clock, but found the line was busy. F. L. G.

. . . this delightful Tooth Paste saves you $3 a year

WHY don't you save $3 a year or more by using Listerine Tooth Paste at 25¢ instead of high-priced dentifrices that accomplish no better results?

Listerine Tooth Paste is used by more than three million people. To a great many of them, price is no object. Results are their sole basis of judgment. And the results of Listerine Tooth Paste are so quickly apparent, once you try it, that you will wonder why you didn't use it long ago.

This dentifrice is made by the makers of Listerine, the safe antiseptic. This alone guarantees its quality. That it can be sold at 25¢ is due to sharp economies effected by mass production and modern methods of manufacture.

If you have not already used Listerine Tooth Paste, get a tube today. Give it a thorough trial. Compare it with any tooth paste you have ever used regardless of price, and judge by results alone. They will win you to this new thrift dentifrice as they won three million people before you.

We ask you to note how little brushing is necessary to impart to your teeth a charming, flashing brilliance. Note, too, how swiftly but how gently this tooth paste removes the stains, discolorations, and stubborn tartar.

After you have used it six months or a year, look at your teeth and see how free they are from cracks and fissures. That is because the cleansing and polishing agents in Listerine Tooth Paste are among the gentlest known. They are harder than tartar and hence remove it. But they are softer than enamel and consequently are harmless to it.

Look, too, for that delightful feeling of freshness and exhilaration that follows its use—the sensation you associate with Listerine itself.

And last but not least, reflect that these benefits are yours for about half of what you would ordinarily pay. Lambert Pharmacal Co., St. Louis, Mo., U. S. A.

Buy silk hose with that $3 you save

Compared to dentifrices in the 50¢ class, Listerine Tooth Paste at 25¢ saves approximately $3 a year per person, on the basis of a tube per month being used. With that $3 you can buy many things, stockings, gloves, or handkerchiefs. These are merely suggestions.

Arts Club Members' Work on View

Still Life, Portraits, Landscapes Hold Interest of the Observer.

By Eleanor Jewett.

THE Arts club members' exhibition is most interesting, this year. A hurried descent upon it after a ten days' absence from town yielded harvest for considerable thought. For instance, and to be exact, "when is a nude not a nude" juggles and twists in one's mind as the direct approach to Roy Collins' lovely painting of "Diana," a painting that should in truth be labeled Venus and, were the delicacies of life considered, be masked with a far different face. It does not seem exactly fair to every one concerned that the professional model be confused with the amateur, to the amateur's undoing at the hands of her friends.

This model Diana is a lovely creature of white flesh and soft curves, but she really is Venus and she really is some one else again, and, all in all, a judgment not hard boiled would cry to Mr. Collins that he should draw the line somewhere. The willing horse [put public] will not drink unblinkingly forever. There are some things that are not done.

Gerald Frank errs on the side of sentiment in this exhibit. We have been pleasured during the last few seasons with various charming ladies of his, some with cockatoos, some with rabbits, some with babies, and now he presents us with one with a tiger. It is, indeed, a royal tiger, Bengal undoubtedly, with lambent eyes and yellow, tawny head, but that head with its gleaming, searching, kittenish eyes rests on the knee of a very pretty lady with head tied up in a bathing cap [a sweet cap] and her gown, in the Sir Joshua Reynolds' fashion, square neck and flowing. She is utterly charming, also as utterly decorative and as little meaningful as a calendar girl. She is the pit into which Gerald Frank's imagination will upset him unless somewhere he gets a grip on reality.

We all know Gerald Frank can paint. He is a brilliant craftsman. There is danger, and that is why this red lantern is swung today, that he may rest on past achievements and repeat with lamentable results past successes that by repetition cheapen his wit, fancy and power.

Skill at a Disadvantage.

Ingeborg Christensen, also in this exhibit, puts her skill at a disadvantage. Her "Sketch," the portrait of an old gentleman, is soft and fuddled, blurred, with cheek that looks as though it were a rosy sponge. Her "Sunny Boy" is too blurred, too short, not well proportioned nor designed, and altogether not up in any way to the sort of portraiture Miss Christensen can and does achieve.

Frances Badger has one of the fine moments in the exhibit with her startling and stunning, her enormously decorative "Chinese Still Life." Cecil Clark Davis runs into the Romney and Reynolds type of portrait in her treatment of "Clive Runnells Junior," a handsome little boy with a thick crop of chestnut hair and lovely blue eyes. Helga Haugan Dean is abrupt and blunt, but exhilarating after Ingeborg Christensen, with her "Two Kids." Katharine Dudley offers one of the loveliest of portraits in her tender and exquisite likeness of Mrs. Harrison.

Harriet Blackstone has almost succeeded in making a beauty out of Madame Galli-Curci. She has secured a dramatic portrait with a sufficient resemblance in face and a picturesque flow of costume. Beatrice S. Levy has an interesting "Lisa and Flowers," high in key, decorative in value, a young girl seated by a table on which in a vase are the most fascinating of flowers. Magda Heuermann shows an extremely well painted "Still Life," really one of the most exquisite and most finished pictures in the room.

Two Attractive Sketches.

Charles Fabens Kelley offers two attractive slight sketches, one on the beach with umbrellas and the other a February landscape on Cape Cod. Blanche Weyburn Kerr has a delightfully concocted landscape in soft shy colors, "Church in the Valley, Mexico." Other Mexican paintings offered are more strenuous, more vivid, more real, but not more charming. Look, for instance, at Laura van Pappelendam's stunning "Cortez Palace, Mexico," and "Leveling the Street." Flora Schofield seems to have bitten from the same apple that Chirico indulges in. She has heroics in gray. You will find a splendid speciman of what she can do in her "Still Life in the Studio."

Frederic Clay Bartlett, we all know well, has completely gone over to modernism, or expressionism, and in this exhibit he gives us a gorgeous chance to praise his enterprise because he offers us an intrinsically well conceived and well carried out picture, "Art School." On the other hand, he offers us a splendid opportunity to sniff with "Fish" as the titbit. The "Fish" undoubtedly were spawned on the left bank of the Seine.

A Charming Still Life.

Charles Biesel delights us with his charming "Still Life," an arrangement of flowers. Carol Aus has two interesting portraits, both well done. Joseph Allworthy has a portrait that is a sturdy bit of painting and a "Still Life" in his accustomed charming manner, yellow roses in a gray jar against a blue background. The roses are so perfect one almost smells their fragrance. The odd bit of pink ribbon lying on the table, it bears a weird resemblance to a child's garters, does not add to the interest of the color scheme. It possibly puts it just the least bit into the rôle of sentimental picture, something that should not occur, for Mr. Allworthy is a skilled craftsman, a wise technician and an unusually brilliant master of values, texture and color. It may be his imagination slipped just a little when he conceived the ribbon.

There is good work in the exhibit, too, by Marie Blanke, Kathryn Cherry, Anita Willets Burnham, Eleanor Duke [two attractive, gay, colorful little paintings, like sudden glimpses in a quaint old world story], Robert Lee Eskridge [one of the best a superb figure study, "Young Mangarevan"], Jessie Benton Evans, Agnes Cook Gale [the "Flowers"], Elizabeth Tuttle Holsman, Bertha Jaques, Lee Sturges [two fine etchings], Elisabeth Telling [two charming pencil portraits], Josephine L. Reichmann, Pauline Palmer, Anna Lynch, Anna Lee Stacey, Katherine Wolcott and Florence Walsh.

Art Notes.

In the Palmolive Walden Book Shop gallery paintings by Frank W. Long and sculpture by Frank Schoolcraft are being shown.

Opening yesterday, an exhibit of portraits by Beatrice Woods may be found in the Knoedler gallery.

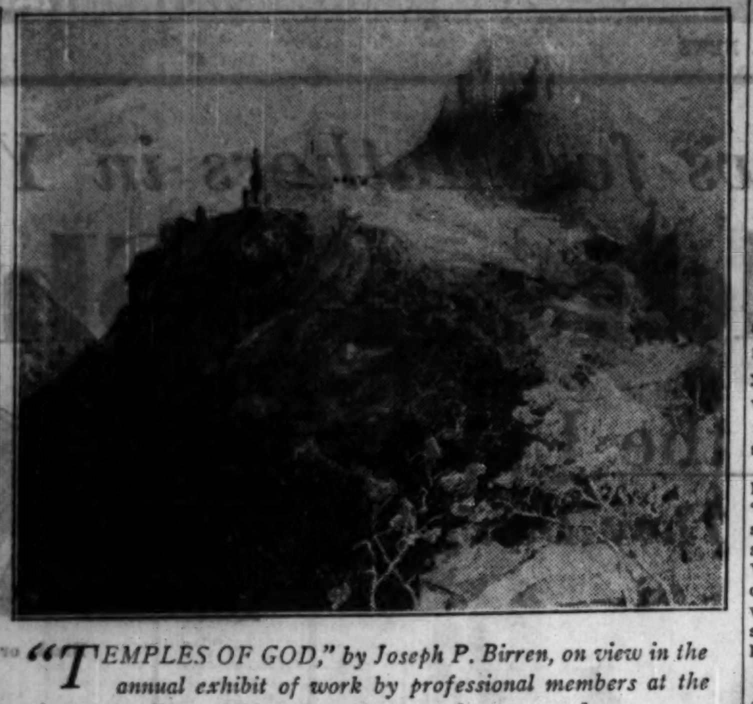
The Chicago Woman's club is showing the eighteenth annual exhibit of the Chicago Society of Miniature Painters in its large room to April 30.

John Norton was given the gold medal of the Architects' League of America for excellence in mural decoration in New York last Thursday.

In the Knoedler gallery the etchings by Charles Meryon will remain on view to May 2. This exhibit is well worth seeing.

An exhibition of recent water colors of Taos, New Mexico, by Victor Higgins may be found in the Chester H. Johnson galleries, Fine Arts building.

Paintings by Salvatore Salla are on view in the Allerton House gallery from April 18 to May 6.



"TEMPLES OF GOD," by Joseph P. Birren, on view in the annual exhibit of work by professional members at the Arts club. The exhibit will continue another two weeks.

BRIDE

MRS. HARRISON A. SIEREN.

The marriage of Miss Marian Dolores Hoffman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John L. Hoffman of Wilmette, to Harrison A. Sieren, son of Mrs. Anna V. Sieren, was to take place yesterday at St. Joseph's church in Wilmette.

Miss Bartlett Lists Trousseau Needs of the Average Girl

Etiquette questions will be answered on receipt of a stamped, self-addressed envelope. Address Miss Helen Bartlett, Sunday department, Chicago Tribune.

By Helen Bartlett.

AS we said last week, the official announcement of an engagement does not take place until a fairly definite date has been set for the impending wedding. Therefore, going step by step with the young woman contemplating marriage, we feel that her next absorbing interest is the collecting of her trousseau.

It's characteristic of the times, perhaps, that the words "trousseau" or "hope chest" no longer bring to mind stacks of towels, of pillow cases, or such mundane things as dish cloths. We think, rather, of clothes—stacks of them if we can afford them; or if we can't, judicious selection of necessary things. Household linens come later, at least in the plans.

Requirements Vary.

Naturally, it is impossible to give a trousseau list that would answer every girls' requirements. The sort of life one is going to lead and the amount of money to be spent must determine the kind and extent of purchases for the individual. However, a girl wants as expansive an assortment of clothes as possible. Having plenty to spend simplifies this to the point where it needs no discussion in a column like this. But the girl with a limited amount to spend will do well to bear these precepts in mind:

Buy good things. If being good means being fewer, don't be disturbed. It's much the better way.

Buy suitable things. If you are going to live in a suburb or the country, concentrate on sports clothes, sturdy but smart. If you are going to be one of a smart group in a large city you will need more formal frocks and smarter things generally than your country sisters.

Exercise Good Taste.

But whether you are the average girl marrying an average salaried husband, or an average girl marrying a millionaire, exercise good taste. Stick to one or two colors and have all elements in harmony.

This list of lingerie and accessories may be enlarged or cut down, according to individual needs: Six nightgowns, six underwear sets (for daytime wear), three underwear sets (for evening wear), six pair hose for daytime wear, six pair sheer hose for evening, three pair woolen or sports hose, one pair street shoes, two pair afternoon shoes, one pair sports shoes, evening slippers to match gowns, six pair tan or beige suede gloves (washable), two pair white kid for formal afternoon wear, one pair long white kid for evening wear, two dozen handkerchiefs, two daytime bags to match costumes, and one evening bag (carried with all gowns).

These articles might be ample for the spring or early summer bride whose trousseau need is for summer clothing: One coat for all occasions, one ensemble for street wear, two crêpe or chiffon dresses, two frocks in pastel colors, two simple wash dresses, three street hats, one afternoon hat, three evening dresses, one evening coat (not elaborate), and two negligees.

The bride who is going to keep house should try to have three or four attractive house dresses or smocks, two or three tea aprons, and at least one coverall apron for work in the kitchen.

Necessary Linens.

Now for linens. It is extremely difficult to compile a trousseau list of linens that would serve as a standard, because young people have such varying kinds of establishments. We have talked to young marrieds, have haunted the shops, and have observed our own self. We offer this list as being a fairly useful one, with the understanding, of course, that it may be enlarged or cut down.

The list names: One dozen bath towels, two dozen hand towels, one dozen guest towels, three bath mats, one dozen wash cloths, one large dinner tablecloth, one dozen large dinner napkins, two medium sized tablecloths, two dozen napkins, two breakfast sets, two luncheon sets, linen runner, lace runner, one dozen small napkins (tea or cocktail), tray cloths, silencing cloth, mats (to put under hot dishes), bureau covers, and table covers.

Kitchen needs include: One dozen glass towels, two dozen dish towels, six roller towels, one dozen dish cloths, six pot holders, three ironing sheets, cleaning cloths, and dust cloths.

Listing Every Gadget.

And here we might add that the purchases by the bride or her mother for the kitchen in the new establishment do not end with linens. The bride is expected, according to the old convention, to equip her kitchen completely. A good plan is to enlist the aid of her mother or some competent, experienced housekeeper. The necessary number and kind of pots and pans then can be properly determined. And she ought, as one bride we know did, take pad and pencil and list every little gadget in her mother's kitchen, from measuring spoon to ice pick. She can buy them all at one fell swoop or she can buy them gradually.

For each bed in the new household these things might be purchased: Three pair of sheets, one pair of blankets, one quilt, three pairs of pillow cases, eiderdown comforter, mattress cover, and counterpane.

WEDDED

MRS. RAYMOND ANGSTEN.
[Rayhuff-Richter Photo.]

MR. AND MRS. THOMAS M. McHALE of 4300 Lake Shore drive announce the marriage on April 15 of their daughter, Loretta, to Raymond Angsten, son of Mr. and Mrs. Peter J. Angsten of 6722 Newgard avenue. The bride and groom are en route to California, via Panama, for their wedding trip.

Prince Nicholas May Be Next Royalty to Wed

BUCHAREST.—(AP)—Prince Nicholas, 27 year old brother of King Carol, may be the next royalty to marry.

Succession to the Rumanian throne depends upon 9 year old Prince Michael, who reigned as king when his father returned from exile.

Michael is a strong youngster, and has easily overcome slight illnesses, but an attack of influenza during the Christmas holidays occasioned comment among the people over whom he recently ruled.

This feeling that the succession depends upon a single thread has given rise to rumors of a forthcoming betrothal of Nicholas.

The bride who has been chosen by popular fancy for Prince Nicholas is his first cousin, the Grand Duchess Kyra, daughter of the Grand Duke Cyril of Russia. Her mother is a sister of Queen Marie of Rumania.

Color was lent to the rumored betrothal when Queen Marie and Princess Ileana visited for a week at the grand duke's villa near St. Briac, Brittany.

Yet those in immediate attendance on the dowager queen denied that she had gone there to discuss a marriage between her son and niece. They explained that she was only paying her annual visit to her sister.

Next came word that Nicholas himself was going to France, and this revived the talk. But King Carol said he was sending his brother to that country on a special mission, charging him to make a close study of munitions manufacture, especially of planes and artillery.

Yet the talk will not down. It is pointed out that the brothers are devoted to each other, that Nicholas gladly gave up his place on the regency when Carol returned to take the throne from young Michael and that Nicholas has been in noticeably better spirits since this change was made.

Now...Specially Simplified Skin Care for Busy Women

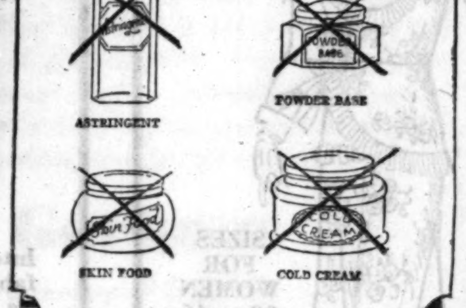
A Scientific Discovery That Condenses a Complete Professional Facial Into a Single Application, Taking Less Than 3 Minutes and Combining the 4 Fundamentals In Skin Care Urged By Foremost Experts!



Cleansing creams, skin foods, astringents and powder bases are completely eliminated—for the functions of all four are embodied in one unique creation.

BUSY women who have not time for complicated, expensive facials will welcome news of a new way in skin care.

A new scientific discovery now condenses complete skin care into a single, 3-minute home application.

Right in your own home—whenever and as often as you please—you can give yourself a complete professional facial, embodying the 4 fundamentals on which beauty specialists insist.

No more cold creams, no skin foods, lotions or astringents, and yet no more trouble than to use an ordinary cleansing cream.

Blackheads, enlarged pores, premature age lines and wrinkles go away and stay away. Every application acts directly on these conditions, which so stubbornly resist old-time methods.

Each day thousands of women are adopting this new way in skin care. Many experts predict it will soon displace all previous methods.

What It Is

It is called Lady Esther Four-Purpose Cream. And it marks the application of totally new principles in skin care as defined by the most recent scientific findings of ablest specialists in the field of beauty culture.

Each application has four distinct actions on the skin.

Cleansing action that cleanses the pores. And thus ends the use of an ordinary cleansing cream.

Tissue stimulating action that invigorates the deep tissues of the skin. And thus that ends the use of a special "Skin Food."

Astringent action that eradicates worry, strain and premature age lines, refines pores. And thus that makes the use of youth creams and astringents a folly.

Softening action that forms a perfect base for powder. And thus banishes the need of a powder base.

Those 4 things it does. Age lines soon go under this daily care. Flabby tissues strengthen and become firm. The skin is kept clean—for the astringent action of this cream closes the pores after they've been cleaned. And thus closes them against accumulations that foster imperfections.

How To Obtain

It is on sale under the name of Lady Esther at all drug and department stores at 50 cents and $1.25 a jar. The $1.25 size contains four times the amount in the 50 cent size.

Or if you wish to avoid delay you may send the coupon below with 10 cents for a 10-day tube of this unique creation.

WHERE IT'S SUMMERTIME ALL THE YEAR ROUND

East Mingles with West in Old Singapore

Crossroads of Far East Is Thoroughly Modern.

By Charles Dailey.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

SINGAPORE, Straits Settlement.—No matter in which direction the tourist in the far east may be traveling he is almost certain to have some time in Singapore, for it is a cross roads. Here the round-the-world services touch, here the five foreign lines that come through Suez put in, and here also are the lines to Australia and the South seas. Here indeed the east and the west meet and mingle.

Eastward of Singapore lie the Philippines, British North Borneo, Celebes and like islands; northward is Siam, French Indo-China, Formosa, China, Manchuria, Korea and Japan; westward lie Burma, India, Ceylon and the way to Suez. Southward, as already told in this series, are the Netherlands East Indies, Australia and New Zealand.

Perennial Summer.

Signapore is cosmopolitan and highly developed, with broad, asphalted streets, with splendid buildings and ample hotels and with its avenues and parks filled with trees, the flowers of which radiate the sweetest of odors. Being only a degree or so north of the equator, it is a perennial summer. White linen or cotton clothing is essential.

Smart shops are to be noted in Singapore, as well as those of Chinese and Indian merchants, and even if one is only passing through it will be found a convenient shopping center. If one has come from the northern climes and feels the need for the "monkey jacket" in white instead of the formal dinner coat, he will discover that a tailor [Chinese] will come to his hotel and fit him out almost overnight.

In Singapore are transhipped the produce and manufactures of a tremendous Asiatic and insular area and here also are transhipped the output of many American and European factories. tI is a rubber center more than any other city in the world. It may be truthfully said that in Singapore are people of almost every race under the sun. There would seem to be even more Chinese than Malayans. Almost every language is spoken, but English will get the tourist anywhere in these parts.

Trading with America.

Businessmen or manufacturers taking a few months off with the view of looking over trade prospects soon will find that Malaya sells to the United Stataes around 45 per cent of its products, totalling about a quarter of a billion dollars annually, while Malaya buys from us around $20,000,000 annually for its own use. Our purchases are chiefly in crude rubber, while the Malayans buy chiefly our motorcars, but many sundries in addition. About two-thirds of the Malayan rubber output is taken by the United States. In volume this has decreased considerably this year in common with the trade restriction throughout the world.

America buys about half the tin output of Malaya, running into about 100,000 standard tons a year as our share. So Malaya grows richer every year, but not necessarily at the expense of Uncle Sam, who markets throughout the world his products from this raw material.

The tourist will find that Malaya is among the few free trade countries remaining in the world and for that reason much cargo breaks bulk at Singapore and is reshipped to all parts of the East Indies. The export tax on rubber and tin keep Malaya going, in addition to taxes on opium, tobacco and alcoholic liquors, as also on petroleum, but even these are small as compared with our own tariffs. Opium smoking is common in Malaya, due largely to the great Chinese population, and the result is a considerable item which keeps down the local taxation.

Where Reds Are Busy.

The visitor to the Malay states at this time will find a large number of the rubber trees untapped, but as business picks up in America, which leads in motor production, this state of affairs will undergo a change.

There is a population of 4,250,000 in Malaya and its area is about the same as that of Illinois. The Chinese number about 1,775,000 and the Malayans are about equal in numbers, while there are some 650,000 Hindus from India, who earn a better living than they would at home. The retail business is in the hands of the Chinese, who are born traders. Malaya's best foreign trade year was in 1929, when it was $240 per capita, being $525,421,419 in exports and $501,728,159 in imports.

But the average tourist, except the business man, will not be interested in the trade details and will pass by also with more or less indifference the operations of the Third Internationale in making Singapore its base in the effort to communize the East Indies, for the Reds are doing that now all over the world and are seizing the industrial depression as an occasion to preach their radical doctrines.

On a Circular Tour.

In his drives about the island on which Singapore is situated the tourist will not fail to visit the British naval base, on which work is still proceeding, though it has been slowed up as a result of the world-wide depression. While an additional appropriation of 220,000 pounds to that made in 1929 was availed of in 1930, in which year the sum of 1,000,000 pounds was used, the 1931 expenditure will be about the same as in the preceding year, for Britain realizes that Singapore is the key to the Pacific and is to make Hongkong merely a minor base. Britain simply has slowed up a bit in its pace, for it owes much to New Zealand, Australia, Hongkong, and India, all of which have contributed to the cause. The tourist will find much of interest in a drive over the mammoth project, and will have no difficulty in obtaining permission.

On the circular tour that will include the naval base the visitor will gather a splendid idea of the rubber plantations and other features of the island of Singapore, and if he is not too limited to time he will visit the Malay states proper and Siam. If his itinerary includes Burma on the way to India, this will be the case, while if the tourist's next country of visitation is French Indo-China he may continue overland northeasterly from Bangkok, the capital of Siam, visiting Angkor on his way to Saigon.

In Their Native State.

In any event, no matter what his direction from Singapore, the tourist, even if he has only two days, will wish to visit Johore Bharu, the capital and seat of the Sultan of Johore, just across the strait from the island of which Singapore is the southernmost tip. Johore is under the rule of the native sultan, Ibrahim. It is on the railway that runs to Penang and that has rail connections to Bangkok, the capital of Siam. But, being only fourteen miles from Singapore, it is a better tour by motor.

While in Singapore, even if just for the layover of a round the world or other steamer, the tourist will not fail to visit the botanical gardens, perhaps the best such in all the orient. They are on the outskirts of Singapore and splendid homes are on the slopes thereabout.

It is here that animals and birds will be found in their native state and not in cages. The monkeys are a special delight to young and old. By hundreds they inhabit the trees that line the driveways and one may feed them bananas to his heart's content. He will indeed enjoy seeing the way the successful monkey climbs up a tree and then when pursued by his less fortunate comrades hangs by his tail and swings himself from the thinnest limb and thus leaps to an adjoining tree.

Miles of Jungles.

When the visitor gets to Johore he may find that it is world famed as a gambling place of the Malays and Chinese, and the beginning of the real plantations of rubber, although Singapore island is also heavily planted. The sultan's palace, the wonderful mosque, which he may enter only after removing his shoes, and the general botanical displays in the palace garden will be well worth while.

If one is bound for Penang he will travel preferably by rail and pass through the interesting cities of Malacca, Kuala Lumpur [regarded as the most beautiful city in the Malayan peninsula], with a possible side trip to the Batu caves and on to Port Swettenham, seeing mile after mile of jungle and rubber plantations. There are good hotel accommodations at Penang, but one will leave that city for a later visit if he has time for a trip to Siam, being then so close to it.

If bound for Bangkok, the capital of Siam, one may go right on by rail from Penang, or he may take a steamer direct to Bangkok from Singapore. Although rickshas, motors, and other means of conveyance are available at Bangkok, it is the custom of the tourist to see the capital of Siam from the howdah of an elephant.

Steeped in Legend.

Siam is the only region on the peninsula that retains its independence and is under the rule of a king. The tribes that compose the Siamese came mostly from south China. Siam is old in history and steeped in legend. Its greatest period was from 1351 to 1767, and many volumes have been written on it. It was in 1767 that Bangkok was captured by the Burmese warriors. Since then it has had comparative peace.

Siam is an absolute monarchy without a constitution. Buddhism is the state religion, but all other religions are tolerated. The Siamese are great lovers of the United States, and the Rockefeller foundation is doing wonderful work in Bangkok. Siam is a land of early marriage; they are fathers at 17 and mothers at 14. Mostly trade is in the hands of the Chinese.

The costume of both sexes is simple, being known as the panung, a piece of cloth a yard wide and three yards long. This is wrapped around the waist so that it hangs down and covers the thighs. It is perhaps the only one-garment left in the world. Both men and women wear short hair. Most of the Siamese are barefooted as well as barelegged. The upper part of the body is bare, except that women now generally cover the breasts with a narrow piece of cloth. Even this is only since the coming of the Christian missionaries.

Taking to the West.

One may spend some days in Siam and then return to Penang for a brief visit and take ship to Burma and India, or, by traveling north and then east, enter French Indo-China. Or one may reverse the journey, since motor roads are available and there are railways most of the way in either direction. Whichever way the tourist may choose to travel in visiting Siam he will find it interesting and his time amply rewarded, for these primitive people are taking to the west, movies and all.

Even now Americans are taking note of Siam, for King Prajadhipok, accompanied by Queen Barnai, is in their midst.

SINGAPORE'S SMILING SALESMEN

Tropical Helmets for Paris Police

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS.—American tourists in Paris may soon have the surprise of seeing the traffic cops on duty arrayed in a dazzling white tropical helmet.

A few weeks ago, the policemen were provided with funny looking white bands to go round their caps, the idea being to make them more conspicuous in the traffic stream.

The main trouble is that, the bands being made of waxed canvas, on rainy days shoot the water in a stream down the policemen's necks.

So, following a meeting of police authorities it has been decided to try tropical helmets.

SPRING CALLS TOURISTS TO FAR-AWAY PLACES

Early Evening Is Best Time to View Sofia

City Fulfills Comic Opera Idea of Balkan Capital.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

SOFIA.—An excellent time to get you first impression of Sofia is in the early evening. Shortly after 6 o'clock the Sofians throng into their beloved Corso, their widest street, which runs from the downtown royal palace out past the ministry of foreign affairs, various legations, the Military club, and the parliament building.

The citizenry, released from work in office and school, and barracks and store, fill the yellow brick paved avenue from side to side, cheerfully choking off all traffic except an occasional hesitant street car. Gayly they mill about arm in arm, enjoying chats with friends before going home to the evening meal. Tall officers in their ankle length greatcoats, students in their visored caps, and schoolgirls in their regulation blouses and toques are sprinkled through the swarming crowd.

Twilight blurs the city's Balkan shabbiness and allows only the street lights to cast a glistening light on the neat yellow bricks of the Corso. The town at this hour pleasantly fulfills the popular western comic opera conception of a Balkan capital.

But the next day, when you have a look at the same street in daylight after getting a bit used to the town's nondescript general appearance, you will still find plenty of romantic elements. Start a little back of the Corso, alongside the Imperial hotel. At half past 9 or 10 in the morning the sound of martial music drifts around the corner and the palace guard, soberly clad but martial, clumps up the street in Russian looking uniforms, with long gray coats, knee length boots, and smart caps with the front turned arrogantly back from the visor. The snare drums are deep ones, such as you see in pictures from the Napoleonic wars. They don't rattle smartly and precisely like American drums, but boom almost like a bass drum, and the sound and cadence fits the heavy booted tread of the soldiery.

The guard has passed. You walk on towards the modest royal palace, which in the days of Turkish bondage was built for the local Turkish governor. On the corner outside the fence which incloses an old Turkish mosque, now a national museum, is a row of shoe shiners. Equipped with elaborate brass studded stands and a vast variety of brushes and polishes, they will give you the best shine in Europe for 10 levas, which is slightly more than a nickel.

No More Brick Streets.

You pass on up the cheerful yellow brick street. King Ferdinand built those streets to cover the downtown district, and they are in strange contrast to the deep black mud streets which prevail almost everywhere in the rest of the city. The bricks proved slippery in the rain, however. One day a trooper riding alongside the old king's carriage slipped on them and killed himself. The king promptly discontinued building brick streets.

Still on the yellow brick, you walk out on the square between the palace and the Union Palace hotel, which is the diplomats' favorite hostelry. The square is the one where public open air festivities usually take place. There the Bulgarians, dressed in national costume, dance their curious round dances on fête days. The square was a charming picture on the occasion of King Boris' return with his Italian bride last fall.

Following the yellow brick, you pass the palace. Across the street from it is a little park, a block in size, where blackbirds chatter more noisily than you ever heard birds chatter. A pair of great black oxen with huge twisting horns pull an iron roller smoothing and packing the walks in the park. It is the center of town, but you will see much of the traction and transportation provided by oxen, usually guided by barefooted drivers.

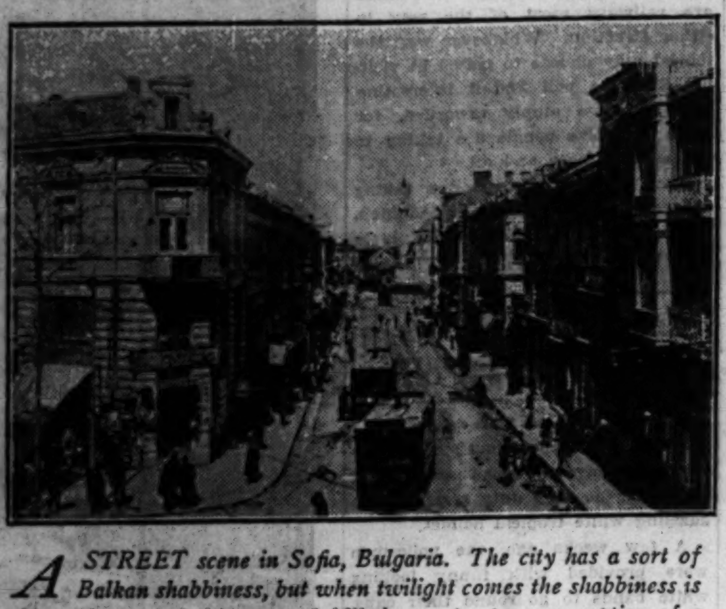
On the Pleasant Corso.

Past the palace you go and out on the pleasant Corso. You leave it for a moment to enter the charming miniature Russian church with its gilded cupolas. If you are lucky—if it happens to be 6 o'clock of a Saturday evening, for instance — you will hear chimes of a strange tinkling loveliness such as western churches never provide.

On you go up the Corso, passing foreign legations, including the new American one, the foreign ministry, the sobranja—parliament—the Army club, and the rest of Sofia's more distinguished buildings.

"MAIN STREET" IN SOFIA



A STREET scene in Sofia, Bulgaria. The city has a sort of Balkan shabbiness, but when twilight comes the shabbiness is blurred out, and the streets fulfill the comic opera conception of a Balkan capital.

Andrews Hopes to Find Adam's "Grandfather"

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal.—"Adam's grandfather," said Dr. Roy Chapman Andrews as casually as though he were talking about an old acquaintance, "Adam's grandfather lived, most likely, on the plains of eastern Mongolia." And without batting an eye: "That was about two million years ago."

The tall, lean scientist and explorer, Hubbard medalist and discoverer of the dinosaur eggs, was telling at the Palace hotel of his coming expedition to the "cradle of the human race," where he hopes to find the bones of men who antedate the cave men.

"The recent discovery of the Peking man," he continued, "by far the most important discovery in human evolution, has fanned new hopes of finding the earliest of the genus homo—the real 'missing link,' to use a popular term.

2,000,000 Years Old.

"The Peking man might figuratively be said to be the 'father' of Adam, but the man I am seeking is the 'grandfather.' There is every scientific reason to believe that primitive men existed in a period as remote as two million years ago. From the earth's strata we find that climate, topography, plant and animal life and other natural conditions were such as would support human life. Why, then, shouldn't man have existed?"

Then Dr. Andrews entered into a discussion of periods and formations, fossils and strata, in which Greek names and numbers of years jostled and tumbled about in perfectly bewildering confusion in the minds of his interviewers.

When he had gone over this explanation again it was gleaned that he believes man originated in India on the first most consistently dry, level land on earth. The first men, he believes, were plainsmen and the cave men came next. It was necessary for men at first to live the dangerous life of the plains, he thinks, in order to develop their mentalities.

Bones Hard to Find.

Fossils and bones of these men, if any still exist, are to be found in the extinct river beds, quicksands and bogs of eastern Mongolia, about 500 miles northwest of Peking, he believes.

"Man's bones were more fragile than those of the other animals and that is why it is so hard to find a trace of him," he explained. "But dinosaur eggs were found and they were more fragile than man's bones."

In conclusion Dr. Andrews pointed out that the day of the explorer who merely discovered places is past; the explorer today must be a scientist who looks into the whys and wherefores of things.

He is en route to join his party in China.

Florence Arrests "Necking" Couples

FLORENCE, Italy.—(AP)—Since the middle ages Florence has been noted for its stern moral code.

Now it has taken a new turn. Florentine police are raiding tea rooms and soda parlors, arresting young couples who display signs of affection for each other.

The boys are sent home, but the girls are held at the police station until their parents call for them.

Paris Apaches No Longer Go About in Colorful Dress

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS.—No bandits in the world, except perhaps those who used to haunt Corsica or the famous Italian bandits who held up people on the roads of Calabria in the good old days, have such a glamour of romance surrounding them as the Apaches of Paris. But at any rate they were—or are, as they still exist although they no longer dress the part—essentially Parisian and, as such, many an exciting story has been woven around them.

Since the war the famous apaches and their girls have evolved considerably. Only very few of them still wear the typical black corduroy pants with a large red flannel belt, short velvet jacket and a long peaked cap pulled down over the eyes, and these can still be seen in the cut-throat dance halls in the shadow of the Bastille monument or in the populous districts of Belleville or Menilmontant.

Even the women, who are the breadwinners for these interesting gentlemen, have adopted a more distinguished dress but still roll their stocking tops and use them as a bank account.

Since the drastic and energetic Prefect of Police Chiappe took over the difficult task of cleaning up the city, and now that huge apartment houses are being built on the fortifications which used to encircle Paris, the apaches have been forced to abandon most of their favorite haunts and to make their headquarters in populous districts.

Hawaiian Rites Fail to Lure Fire Goddess

Pele Turns Deaf Ear to Pipe and Soda Water.

By Clifford Gessler.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

KILAUEA VOLCANO, Hawaii.—Although rites known only to the oldest Hawaiians were carried out recently on the brink of the firepit of Halemaumau in the crater of the volcano Kilauea, Pele, goddess of fire, has not yet stirred up any serious activity in the dormant crater.

Wearing over her simple holoku, or Mother Hubbard gown, a lei or wreath of Hawaiian leaves and flowers, Mrs. Kaoiliokalani Pihanaokalani Maluna prepared an altar in the lava rocks near a steam crack in the floor of the crater, about 35 yards from the edge of Halemaumau.

A group of her children, grandchildren, and great-grandchildren watched her as she prepared the ancient Hawaiian offering.

Ancient, Modern Offerings.

She placed a white cloth on the rocks. Over it she laid a cloth of scarlet. On this she placed her gifts—leaves of the awa plant—from which the old Hawaiians made the narcotic brew that is more famous under its South sea name of Kava; awa stems and roots; Hawaiian tobacco, and an ornamented pipe; soda water in bottles, jelly rolls in boxes—opened.

As she reverently laid these ancient and modern offerings before the goddess she spoke softly in the Hawaiian language. The words were not audible to any except perhaps her kinsmen who stood about her. Doubtless they were not intelligible even to them. For they were in the "old" language, the highly figurative language of the departed priesthood.

"Pele Is Here."

"Pele is here," she told curious visitors. "I know she is here. You cannot see her. Fire will come. Maybe tonight, maybe tomorrow. The fire will come."

Return of live lava to the crater is desired, rather than dreaded, because an eruption of Kilauea brings visitors to the island and means increased business for many people. Eruptions of this volcano are spectacular, but seldom destructive, and not very dangerous except to unduly venturesome persons.

Mrs. Maluna is said to be more than a hundred years old and one of the few Hawaiians today able to perform the ceremonies that are thought necessary to lure the goddess back to the volcano.

Shark Invasion in Panama Keeps Bathtub Popular

PANAMA CITY.—(AP)—Wanted: A Jack the shark killer—a sort of aquatic St. George to do battle with the sharks that rob Panama and the Canal Zone of all their swimming places.

With an ocean on either side, Panama has but few places for swimming. Sharks—big, boisterous fellows that snap at you through the nets which protect coves here and there—are the reason.

Some Americans who came to the Canal Zone years ago with swimming outfits haven't unpacked them yet. Several small pools are available, but they are always crowded.

The best swimming place in the isthmus is at Fort Amador, on the Pacific side, a small cove protected by a net. But one must have a special military permit.

About the last blow fell recently when a shark was caught in the fresh waters of Gatun lake, a part of the canal. Since the canal was cut, no shark had ever been seen in Gatun lake.

This was a man eater weighing 350 pounds, and the oil tanker crew that hooked it said they sighted two more. Lock operators said it would be possible for sharks to enter by following closely behind a steamer.

Since then, bathtubs have been in high favor with the many Canal Zone residents who had been swimming in the lake daily.

New Name Booms Sausage.

RATIBOR, Germany.—(AP)—Because their German customers did not like to ask for "Polnische wurst," or "Polish sausage," butchers of this Silesian town have renamed the food "Silesian sausage," and there is a boom in it.

Float Power Stations.

ARCHANGEL, U. S. S. R.—(AP)—A lumber conference here decided to install 100 tractors in barges and use them as floating power stations for sawing and planing mills in isolated timber camps of this northern region.

TRAVEL NOTES FROM FOREIGN LANDS

Peru's History Is Filled with Tragedy, Drama

Epic of Villainy, Cunning and Courage.

By David Darrah.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LIMA, Peru.—American interest in Peru and the land of the Inca begins three-quarters of a century ago, with Prescott and Henry Meigs. The first wrote the early history of the country and the second built the first railroad in Peru and in South America. Since then we have loaned the country capital and technicians for the exploitation of its wealth.

During the recent revolutions there has been studied effort on the part of European diplomacy to implant the idea that South American disturbances were due to revolt against the European bugbear of American economic imperialism. Thus in the case of Peru when the revolution broke out last fall there were European commentators ready to explain that the trouble was all caused by aggressive American penetration seeking to establish a hegemony in South America.

Transparent Motives.

The motives of these innuendoes from Europe, it seems, are transparent even to Peruvians. The speech of the Chilean ambassador to Washington, delivered in Santiago last July, "laying the ghost of American imperialism," has led to a reëxamination of too readily accepted ideas among the intelligent classes of Peru, too. Thus you will find Dr. Enrique Echechopar exploding some of these ready-made ideas about the "Yankee Menace" in the Lima magazine called "Verticia."

Dr. Echechopar points out that the rich mining regions of Peru could not have been developed without foreign capital, since Peru had no capital of its own. Such borrowing of foreign capital, he maintains, does not mean that Peru's riches are falling into foreign hands. He sees no danger for honest foreign borrowing and asks: "Does the so-called Yankee danger really exist or is it not the creation of the imagination of a few literary persons who are anxious to launch ideas which will get a sympathetic hearing from the discontented?"

No Fear of U. S.

He adds: "To affirm that the Yankee is more inclined to abuse and unfairness than the English, French, or Russian would be an injustice and, even if there were foundation for the affirmation, we still have it in our own hands to choose the nationality of the people with whom we deal. Our dealings with the Americans are so small in proportion to the enormous other affairs of that rich nation as to make such charges ridiculous."

To those who talk of American absorption of the South American countries Dr. Echechopar replies that present American tendencies to raise big customs barriers are inconsistent with such a purpose, if it existed.

He concludes: "To those who pretend to alarm us with the Yankee danger and Yankee imperialism, let us reply that, just as we would have no fear to go to the United States and work under the power of Yankee capital, just so we do not fear that this same capital should manifest itself differently in our own territory, since there is no reason that capitalistic power should change its character when it is exercised on the line of the equator."

* *

A Romantic Story.

For four centuries the history of Peru has been shot with romance and tragedy. A tragedy of mountains and minerals. Drama of blood and gold, an epic of villany, cunning, and courage.

It begins, of course, with the homeric adventures of Francisco Pizarro. Prescott has told that story. When you stand in the Lima cathedral and view the bones of this famous conquistador, the old streets of Lima seem to be peopled with the ghosts of the Spanish adventurer and his little band who conquered Inca empire of millions.

Pizarro was not a young man; his conquest was not that of youth thirsting for adventure. He was nearly 60 when he set out from Tumbez to Cajamarca, where he treacherously captured Atahualpa. His motive was gold, tempered with religious fanaticism to Christianize the Indians.

Pizzaro was an illegitimate son of a Spanish captain; he was born at Trujillo, Spain. His adventures early took him to Panama, where in September, 1513, he was one of the band of Balboa when that famous adventurer stood on the top of Ancon hill and for the first time saw the Pacific ocean. Balboa himself had dreams of conquering the golden lands to the south, but he was beheaded through jealousy of his chief, Pedrarias, governor of Panama.

Pizarro, inspired by the achievements of Cortez in Mexico, and hearing glowing tales of the realm of gold lying along the west coast, was fired with enthusiasm. In the old city of Panama, in the early twenties of the sixteenth century, he formed a project with another soldier of fortune, Diego de Almagra, and a priest named Fernando de Luque, to conquer Peru.

Seizing an Emperor.

So wild did their schemes seem that they were called lunatics. After two unsuccessful expeditions down along the coast of Colombia in 1524 and again in 1526, Pizarro went back to Spain and had himself vested with powers by Charles V. for the conquest, freeing himself from the interference of the governor of Panama and making himself governor of the new lands he expected to conquer. On his third expedition, in January, 1531, Pizarro set forth with 180 men and twenty-seven cavaliers. He reached Tumbez again and thence marched onward to Cajamarca, where he captured the Inca emperor, Atahualpa.

It seems incredible that this small band of Spaniards could have subdued the emperor of millions of people and surrounded by thousands of his own armed soldiers. Pizarro did it by ruse. He fought no great battles as did Cortez. What he did was to take advantage of the internal struggle going on in the land of the Incas.

In that struggle Atahualpa, an illegitimate son, had just defeated and made prisoner his brother Huascar, legitimate heir to the throne. Pizarro took Huascar's side and got gold for buying reinforcements. Atahualpa invited the Spaniards to visit him at Cajamarc, noted for its thermal baths. He boasted that he did not fear the Spaniards, and came unarmed to meet them. The Spaniards were armed. When Atahualpa went to meet Pizarro, he encountered a monk carrying a cross. The monk summoned him to become a Christian and to acknowledge himself subject of the king of Spain. The Inca replied that he had no desire to be anybody's subject nor to change his religion.

"In whose name do you make such a demand?" he asked.

"In the name of this book," said the monk, holding up the Bible, which he had in his other hand.

Atahualpa caught the book and threw it to the ground. That was the signal for the attack.

A Room Full of Gold.

The Spaniards hacked the unarmed followers of the emperor to death, took Atahualpa prisoner, and captured the town. Deprived of its leader, the great Inca army retreated to the interior. To gain his release the Incan king offered his captives enough gold to fill the room in which he was imprisoned. This room was 22 by 17 feet, and he quantity he promised would, therefore, have been about 70 cubic yards of gold. He kept his word, but the Spaniards had no intention of releasing him. Two or three years later he was condemned to be burned alive, which sentence was commuted to strangling. Pizarro and his companions sang the "Credo" for the salvation of his soul while he was dying.

From Cajamarca the Spaniards marched to Cuzco, the Incan capital, which they easily took from the Incas, who, under the despotic system of their of civilization, were like so many sheep when once deprived of their leader. Four years after this Pizarro founded Lima.

His rule of the new domain, however, was not without strife. Almagro, his partner, was dissatisfied with his share of the spoils. He marched south in an effort to conquer Chile. He was defeated, retreated to Peru, and captured Cuzco, which was being held by Pizarro's brothers. For his leniency in dealing with Pizarro Almagro was afterward captured and murdered. This led to a further bloody drama which ended with the followers of Diego Almagro, son of the murdered conquistador, murdering Francisco Pizarro himself in Lima in 1541. And so ended the conqueror of Peru.

You can still see the wound in the conquistador's breast where the knife entered, as you view the mummified corpse in the first chapel to the right in the Lima cathedral.

Turmoil followed among the rival conquistadores for a period of years. This was finally settled by the priest, Pedro de la Gasca. Then for three hundred years or more forty-one viceroys ruled the entire continent from Lima, which became a fabulous city of wealth, glamour, splendor, and romance.

Freed from Spain.

These viceroys, as representatives of the king of Spain, were vested with absolute powers. They were vice patrons of the church, captain generals of the armies, and superintendents of the royal exchequer. The only institution which could question their power was the holy inquisition, which was established in Peru not long after the consolidation of the conquest.

What a picture imagination, even after three centuries, presents to the eye with the reëvocation of the arrival of one of those Spanish galleons in the port of Callao after seven or eight months' trip from Spain!

The movement for independence began in Peru at the beginning of the 19th century, but it was the last to be freed from Spanish power. It was not until July, 1821, that San Martin, who had marched up from Chile to join Bolivar and Sucre, standing on the balcony of the municipio in the Plaza de Armas, declared Spanish power forever ended in South America. And Marshal Sucre's victory three years later at Ayaucha definitely settled the emancipation of Peru and the entire continent.

The country was organized under a constitution in 1928. A year later it had a war with Colombia. Some years later Gen. Santa Cruz established the Peru-Bolivian confederation, which was to have dolorous significance for Peru half a century later. For when the war between Chile and Bolivia, called the Nitrate war, broke out, Peru intervened for Bolivia.

After four years of fighting Chile was victorious. Callao was bombarded and Lima occupied and burned, and as a result Bolivia lost Antofagasta and its outlet to the sea, and Peru lost its rich province of Tacna and Arica.

Excavate Ruins of 17th Century French Fortress

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

TRABEN-ON-THE-MOSELLE.—Two thousand five hundred voluntary workers have been busy for the past eighteen months excavating the ruins of Mont Royal, mighty stronghold of Louis XIV. of France in the Moselle valley, when the French forces invaded German territory in the latter part of the 17th century. The French were soon after forced to relinquish their conquest and the powerful bulwark crumbled to pieces.

Perched high above the Moselle valley on Traben mountain, Mont Royal commands a beautiful view of the world famous vineyards bordering the river. The fortress was built by Vauban, famous military architect of Louis XIV., in the years 1686 to 1692. In its day Mont Royal was considered the world's strongest fortress. Even in its present dilapidated state the mighty ruins of its crumbling walls and buttresses bear testimony to its former strength and power.

Besides the fortress proper miles and miles of earthworks and trenches surrounding the fortress have been laid bare.

Soviet Increases Gramophone Sale

MOSCOW.—(AP)—The soviet union is becoming "gramophone conscious."

Until last year the few machines in Russia were imported. Then the government, realizing the gramophone had its propaganda value the same as the radio, started a factory and turned out 6,000 sets.

Now plans have been laid to make 37,000 machines in 1931, and production of 25,000,000 records is another goal.

Universities of Germany Regain Pre-War Prestige

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN.—Approximately 7,000 foreign students again flocked to German universities in the year 1930, as compared to 8,000 in the year preceding the war, thus showing that German universities are rapidly regaining their prewar popularity and importance for the international point of view.

Germany is all the prouder of her science seeking visitors, because this figure of 7,000 students was reached despite the fact that the Russian visitors who formed the majority before the war are missing. Only 145 Russians studied in Germany in 1930. In the years following the war, seven out of each 100 foreign students came from soviet Russia, but in the recent years this figure decreased steadily until it reached 2.07 per 100 in 1930.

The two Americas sent 378 students to German universities in 1930, as compared to 308 in the year 1911. Asia's contingent was 993 for the same year, or double as much as before the war.

Almost 40 per cent of all foreign students in 1930 studied at the three universities, Berlin, Munich and Leipzig.
